THE frequent enquiries made for the WILSON'S MACKENZIE COLLECTION and the high prices secured for second-hand copies at auction sales, have induced the present Publishers to reprint it. The work has for a long while been quite out of print and even used-copies are scarcely met with. It is now got up in a cheaper, handy form with catch-headings on each page, and in one volume instead of two as originally published. The Index has been carefully revised and enlarged.

Opportunity has also been taken to prefix a brief outline of the life of Col. MACKENZIE, of the steps taken from time to time to catalogue his "Collection," and of the proposals for its utilization.

Should inducement offer, it is intended, at some future date, to print, as a companion volume, the late Rev. WILLIAM TAYLOR'S able reports, on the portion of the "MACKENZIE COLLECTION" transferred to the Madras Government from Calcutta alluded to at page xv.

Lt.-COL. COLIN MACKENZIE, C.B., AND THE
"MACKENZIE COLLECTION."

COLONEL COLIN MACKENZIE, the collector of the valuable manuscripts catalogued in the following pages, was a native of the island of Lewis. Little is known of his parentage, education or early life. For some time before he came to India, as we learn from the evidence given by Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, late Chief Justice of Ceylon, before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the affairs of the East India Company in 1832,* he was employed by FRANCIS, the fifth Lord of Merchiston, in searching for, and getting together, all available information respecting the knowledge possessed by the Hindus of Mathematics in general and of the nature and use of Logarithms in particular. This was done with a view to enable that nobleman to write a life of his ancestor, JOHN NAPIER, the inventor of English Logarithms; but before the work was completed, LORD MERCHISTON died. Mr. MACKENZIE, desirous of prosecuting his oriental researches in India, then applied for and, through the influence of LORD SEAFORTH, whose protégé he also was, obtained an appointment as Cadet of Engineers on the Madras Establishment of the East India Company. He came to India in 1782, just a century ago, with letters of introduction to LORD MACARTNEY, the then Governor, and to Mr. JOHNSTON, who filled an important post at Madura, the ancient seat of a Hindu College celebrated for the extent and variety of the knowledge which its members had acquired in Astronomy, Mathematics and every branch of Indian Literature.

Happily for Col MACKENZIE, Mrs JOHNSTON, daughter of his late friend and early patron and wife of the gentle man to whom he had received an introduction, was at this time herself engaged in carrying out her deceased father's intention of inditing the life of the author of Logarithms. For this purpose, she had in her employ the most distinguished Brahmins in the neighbourhood of Madura, and, wishing to avail herself of the Colonel's help also she and her husband invited him to join them at that station. He did so in 1783. Col MACKENZIE'S intercourse with the Brahmins impressed him with the idea that the most valuable materials for a history of India might be collected in different parts of the peninsula, and during his residence at Madura, he first conceived and formed the plan of making that collection which afterwards became the favorite object of his pursuit for 38 years of his life and which is now the most expensive and most valuable collection of historical documents relative to India that ever was made by any one individual in Europe or in Asia.

From 1783 to 1796, the first thirteen years of his Indian career, Col MACKENZIE was almost exclusively engaged in military and professional duties. These were troublous times when the country was just emerging from famine penury and war. As he himself states, in a letter to his friend Sir ALEX JOHNSTON, written in 1817 and quoted in the following INTRODUCTION by Professor WILSON, he was employed towards the close of the war of 1783 in the provinces of Coimbatore, and Dindigul then on Engineering duties in the provinces of Madras, Nellore and Guntur, throughout the whole of the war, from 1790 to 1792, in Mysore and in the countries ceded by the Nizam, and subsequently in Ceylon. These frequent changes and removals from province to province, from garrison to camp and from one desultory duty to another as well as the circumscribed means of a subaltern officer, prevented him giving that undeviating attention to his favourite pursuit it demanded. It was not until his return from the Ceylon expedition in 1796, that accident rather than design gave a fresh impulse to the prosecution of his purpose of collecting manuscripts and information bearing on the Literature and History of India.

Col. MACKENZIE's plans, the impediments, difficulties and discouragements he had to encounter, and the means used for prosecuting his researches with success are so fully stated, in his own words, in the INTRODUCTION that it is not necessary to refer to them here. Suffice it to note that he possessed favorable opportunities for furthering his wishes by the appointments he then held in the Survey Department. From 1796 to 1806 he was employed in the investigation of the Geography of the Deccan and in mapping the country; and on the completion of this work, he was appointed Surveyor General of Madras. In 1811, he accompanied the military expedition to Java, where also he was active in collecting manuscripts and in contributing to a journal of Transactions published by the Batavian Society. In 1817 or 1818, the Colonel was appointed Surveyor General of India.

Col. MACKENZIE left Madras to take up his appointment at Calcutta with his literary and antiquarian collections and with the principal natives employed by him in arranging and translating them, intending there, to prepare a Catalogue Raisonné of the whole and to give the translated materials such form as would facilitate their publication. The work was impeded by the death of several of his native Assistants and the illness of others. Meanwhile his friend, Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, was busy pressing on the Chairman of the Court of Directors the advantages that would accrue to Oriental History and Literature if Col. MACKENZIE were permitted to return to England on leave in order that he might, with the assistance of the savants of Europe, arrange his valuable materials. But in this, both Sir ALEX. and the Colonel were disappointed. Before the matter could be finally arranged, Col. MACKENZIE died at Bengal in 1821 in the sixty eighth year of his age, leaving untouched his Catalogue Raisonné, which advancing age, failing health, want of leisure and other impediments, prevented him from preparing.

In the course of his enquiries and during the formation of the collection, Col. MACKENZIE, however contributed from time to time several articles to the leading periodicals of the day devoted to oriental subjects. These are specified at page 8 of the INTRODUCTION, to which the reader is referred for particulars. In a literary way he also helped Col. WILKS in his History of Mysore by placing at his disposal several valuable papers on particular periods of history, written specially for his aid and information in arranging the materials for that valuable work. He also appears to have sent home to England, presumably to the Court of Directors of the East India Company, prior to his proceeding to Calcutta, seven folio volumes of materials relating to the geography and history of the country with general and provincial maps. These literary productions may seem to bear a small proportion to a whole life devoted to similar enquiries, but at all events they shew how very much valuable and interesting information may be gathered from the MACKENZIE's Manuscripts. "It was the character of Col. MACKENZIE," says Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, "to be diffident of sending anything forth to the world whilst there seemed to be any part of the subject susceptible of more complete elucidation. He was therefore chiefly employed in collecting materials for future works" rather than in prematurely arranging for publication fragmentary papers.

A very large portion of his collection was gathered together personally by Col. MACKENZIE himself during his visits on survey duty to all the most remarkable places between Cape Comorin and the Kistna in Southern India. The whole expenses incurred by that gentleman in this undertaking is vouched by Sir ALEXANDER to have amounted to upwards of 15,000£.

At the suggestion of Sir ALEX. JOHNSTON, and with the sanction of the Court of Directors, the MARQUIS OF HASTINGS, then Governor-General of India, purchased the collection on behalf of the E. I. Company from the widow of the deceased for 10,000£. The circumstances under which Professor WILSON offered to catalogue this collection, and the nature and object of his task are best learnt from his own INTRODUCTION which follows. It exhibits a luminous though brief view of the chief results of the collection and the degree in which it may be expected to illustrate the Literature, Religion and History of Southern India. His catalogue, printed at Calcutta, was published in 1828 and evidences a scholar-like pains-taking execution of the work.

A list of the collections made by Col. MACKENZIE is given at page 14. It embraces works or parts of works on Religion, History, Biography, Geography, Medicine, Literature and Science, Ancient Inscriptions, Plans, Drawings, Coins, Images and Antiquities, (vases, statues, beads, seals, rings, &c,) in no fewer than fourteen languages and sixteen different characters. A large portion of this collection,—the Sanskrit, Arabic, Persian, Javanese and Burman books with the Plans, Coins, Images, Sculptures, &c, as well as several volumes of manuscript translations were sent to England in three separate batches in 1823 and 1825 and on a subsequent date. The whole of the books and tracts in the languages of Southern India and the Inscriptions were lodged in the Madras College Library in 1828. These latter, of which a classified list is given below, were for the most part palm leaves, and many of them in duplicate and triplicate.

IN TAMIL, there were 192 manuscripts comprehending the following subjects —

Pauranic and Legendary History	44
Local History and Biography	39
Plays Tales Poems, &c, including religious and ethical compositions	72
Philology	10
Astronomy and Astrology	14
Medicine	10

Philology,	9

IN HALLA KANARA, 99 manuscripts —

Pauranic and Legendary History and Biography	48
Local History and Biography	17

Philology, Astrology, Medicine, &c.	16

In CANARA, 31 Documents of a miscellaneous character.

In MALAYALAM, 6	do.	do.
In MAHRATTA, 12	do.	do.
In URIYA or ORISSA, 23	do.	do
In HINDI, 12	do	do.

JAIN LITERATURE.—Mr. Wilson's catalogue mentions 44 MSS; but only those in the Hala Kanara and Tamil were received. They number more than one-half.

LOCAL TRACTS, 255, in number. These consist of short accounts of particular places, remarkable buildings, local traditions and particular usages, prepared in general expressly for Col. MACKENZIE by his native agents or obtained by them during their excursions. They are in Tamil, Telugu, Canarese, Mahratta, &c.

INSCRIPTIONS. These form the most laborious and, in Mr. Wilson's estimation, probably the most valuable portion of the whole collection. They are contained in 3 folio volumes and numbers upwards of 8000.

Two years later, in March 1830, the Committee of the Madras Literary Society and Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society asked Government to transfer to them the MACKENZIE Collection, then lying "in a confused and utterly useless state, in the College Library." They hoped to extract much interesting and valuable information from "this mass of papers." But, in consequence of their limited finances, they proposed to select only one or two subjects to begin with, confining attention in the first instance to the Jain Literature and the Inscriptions in general. This idea of utilizing the manuscripts originated with one of Col. MACKENZIE's Pandits, C. VENCATA LUHMIAH, who offered to continue the prosecution of his master's unfinished researches, and to examine and arrange such papers as were collected by him.* The Government accorded their sanction to the Literary Society's arrangement; but there is nothing to shew that it was followed with any practical results. Some few articles based on these MSS. occasionally appeared in the Madras Journal of Literature and Science; but they do not seem to have had any connection with the plans and designs of that learned body.

Meanwhile, in England, Captain HARKNESS, Secretary to the Royal Asiatic Society, undertook to translate and digest a portion of the manuscripts sent to the East India House; and M. JACQUET of Paris expressed his intention to include in his Corpus Inscriptiorium, upon which he was then busily engaged, all the Inscriptions belonging to the MACKENZIE's Collection †.

Col. MARK WILKS was largely indebted to the MACKENZIE Collection for authentic information which he found useful in preparing his History of Mysore for the Press. Several of the earlier chapters of his work were chiefly compiled from materials placed at his disposal by Col. MACKENZIE. This he gracefully acknowledges in his preface to the book and bears unqualified testimony to the high value of the collection as embracing "all that is necessary to illustrate the antiquities, the civil, military and religious institutions and ancient history of Southern India." To the "grants" and Inscriptions Col. WILKS refers as ancient documents of a singularly curious texture, almost always fixing the chronology and frequently unfolding the genealogy and military history of the donor.

* Letter from Secretary, Asiatic Department, M. L. S. and A. R. A. Society to Government, dated 9th March, 1830.

and of his ancestors with all that is remarkable in their civil institutions or religious reforms.

For six years more the Madras portion of the Manuscripts remained unutilized in the archives of the Madras Literary Society as it had previously in the College Library. In June 1836, Pandit C. VENOATA LUCHMIAH again revived the subject of his being permitted to continue Col. MACKENZIE's researches throughout this Presidency with the aid of Government. His offer was submitted by the Madras Government to the Supreme Government, now designated the Government of India; and that authority referred it for the opinion of the Calcutta Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society. The Committee of Papers of that Association intimated that they had no faith in LUCHMIAH's pretensions or qualifications for the work, and strongly urged the propriety of securing the services of the Rev: WILLIAM TAYLOR,* an oriental scholar of some note, since deceased, "for the thorough examination of the MACKENZIE records." They also recommended the publication of such papers as "he might select as the most valuable either in the elucidation of History or Native Science, Philosophy, Religion, Customs, &c." Mr. TAYLOR having expressed his willingness to undertake the work, was granted by Government an allowance of Rs. 400 per mensem for 18 months as remuneration to himself and for the maintenance of a small establishment of Assistants.

Mr. TAYLOR commenced his undertaking in about July 1837 and completed it in September 1838. The results of his labors were published from time to time in a highly interesting series of five Analytical Reports, in the Madras Journal of Literature and Science, vols 7 to 10. On examination, Mr TAYLOR found that some papers and portions of papers were irrecoverably lost, either by fading of the ink or destruction of materials by insects, and that others were in an advanced stage of decay while some few were cut out and taken away in whole or in part *. So far as possible he commenced the work of restoration at his own cost by having what could be transcribed on royal demy writing paper, and handsomely bound in five folio volumes. One main object of the examination and collation of the MACKENZIE Manuscripts was to ascertain their precise nature and value in throwing light on oriental history, literature, mythology, fiction and romance, and to select for translation and publication the more important papers. No action appears to have been taken on these reports, and the MACKENZIE Manuscripts were again allowed to lapse into obscurity, a neglect which, considering the vast store of curious and interesting matter they were known to contain, reflects discredit on the learned Society that promised to apply their "whole resources" in utilizing them, and on a Government that had spent a lakh of rupees in purchasing a mass of records that were once deemed an object of high and national importance.

In 1858, or 20 years later, the "MACKENZIE Collections" again came before the public in connection with the "East India House" and "BROWNE'S Manuscripts," the collection having been meanwhile, in 1847, retransferred to the "College Library." It then formed the third volume of A Catalogue Raisonné of Oriental Manuscripts in the Library of the (late) College, Fort St. George, in charge of the Board of Examiners, by the Rev. WILLIAM TAYLOR." This catalogue was prepared under the orders of the Government of Madras and with the sanction of the Court of Directors of the E. I. Company. It contains a classified and a fuller epitome of the collection than that originally prepared by Mr. TAYLOR, and is valuable as shewing the materials available for utilization.

Mr. WALTER ELLIOT, late a member of the Madras Government, on this occasion renewed the proposal for the collation, translation and printing of those papers that might be deemed worthy of such distinction; but the Court of Directors directed that no steps should be taken to this end without a reference to them. Since then the Government of India has passed from the E. I. Company to Her Majesty the Queen Empress, and after the lapse of about half a century, the question, how shall this magnificent collection be turned to the best account, still remains unsolved. Northern India has its "Bibliotheca Indica"; but the literature of Southern India, containing a mine hitherto almost unexplored out of India and affording ample material for speculation and research by the literati of Europe, remains unnoticed. The old authors, whose writings are more curious than useful, do not perhaps suit the matter-of-fact tastes and habits of the present generation, yet still the utilization of a collection of such considerable value and extent as the Government Oriental Manuscripts, is well worthy the patronage of a liberal and enlightened Government. The subject of ancient manuscripts is now again attracting the attention of the authorities, and it is possible that in connection with this movement, something may be done to rescue from oblivion a collection calculated to throw much light on historical researches relating to India.

The Mackenzie Collection is now incorporated in the Government Oriental Manuscripts Library, of which Dr GUSTAV OPPERT, the Professor of Sanskrit at the Presidency College, is the Curator. The whole collection, which was formerly lying about on wooden benches in the open air and even exposed to the danger of being stolen, has, by Professor OPPERT, been arranged and deposited in 20 teakwood glass cases. The whole collection amounts to about 8000 MSS., but the number of works is larger, as in one cadgan book there are often many different writings. The Library is now open to the public on all week days, and is much consulted especially by native scholars.

A fuller and more complete sketch of Col MACKENZIE's literary life and labors will be found in a biographical notice contributed by Sir Alex JOHNSTON to the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, London, vol I, p 333, which was extracted into the Madras Journal of Literature and Science, vol II, pp 262 and 354. "Men whom India has Known" has also an interesting notice of the Colonel.

INTRODUCTION

SEVERAL years have elapsed since the attention of oriental enquirers was attracted to the existence of an extensive Collection of literary materials, relating to the Antiquities of the South of India, accumulated by Col Cohn Mackenzie, the Surveyor-General of India, then recently deceased. An account of that Collection is now submitted to the Public. Before proceeding however to particularise the details, it may facilitate an appreciation of their value, to advert to the circumstances under which the materials were collected, and those which have led to their present description, the different divisions under which they have been arranged, and the light which they reflect upon the Languages and Literature, and the Religious and Political Revolutions of the South of India.

A Letter addressed by Col Mackenzie to Sir Alexander Johnston in 1817, conveys an authentic view of the motives which led him to form the Collection, and the means which enabled him to prosecute his researches with success. His own words will best be employed to explain as much as is necessary to our purpose. They give also a not uninteresting outline of the Colonel's Indian Career.

"The first thirteen years of my life in India, may be fairly considered as of little moment to the objects pursued latterly in collecting observations and notices of Hindoo manners, of Geography, and of History, with every attachment to this pursuit, to which my attention was directed before I left England, and not devoid of opportunities in India, yet the circumscribed means of a Subaltern Officer, a limited knowledge of men in power or office, and the necessity of prompt attention to military and professional duties, could not admit of that undeviating attention, which is so necessary to the success of any pursuit, at all times, much more so to what must be extracted from the various languages, dialects and characters of the Peninsula of India

" In particular, a knowledge of the native languages, so essentially requisite, could never be regularly cultivated, in consequence of the frequent changes and removals from province to province, from garrison to camp, and from one desultory duty to another. Those encouragements to study the languages of the vast countries, that have come under our domination since my arrival in India, were reserved for more happy times and for those, who are more fortunate in having leisure for their cultivation, from the evils of famine, penury and war, the land was then slowly emerging, and long struggling under the miseries of bad management, before the immediate administration of the South came under the benign influence of the British Government

" In the whole of this period, in which I have marched or wandered, over most of the provinces south of the Kisina, I look back with regret to objects now known to exist, that could have been then examined, and to traces of customs and of institutions that could have been explained, had time or means admitted of the enquiry

" It was only after my return from the expedition to Ceylon in 1796, that accident rather than design, though ever searching for lights that were denied to my situation, threw in my way, those means that I have since unceasingly pursued (not without some success I hope) of penetrating beyond the common surface of the Antiquities, the History and the Institutions of the south of India

" The connexion then formed with one person, a native and a Bramin,* was the first step of my introduction into the portal

* The lamented C V Boris, a Bramin, then almost a youth, of the quickest genius and disposition, possessing that conciliatory turn of mind that soon reconciled all sects and all tribes to the course of enquiry, followed with these surveys. After seven years' service he was suddenly taken off from these labours, but not before he had formed his younger brother and several other useful persons, of all castes Bramin, Jain and Malabars, to the investigations that have since been satisfactorily followed of Indian knowledge, devoid of any knowledge of the languages myself, I owe to the happy genius of this individual, the encouragement and the means of obtaining what I so long sought. In the following papers you will observe fifteen different dialects, and twenty-four characters were necessary for this purpose. On the reduction of Seringapatam, in 1799, not one of our people could translate from the Canarese alone. At present we have these translations made not only from the modern characters, but the more obscure and almost obsolete characters of the Sansanums (or Inscriptions) in Canarese and in Tamil, besides what have been done from the Sanscrit, of which in my first years in India, I could scarcely obtain any information. From the moment the talents of the lamented Boria were applied, a new avenue to Hindoo knowledge was opened, and though I was deprived of him at an early age, his example and instructions were so happily followed up by his brethren and disciples, that an establishment was gradually formed, by which the whole of our provinces might be gradually analyzed on the method thus fortuitously begun and successfully followed so far. Of the claims of these individuals and the superior merits of some, a special representation has laid before this government since 26th September last unanswered. How they are to be disposed of on my departure for Bengal is still in doubt. The attachment existing, and increased in 18 to 20 years, leaves me no room to doubt but some will adhere to my fortune, but it is to be confessed it is at some hazard again exchanging a state of moderate comfort with their families for a state of dependance in a distant country, and this uncertainty of an adequate provision for these useful people renders my situation at present more uncomfortable than I wish to say.

"For these thirteen years, therefore, there is little to shew besides the Journal and Notes of an Officer employed in all the campaigns of the time, first towards the close of the war of 1783 in the provinces of Coimbatore and Dindigul, and afterwards in professional duties in the provinces of Madras, Nellore and Gantoor, throughout the whole of the war from 1790 to 1792 in Mysore, and in the countries ceded to the Nizam by the peace of 1792, and from that period engaged in the first attempts to methodize and embody the geography of the Deccan, attempts that were unfortunately thwarted or impeded by measures not necessary here to detail, the voyage and campaign in Ceylon may be noticed as introductory to part of what followed, on my return to resume the geography of Deccan.

"Some voluntary efforts for these purposes, had at last excited the notice of a few friends in the field in the campaigns in Mysore, too partial perhaps to my slender talents and ardor for the pursuit, and in 1792 after the peace of Seringapatam, I was sent a subaltern from the army in Mysore, by the desire of the late revered Lord Cornwallis, with the small detachment at first employed in the Nizam's dominions for the purpose of acquiring some information of the geography of these countries, and of the relative boundaries of the several States, then assuming a new form and new limits.

"From 1792 to 1799, it were tedious to relate the difficulties, the accidents and the discouragement that impeded the progress of this design. The slender means allotted from the necessity of a rigid, no doubt just, economy, the doubts and the hindrance ever attendant on new attempts, difficulties arising from the nature of the climate of the country, of the government, from conflicting interests, and passions and prejudices difficult to contend with, and unpleasant to recollect.

"In the year 1796, a general Map of the Nizam's dominions was submitted to Government for the first time, compiled and digested from various materials of various authority described in a Memoir that accompanied, and designed rather as a specimen for future corrections, and showing what was wanting as much as what was done. It had however the use of bringing the subject to one point of view, further enquiry improved its supplements in 1798 and 99, and some encouragement was then held forth that induced perseverance, tho' little effectual assistance was given. My removal* from any share in the direction of

* I like least to apply a remedy and too painful to refer to original documents to show it with most public spirited plans. The reasons may be well and fairly stated most absurd and unfair to the interests of the public and of each other so this might be produced as an additional

the Deckan surveys in 1806, put a stop to the further improvement of this Map, yet the subject has not been neglected and it is hoped may one day be resumed on the revival of the materials since collected, though on a more circumscribed scale than what was once intended

" In returning to Hyderabad in 1798, for the third time, to resume the investigation of Deckan Geography, measures were proposed, and in part methodized for analyzing the whole Deckan, and before 1799, considerable help was attained by obtaining a copy of the regular official Duster of the Deckan in its provincial and even minister divisions which has been since translated from the Persian, as well as certain MSS of authority which were proposed as the base of the Plan to be followed in the enquiry and description. The Deckan was in fact then terra incognita of which no authentic evidence existed, excepting in some uncertain notices and mutilated sketches of the marches of Bassy, and in the travels of Tavernier and Thevenot, which convey but little satisfaction* to the philosophical accuracy of modern times

" This plan in its bud was nearly overset by the new war with Tippoo, it may be satisfactory however to know that the attempts then made were not without use both in a military light, (as described more fully in official reports) and in anticipating measures that have since been or may be still advantageously followed in arranging the History, Antiquities and Statistics of that interesting country

" After the reduction of Mysore in 1799, and in the arrangements that followed, I was employed in assisting the Commis-instance of the erroneous measures in those times. All that had been intended and partly executed by the measures encouraged in the Government of Lord Cornwallis and Wellesley was nearly overset, and almost lost sight of ever since and though our arms now occupy positions in the most distant parts of the Deckan no systematic plan is yet adopted for concentrating the results and combinations of our marches and expensive surveys in that country into a more correct General Map.

sioners with geographical information, to promote the arrangement and a knowledge of the limits of the subject of the partition. On my return to Madras the Governor General, the Earl of Mornington, being justly of opinion, that a more complete knowledge of these countries was indispensably necessary for the information of Government, was pleased in the handsomest manner, without solicitation or any personal knowledge, to appoint me to survey Mysore, assisted by an establishment suited rather to an economical scale of expenditure than to so extensive an undertaking, but to be carried through a country yet so little known, that the position of some of the provinces ceded by the treaty of partition could not be ascertained till this survey was advanced under peculiar circumstances of embarrassment. For instance—Holall ceded to the Marattas, Goodicotta on the N W of Chitteldroog mistaken for a small Fort North of Colar on the east of Mysore, and many other instances, whence some knowledge of the country rendered a survey indispensable.

"Consonant to my original ideas, I considered this occasion favorable for arranging a plan of survey embracing the statistics and history of the country as well as of its geography, and submitted a plan for this purpose which was approved of by this Government. Three assistants, and a naturalist were then for the first time attached to me, yet this moderate establishment was immediately after disapproved of in England, and a design that originated in the most enlightened principle, was nearly crushed by the rigorous application of orders too hastily issued and received in India in the end of 1801, when I had, at very considerable hazard of my health, just completed the survey of the northern and eastern frontier of Mysore.

"How far the idea suggested was fulfilled it is not for me to say, from adverse circumstances one part was nearly defeated, and the Natural History was never analyzed in the manner I proposed and expected in concert with the survey, the suspense I was placed in from the reduction of the slender stipend allotted to myself, both for salary and to provide for increasing contingencies, was not only sufficiently mortifying, but was aggravated by the overthrow of the establishment first arranged for the work, while other branches* were favored, in the application of the Director's orders. The effects of these measures on the public mind and even on my assistants, contributed to paralyze every effort for its completion, but notwithstanding these difficulties the success attending the first researches, and a conviction of its utility induced me to persevere till 1807. The geography of the province of Mysore was literally completed in the minutest degree of 40,000 square miles of territory, considerable materials were acquired of its statistics and of its history, and the basis laid for obtaining that of the Peninsula on a plan undeviatingly followed up ever since.

"Much of the materials collected on this occasion were transmitted home in 7 folio volumes with general and provincial Maps, but it is proper to observe that still more considerable materials for the history of the south are in reserve, not literally belonging to the Mysore survey, though springing from the same."

"It is also proper to notice that in the course of these investigations, and notwithstanding the embarrassments of this work, the first lights were thrown on the history of the country below the Ghats, which have been since enlarged by materials constantly increasing, and confirming the information acquired in the upper country. Among various interesting subjects may be mentioned,

2 The ancient different sects of religion in this country and their subdivisions, the Langavanti, the Sarvam, Pandarum, Muttis, &c., &c.

3 The nature and use of the Sassanum and inscriptions on stone and copper, and their utility in throwing light on the important subject of Hindu tenures, confirmed by upwards of 3,000 authentic inscriptions, collected since 1800.

* In the Regulations of Survey of October 1810 no less than 20 Military Officers were attached to the Quarter Master General exclusive of the Military Institution and the establishment of Native Surveyors under the Revenue Department. The results arising from those Departments compared with that of the Mysore survey, would afford the most just means of judging of the utility of either of the works.

4 The design and nature of the monumental stones and trophies found in various parts of the country from Cape Comorin to Delhi, called Veeracul and Maastis cul, which illustrate the ancient customs of the early inhabitants and perhaps of the early western nations

5 The sepulchral Tumuli, Mounds and Barrows of the early tribes, similar to those found throughout the continent of Asia and of Europe, illustrated by drawings, and various other notices of antiquities and institutions”

It may be here observed that the results of a few of these enquiries were from time to time communicated to the public, and in the interval described, the following papers from the pen of Col Mackenzie were printed

Of these, the papers relating to the Jains were the most novel and important, and first brought to notice the existence of a Sect, which is very extensively dispersed throughout India, and includes a considerable portion of its most respectable and opulent natives

After the conclusion of the Mysore survey, Col. Mackenzie was appointed Surveyor-General at Madras, but had scarcely time to take charge of his office, when he was called away to accompany the expedition to Java in 1811. After the military objects of the expedition had been effected, his attention was directed to his favorite pursuits, and many books and documents were collected. He also took a lively interest in the Batavian Society, and contributed some valuable notices to the pages of its Transaction. A Journal of a visit to the Ruins at Brambanan has been thence transferred to a London journal. Colonel Mackenzie advertises also in the letter to Sir A. Johnston to detailed reports submitted by him to the Governments of India, copies of which have not been found amongst his papers, nor, as he observes, were they placed upon record at the Bengal Presidency.

After resuming charge of the office of Surveyor-General at Madras in 1815, Col. Mackenzie was enabled to superintend for a short time the continuance of a survey of the Ceded Districts, instituted upon his recommendation in 1809, and prosecuted upon the same plan as that of Mysore—adding an extent of 30,000 square miles to the 40,000 previously laid down. The results of these surveys have been published in Arrowsmith's Atlas of the South of India. The collection of books, papers and inscriptions went hand in hand with the survey—nor was this part of the Peninsula the only field from which similar gleanings were made—they were collected throughout the whole of the Provinces subject to the Presidency of Fort St. George by natives trained for the purpose. These operations were not of much longer continuance, for shortly after his return, Col. Mackenzie was appointed Surveyor-General of all India, and quitted Madras for Calcutta. His literary and antiquarian collections were brought round from the former Presidency, and the principal natives employed in arranging and translating them came also to Calcutta. Colonel Mackenzie's intentions in consequence, are thus explained in the letter which has been quoted.

"I will only further just notice the effect of this removal on the enquiries and Collection here described. The people reared by me for several years, being natives of the coast or the southern provinces, and almost as great strangers to Bengal and Hindoostan as Europeans, their removal to Calcutta is either impracticable, or where a few, from personal attachment (as my head Brahmin, Jain translator and others) are willing to give this last proof of their fidelity, attended with considerable expense, and without that assistance, most of what I had proposed to condense and translate from the originals in the languages of this country, could not be conveniently or at all, effected at Calcutta.

"I mean however to attempt it, and hope in this stage, preparatory to my return to Europe to effect a condensed view of the whole Collection, a Catalogue Raisonné of the native manuscripts and books, &c, and to give the translated materials such form, as may facilitate the production of some parts should they ever appear to the public, at least by persons better qualified, if the grateful task be not permitted to my years or to my state of health."

The attempt thus announced was never made. Much delay was necessarily occasioned by the change of residence and charge of a new office. Several of the natives died, and the survivors were rendered ineffective by sickness. The purposes of Col Mackenzie were finally disappointed by his indisposition and death in 1821.

The preceding observations will afford a general notion of the manner in which the Collections of Col Mackenzie were accumulated.

Through a considerable part of his career he may be said to have collected them in person, visiting in the course of his surveying operations almost all the remarkable places between the Krishna and Cape Comorin, and being accompanied in his journeys by his native assistants, who were employed to take copies of all inscriptions, and obtain from the Brahmans of the temples, or learned men in the towns or villages, copies of all records in their possession, or original statements of local traditions. When not himself in the field, Col Mackenzie was accustomed to detach his principal native agents into different districts to prosecute similar enquiries, furnishing during their absence either in English or in their own language to be subsequently translated, reports of their progress. Their personal expences were in general defrayed by the department to which they were attached, but all extra expenditure, and the cost of all purchases, were defrayed by Col Mackenzie himself. The outlay thus incurred probably exceeded a lac of rupees, which sum has been liberally sanctioned by the Court of Directors for the purchase of the documents.

By the means thus described a collection was formed at a considerable cost of time, labour and expence, which no individual exertions have ever before accumulated, or probably will again assemble. Its composition is of course very miscellaneous, and its value with respect to Indian history and statistics remains to be ascertained, the collector himself having done little or nothing towards a verification of its results. This indeed cannot be successfully attempted by any single individual, as a familiarity with fourteen languages and sixteen characters can scarcely be expected, from any one person. It is the more to be regretted, that Col Mackenzie did not live to execute some connected view of the principal facts his collection furnishes, whilst he commanded the aid of the agents by whom it was formed, who under his superintendence had learned to feel a lively interest in their task, who had acquired a knowledge of the leading results which it were vain to look for in any other natives, and who are now for the greater, and most valuable part, dead or dispersed.

In the absence of any account prepared by the collector, the following catalogue may be received as an attempt to convey some accurate notion of the nature of the collection, and a short view of some of the principal conclusions that may be derived from its contents. It will be necessary however in the first place to explain the circumstances under which the catalogue has been prepared, that no censure may attach to the compiler for not performing more than he has endeavoured to accomplish, or for undertaking a task to which he acknowledges he brings inferior qualifications, the languages of the South of India never having been the objects of his studies.

The officer who succeeded Col Mackenzie as Surveyor General, professing no acquaintance with the subject of Col Mackenzie's antiquarian collections, and expressing his wish to be relieved of all charge of the establishment connected with them, it became a matter of some perplexity how it should be disposed of, in contemplation of its becoming the property of the Company. As no other person in Calcutta, was inclined to take any trouble with such a collection, or perhaps so well fitted for the task, as myself, I offered my services to the Supreme Government to examine and report upon the state of the materials. The offer was accepted, and the manuscripts and other articles of the collection were transferred to my charge. I then learned that the native agents had set to work upon the Colonel's death to make short catalogues of the articles and books accumulated, and these were completed under my supervision. In the course of examining the lists as well as I could, I found them not only too concise to be satisfactory, but in many cases evidently erroneous, and altogether devoid of classification or arrangement. I therefore on submitting them to the Government suggested the necessity of a careful revision, and the advantage that might be derived from the publication of the result, which suggestions were favorably received, and the present catalogue has in consequence been prepared.

The various languages of the Peninsula being unknown to me except as far as connected with Sanscrit, I had no other mode of checking the accuracy of the natives employed in cataloguing the manuscripts, than to direct their preparation by them of detailed indices of the works in each dialect. These indices were accordingly compiled and translated, and their results again compressed into the form in which they will be found in the following pages, the accuracy being verified by such collateral information as was derivable from some of the translated papers in the collection, or from printed works of no authentic character. Although therefore some of the details may be occasionally erroneous, I have every reason to hope that the account of those books which I could not personally verify by personal, will be generally correct, and worthy of some confidence.

The collection, as here detailed, consists chiefly of Manuscripts

in the original languages, constituting what may be regarded as the literature of the South of India. The subject is hitherto almost unknown to the literature of Europe, and from its novelty if not from its importance, is likely to be thought entitled to special attention. The description of the Manuscripts constitutes therefore the body of the present publication, and that of the other articles is thrown into an Appendix. The first division of the Appendix is that of Local Tracts, short accounts in the languages of the Dekhin of particular places, remarkable buildings, local traditions, and peculiar usages prepared in general expressly for Col. Mackenzie by his native agents, or obtained by them on their excursions. A few works occur that properly belong to the literary class, but which escaped attention at the time of arranging the materials. Some of these Local Tracts will be found in an English dress amongst the translations, but the far greater portion are yet to be translated. The Local Tracts are followed by the Inscriptions the collection of which forms the most laborious, and probably the most valuable portion of the whole. Very few of them are translated, but the whole of them have been examined, and abstracted, and drawn out in a tabular form, stating the object of the inscription, the date, where found, and in whose reign or by whom inscribed. Of three folio manuscript volumes containing these abstracts, two have been prepared since the death of Col. Mackenzie.

The inscriptions are followed by a list of the translated or extracted English papers which were left bound up in volumes, at Col. Mackenzie's death, and to them succeeds a detail of similar papers, in loose sheets. The value of the latter is much diminished by the very imperfect manner in which most of them have been executed, the English being frequently as unintelligible as the original. With a very few exceptions the translations are the work of natives alone.

It is unnecessary to advert more particularly to the other articles of the Appendix, and it is sufficient to include them in the following enumeration of the contents of the collection, from which a generally correct view of its character and extent may be derived.

We shall now proceed to take a short view of the chief results of this collection, and the degree in which it may be expected to illustrate the Literature, Religion, and History, of a considerable portion of Hindostan..

LITERATURE.

The first division of the catalogue, the Books in the Sanscrit language, offers little of value. The works are for the most part such as are to be found in great abundance, and in better condition, in other parts of India, and are not recommended by rarity or local peculiarity. In general they are in very bad order, being more or less imperfect, and being rather engraved than written with an iron style upon palm leaves, a mode of writing which even when the letters are blackened by a composition of lamp black and oil is very unfavourable to prompt and easy perusal: a new manuscript of this kind presented for the first time to the most learned Pandit, is decyphered by him slowly and with pain, and the employment of such rude materials is almost as much a hindrance as a help to the dissemination of learning. Another difficulty in the way of the ready perusal of the Sanscrit books is their being written, as will have been seen in the foregoing enumeration, in thirteen different characters.

There is one division of the Sanscrit books, which is in a great degree of local origin and interest, that of the Mahatmyas, the Sthala or local Pundras, the legendary histories of celebrated temples and objects of pilgrimage, and especially of those in the Dekhin, which are exceedingly numerous. These tracts describe the circumstances under which the place originally acquired its sanctity, the period of which is almost always in some former Yuga or great age, the foundation of the first temple or shrine, the different visits paid to it by gods and heroes, its discovery and renovation in the present age, the marvels which have resulted from its worship, and the benefactions made to it by modern sovereigns. In this latter portion some genuine history is occasionally preserved. These legends are professedly sections of some of the Puranas, particularly the Brahmānda and Skanda, but this is a mere fiction, as where the entire Purana, whence they are said to be extracted exist, these sections or chapters are found to constitute no part of their contents. The Malatīya is sometimes fully as extensive as the whole Purana of which it is said to be a part, and the aggregate of those in the Mackenzie collection amounting to a hundred and twenty-two, is infinitely more considerable than that of the eighteen Puranas.

There are also amongst the Sanscrit books a few Cheritras, historical and biographical narratives of some local value. They are however of too marvellous and legendary a complexion to be of much historical importance, although they may furnish some indications of real events.

The catalogue has been classed according to the languages in which the books are written, but one exception has been made to this order, and the division subsequent to the Sanscrit manuscripts is that of the Literature of the Jains—most of these manuscripts are Sanscrit compositions, but a few are written in the dialects of the Peninsula. As forming a distinct class however it was thought better to place them under a common head.

The books thus collected are, with one or two exceptions, now for the first time offered to the enquiries of European readers. Colonel Mackenzie as has been mentioned, as the merit of originally noticing and describing the peculiar tenets of this numerous division of the natives of India, deriving his information from personal intercourse with several well informed members of their community, and visits to some of their principal shrines. The description which he published in the 9th volume of the Asiatic Researches some notices by Dr Buchanan in the same place as well as in his travels in Mysore, and the account given in the same volume of the Researches by Mr Colebrooke of the Jain teachers and some of their peculiar tenets as derivable from their own authorities, furnish the only authentic notices of a sect, which is widely spread through India particularly in the west and south. The catalogue of their books collected by Col. Mackenzie forms therefore a valuable accession to our knowledge of the Jains. The list comprises forty four different works, of which those styled Puranas are in general of great extent. The character of the legends of which they consist will be readily estimated by the specimens given, from translations found in the collection, and which sufficiently evince the late origin of the sect, in their attempt to improve upon Brahmanical exaggeration, by exaggeration infinitely more extravagant. The Puranas are attributed to Jina Sena Achārya said to be cotemporary with Tikramaditya, but some traditions identify him with Jindahārya who was the Guru or spiritual preceptor of Amoghavarsha a Jain prince in the Arcot district in the end of the ninth century, a period at which they may possibly have been compiled—other legendary collections are acknowledged to be of that or of a later date. Besides these, Jain literature comprehend a few books on Medicine, Grammar and Arithmetic, and rituals and treatises on the religious and moral obligations of the sect.

The literature of the Jains is succeeded by the catalogue of books in the Tamul language which may be considered as the most classical of the languages of the peninsula. It is the speech of that part of the south of India known as Dravira, comprising the ancient kingdoms of Chola, Chera, and Pandy, and now comprehending the districts of South Arcot, Salem, Coimbatore, Kumbakonam, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Madura, Dindigal, Tinnimelli and great part of Mysore, in all which it is spoken, according to Mr Babington, by more than five millions of people. According to that gentleman, and to the late Mr Elhs it is a language not derived from Sanscrit but of independent origin Their remarks are as follows

" It (Tamul) is not derived from any language at present in existence, and is either itself the parent of the Telugu, Mala yalam, and Canarese languages, or what is more probable, has its origin in common with these in some ancient tongue, which is now lost, or only partially preserved in its offspring

" In its more primitive words, such as the names of natural objects the verbs expressive of physical action or passion, the numerals, &c., it is quite unconnected with the Sanscrit, and what it thence so largely borrowed, when the Tamuls, by intercourse with the more enlightened people of the north, began to emerge from barbarity, has reference to the expression of moral sentiments and abstract metaphysical notions, and is chiefly to be found in the colloquial idioms. In this remarkable circumstance, and in the construction of its alphabet, the Tamul differs much from the other languages of the south, which are found to admit the Sanscrit more largely in literary and poetical compositions than in the ordinary dialect of conversation, and which adopt the arrangement of the Sanscrit alphabet with scarcely any variation. The higher dialect of the Tamul on the contrary is almost entirely free from Sanscrit words and idioms, and the language retains an alphabet which tradition affirms to have heretofore consisted of but sixteen letters, and which so far from resembling the very perfect alphabet of the Sanscrit, wants nearly half its characters, and has several letters of peculiar powers

" Neither the Tamul, the Telugu nor any of their cognate dialects are derivations from the Sanscrit. The latter, however it may contribute to their polish, is not necessary to their existence, and they form a distinct family of languages with which the Sanscrit has in later times especially intermixed, but with which it has no radical connexion

" The members constituting the family of languages which may be appropriately called the dialects of Southern India are the high and low Tamul, the Telugu grammatical and vulgar, Carnataca or Cannadi ancient and modern, Malayalma or Ma-layalam, which, after Paulinus a Bartholomeo, may be divided into Sanscrit (Grandonico Malabarica) and common Malayalam, though the former differs from the latter only in introducing Sanscrit terms and forms, in unrestrained profusion, and the Tuluva, the native speech of that part of the country to which in our maps the name of Canara is confined.

"Besides these, there are a few other local dialects of the same derivation, such as the Codugu, a variation of the Tuluva spoken in the district of that name called by us Coorg. The Cingalese, Maharashtra and the Oddyas, also, though not of the same stock, borrow many of their words and idioms from these tongues. A certain intercommunication of language may indeed always be expected from neighbouring nations however dissimilar in origin, but it is extraordinary that the uncivilised races of the north of India should in this respect bear any resemblance to the Hindus of the south; it is nevertheless the fact, that, if not of the same radical derivation, the language of the moolamveers of Rajmahal abounds in terms common to the Tamul and Telugu."

The opinions of such competent authorities, cannot be contested, and it must be admitted therefore that the base of the Tamul language has an independent origin. It is also evident from the character of its literature, as shown in the catalogue, as well as from tradition, that it has been independently cultivated under unusual patronage, and has boasted of its own college, established by regal authority at Madura, and a number of able writers from every class of the population.

The tract from which Mr. Ellis's sentiments are cited, is one of three treatises it was his intention to prepare on the Tamul, Telugu, and Malayalam languages. The first, if ever completed has not come to hand, and it is from the second that the passage is extracted *. There still remains therefore much to be explained regarding the history of the Tamul language, and particularly how it happens, that the names of places of note, cities, mountains, rivers, temples, and shrines are Sanscrit, and have been so apparently from a period prior to the Christian era. Cape Comorin or Comari, Madura, the Kaberis or Kateri River, the Malaya mountains or Malaylayam and a variety of places in the Peninsula, having been known to the ancients, as they are to the moderns, by appellations of Sanscrit origin. The Tamil language must have been but little cultivated, the districts must have been indifferently civilised, if the natural features of the country had no distinguishing denominations, until the Brahmans or Brahmanical Hindus immigrated from the north, a political event which is recognised by all the traditions of the south of India.

Although therefore we must grant that the Tamil language had an independent origin, we can scarcely suppose with Mr. Ellis that it had an independent literature, prior to the introduction of Sanscrit. Mr. Ellis states that in the Tamil countries there has ever been a contention for pre-eminence of knowledge between the Brahmins and the inferior castes. "When the former established themselves in Southern India they found a native literature already existing, which, though they introduced the language and science of the north, they were compelled during their long contest with the Jains, to cultivate in their own defence." But Sanscrit was less the language of science, than religion, and that the religion of the Peninsula was Hindu, and even sectarian or Siva at the commencement of the Christian dissemination of Sanscrit literature. This view of the case would coincide with that already taken of the early rudeness of Tamul, and is warranted by the traditions that relate to the Madura College, and the character of Tamul literature, as it appears from the catalogue. The College was founded it is said by Vama-sekhara Pandya Rajah of Madura, for the cultivation of Tamul, and this prince was long subsequent to the prevalence of the Saria faith, at least according to the same authorities. The legend also asserts that the professors were compelled to admit the Tamul writer named Teruvalluar into their ranks, and according to Dr. John, his reputed sister Ayyar, the moral poetess flourished in the ninth century. Another very eminent Tamul writer Kamban, wrote at the close of the same century, in which, therefore, we may infer the language was most widely and successfully cultivated.

On referring to the list of Tamul books it will be found, that they furnish undeniable proofs of their having been written subsequently to the great body of Sanscrit composition, as they are in fact nothing but translations from Sanscrit. Thus the great work of Kamban is the translation of the Rāmadyana. We have also a translation of a great part of the Mahābhārat and in the Mahātmya, in which Tamul next to Sanscrit abounds, we have numerous legends translated from the Purānas. Many of the poetical and narrative works are translations from the classical dialect. We might also infer the later date, of such Tamul literature as is original, from its being the work in a great measure of Sūdras and of Jains, as if it had been part of an attempt to oppose and overthrow the predominance of the Brahmans, to whose priority, therefore it bears witness.

That part of Tamul literature which is original, consists chiefly of histories more or less legendary of the Chola, Punīlya and Chera countries, of moral and didactic poems, and of treatises on Philology and Medicine, of the former some are very recent compilations having been prepared for the use of Col. Mackenzie, but others are of reputed antiquity, and the Punīlya Itajalal is ascribed to Naralira, Euna, and Kapila, three of the original professors of the Madura College. The moral poems form a curious and interesting division, as being the works of persons of the lowest caste, or Pariars, and yet enjoying the highest estimation. One of the authors, Avyar, a female, has been made known to European readers by the translation of several short didactic works by her, in the seventh volume of the Asiatic Researches. In the following pages will be found an extensive extract from an unfinished translation by the late Mr. Ellis of a celebrated poem of the class, the Koral of Teruvalluvar.

The father of Tamul Grammar and Medicine is said to be the Saint Agastya, who indeed is reputed to have invented the Tamul language. His Grammar is lost and the Medical works attributed to him are of very doubtful authenticity, but the tradition, coupled with the uniform assertions of Brahmanical works, as the Pāmayana, and the Sīlānda Purāna, and others, that Agastya took up his residence far to the south, renders it very probable that this Saint was instrumental in introducing letters if not religion, amongst the tribes of Dravira. The substance of his grammar is said to exist in that of his pupil, Tolghappiam, but the work is scarcely intelligible from its brevity and obscurity. In fact almost all the classical writings have ceased to be intelligible to the generality of the people and the language of Dravira is distinguished into the Sēn and Kedan, or high and low Tamul, the latter being that in ordinary use. Both these dialects have been cultivated by European writers, and a grammar of each was composed by the celebrated Missionary Beschi. A new edition of his grammar of the common dialect was republished by the College of Madras, as well as a translation by Mr. Babington of his grammar of the Sēn Tamul, and a Tamul and English Grammar has been published in England by Mr. Anderson of the Madras Civil Service. Some Manuscript Dictionaries exist, but none have yet been printed.

The next division of the catalogue consists of manuscripts in the Telugu language, which are scarcely less numerous than those in Tamul, as might be expected from the extent of country in which the dialect is spoken. The limits of its use are thus defined by Mr. Campbell.

"The language is commonly, but improperly, termed by Europeans the Gentoo. It is the Andhra of Sanscrit authors, and, in the country where it is spoken, is known by the name of the Trilinga, Telingu, Telugu, or Tenugu.

"This language is the vernacular dialect of the Hindoos, inhabiting that part of the Indian Peninsula, which, extending from the Dutch settlement of Pulicat on the coast of Coromandel, inland to the vicinity of Bangalore, stretches northwards, along the coast as far as Chicacole, and in the interior to the sources of the Tapti, bounded on the east by the Bay of Bengal, and on the west by an irregular line, passing through the western districts belonging to the Subahadar of the Deccan, and cutting off the most eastern provinces of the new state of Mysore, a tract including the five northern circars of Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Rajahmundry, Masulipatam, and Gootoor, the greater portion of the Nizam's extensive territories, districts of Cuddapah and Bellary ceded by him to the British, the eastern provinces of Mysore, and the northern portion of the Carnatic nor is this language unknown in the more southern parts of India, for the descendants of these Telugu families which were deputed by the Kings of Vidyanigara to controul their southern conquests, or which occasionally emigrated from Telingana to avoid famine or oppression, are scattered all over the Draura and Carnataka provinces, and ever retaining the language of their forefathers, have diffusod a knowledge of it throughont the Peninsula."

The Telugu language as has already been shewn, is not a mere derivative from Sanscrit, but has an independent origin and is of independent cultivation. The radicals according to Mr Ellis are the same as in the cognate dialects of Tamil, Canara, &c, and it differs from them only in the affixes used in the formation of the words from the roots. Although however it is not the offspring of Sanscrit, it is very extensively blended with that language in the states known as Tulsamam or Tatharam, the words in the former being the very same, taking only the Tamil inflexions, and those of the latter being derived mediately or immediately from the Sanscrit (As S Vanam, T Vanama n forest and S Samudra, T Sandaramu the ocean). The rest of the language, exclusive of other foreign terms, is the pure native language of the land, and is capable of expressing every mental and bodily operation, every possible relation and existent thing, and with the exception of some religious and technical terms, no word of Sanscrit derivation is necessary to the Telugu.*

Although however the Telugu dialect is not a derivative from Sanscrit, its literature is largely indebted to the writings in that language, and is unquestionably long posterior to their being naturalised in Southern India. The works of highest repute are translations from Sanscrit the oldest works extant are not of higher antiquity than the end of the twelfth century, whilst its Augustan era, the reign of Krishna Deva Raya of Vijayanagar, dates in the beginning of the sixteenth. The first attempts to reduce the usages of the language to rule, appear to have been made late in the thirteenth century, when Nannya Blatta, a Brahman of considerable learning, and the translator of the first two books of the Mahabharat compiled a Telugu Grammar in Sanscrit. Mr Campbell in the preface of his Grammar states that the most ancient grammarian of whom mention is made in the native books is the sage Kanva, who appears to have been to the people of Andhra or Telengana, what Agastya was to those farther south, their initiator into the mysteries of Hinduism. His works, and those of other writers of supposed antiquity, are not now to be found, and all the treatises of Telugu Grammar at present extant consist of Sanscrit commentaries on the series of Aphorisms of Nannapa or Nanniah Bhatt. The age of this last, although conjectured by Mr Campbell to be remote, is ascertained by documents of which he was not in possession, inscriptions recording grants made by his patron, Vishnu Verddhana Raja of Rajamahendri, to be as above stated, the close of the thirteenth century. Mr Campbell admits that the Brahmans were the first who cultivated the Telugu, and brought it under fixed rules, and consequently recognises the prior introduction of Brahmanical literature.

The principal portion of Telugu literature is translation, and we have the Mahabharat, Vishnu, Varaha, and Bhagavat Puranas besides Pauranic stories in the Mahatmyas, and a number of poems, and tales readered from Sanscrit into Telugu. At the same time translations or appropriations from Sanscrit form a smaller proportion of Telugu, than of Tamul literature, and we have in the former a number of sectarian legends especially of modern origin, as the acts of the Alwars and Jagamas, or the Vaishnava and Sanya saints of peculiar schisms originating as late as the twelfth century with Ramānuja and Basava. As in Tamul, there are many local Cheritras, historical and biographical compositions, containing amidst much exaggeration and fiction materials for history another important peculiarity is the insertion of the biographical or genealogical account of the patron of the author in the commencement of most works, sometimes of great minuteness of detail. Telugu literature comprises also a large collection of poems and tales, some of which are original. It is a curious circumstance that no Nataks or dramatic compositions appear to exist in Telugu whilst in Tamul they are frequent.

Telugu like Tamul comprises a high and low dialect, the former of which is used in writing, the latter in conversation and official business. The language of composition is so different, Mr Campbell observes, from the colloquial dialect, that even to the learned the use of commentaries is indispensable for the correct understanding of many of their best works.

Telugu has been extensively cultivated of late by our countrymen under the auspices of the College of Madras, and a Grammar and Dictionary Telugu and English compiled by Mr Campbell have been published at that Presidency, besides various works intended to facilitate its acquisition.

The next division of the catalogue is that of the Karnatar or Kanara manuscripts distinguished into two classes as Hala Kanara and Kanara, the former being the ancient language and that of literary composition, whilst the latter, as in the two preceding dialects, is the language of daily use, and of local tracts of recent preparation.

The limits of the Kanara language are thus described by Col Willes.

"The principality which in later times has been named from the obscure village of Mysore was the south western portion of the ancient Carnatic, frequently named also the country of Kanara, or the country in which the Kanara language was spoken. According to this criterion, the northern limits of that extensive region commenced near the town of Beder in the latitude of $18^{\circ} 45' N$ about sixty miles N W from Hyderabad, following the course of this language to the S E it is found to be limited by a waving line which nearly touches Aduanee (Adoni) winds to the westward of Gooti, skirts the town of Anantpur, and passing exactly through Nundidhoog, touches the range of ghauts, thence pursuing their southern course to the mountainous pass of Gujjelhutty, it continues to follow the abrupt turn caused by the great chasm of the western hills between the towns of Combattoor, Palatchi, and Palgant, and sweeping to the north west skirts the edges of the precipitous western Ghauts, nearly as far north as the sources of the Kistna, whence following an eastern and afterwards a north easterly course, it terminates in rather an abrupt angle near Beder already described as its northern limit”

To these Mr Mekerrill adds the province denominated Kanara by Europeans, but as observed by Mr Ellis, the native speech of that province is the Tuluia, a dialect of Kanara, an observation which is also made by Mr Balhi upon the authority of the Abbé Dubois, although that missionary has been either misunderstood, or has made a strange mistake in the assertion that there is no such country or language as Kanara. It can scarcely be supposed his objection is one of sound only, or that by Kanara he understands something different from Karnata.

The Kanara language is one of the cognate forms of speech of the Peninsula, agreeing in its radicals with the Tamul and Telugu, and differing from them only in its inflexions, a great number of its words are also common to them, and its idiomatic construction is, Mr Ellis states, not similar only but the same.

Although a division of the catalogue is appropriated to Kanara books it can scarcely be considered as forming a class of literary compositions, as it consists chiefly of local and occurrent tracts, many of which were prepared by the Rev. J. Mackenzie of Col Mackenzie. They differ however manuscripts classed originally as local tracts, and have therefore been allowed to retain their place amongst the literary collections. The Hala Kanara is very differently circumstanced, and has an independent and a curious literature.

It is highly probable that the only literature cultivated in the south of the Peninsula for a considerable period was Tamil, the language of the Madura princes, and subsequently that of the Chera dynasty, comprehending Mysore, Bednur, Tirancorai and Malabar. The cultivation of the local dialect of the Kanara was of subsequent date, but it preceded that of Telugu, and appears to have been patronised by the Balal or Valala dynasty of princes, who reigned at Dvarasamudra the Dol·amander of the Mohammedan historians from the eleventh to the beginning of the fourteenth century. Thus, a grammar of the ancient dialect is said by Mr Mekkerell to have been compiled by Kesaria about seven centuries ago, and we have in the following catalogue the translation of a section of the Jaimini Bharata, dedicated to Viratellala Dera who reigned about the middle of the thirteenth century.

Although the literature of Hala Kanara consists in part of translations from Sanskrit, and consequently like its cognate literature is subsequent to that of the Brahmans, it comprehends a distinct and extensive class of works, which are neither derived from Sanskrit, nor are the work of the Brahmanical caste. They are composed by priests of a particular branch of the Sattra faith, that of the Lingamites, and relate to the actions and doctrines of the founders and teachers of the sect. The scheme originated in the twelfth century, and the works connected with it are consequently posterior to that date. Some of them are of great extent, consisting wholly of legends relating to individuals of celebrity in the sect, occasionally interspersed with Pauranic stories, but for the far greater part original. They are extravagantly absurd, and mostly insipid, but many of them are highly characteristic, and indicate a state of religious practice and belief, almost as foreign to the genuine Hindu creed, as to common sense and sound morality. Besides this branch of indigenous literature, we have also amongst the Hala Kanara books some historical documents, relating chiefly to the Wadeyar kings of Mysore of which Col Wilkes has made ample use in his history of the south of India, and some original fictions, of an amazing character, in which we may trace many of the marvels that have interested our early years in another hemisphere.

For the country in which the Malayalam language is spoken and the character of the language, it is best to refer to the authority of Mr Ellis, in the printed but unpublished dissertation on the subject.

"The country of Malayalam, lying on the west coast of the Indian Peninsula, is, according to the Ceralotpati, divided into four Khandams or provinces. The most northern, commencing at Gocarnam, and extending southward to Perumbuzha near Mangalore, is called Tulurajyam, the kingdom of Tulu, from Perumburah to Pudupattanam, near Nilesuaram the country is called Cuparajyam thence to Canneti near Collam (Quilon), lies Ceralarajyam, and thence to Oanyacumdrī (Cape Comorin) Mushicarajyam. The Malayala or more properly the Malayálma, is at present the language of the two last provinces. It is spoken likewise, in Cupam, but in this province and in Tulu, which constitute the district, on which in recent times the name of Kanara has been imposed, the Tulura, a distinct dialect, though of the same derivation as the Malayálma, prevails among the aborigines, and a variety of tongues among the Hauga, Concana, Cannada, Telugu and other tribes who have long colonized the country. There is a certain variation in dialect between the language of Ceralam and Mushicam, and, indeed, in the several Nádus into which they are divided, but none of sufficient importance to require particular notice. In the latter province affairs of state are conducted in the Tamul language, which is there, consequently, much more prevalent than in the former."

"The Malayalma is like the Coduntamizh, an immediate dialect of the Shen Tamizh it differs from the parent language generally in the same manner as the Codun, in the pronunciation and idiom, but more especially in retaining terms and forms of the Shen Tamizh, which in the former are obsolete. But its most material variation from its cognate dialects is, that, though deriving from a language superfluously abounding in verbal forms, its verbs are entirely devoid of personal terminations, the person being always indicated by the pronoun. It is this peculiarity which chiefly constitutes the Malayalma a distinct tongue and distinguishes it in a peculiar manner from all other dialects of Tamul origination."

The same authority informs us that the language is written in three characters the Aryam, the Col Ezhutta and the Vett Ezhutta or as it is termed in the south district, Malayala Tamul. The first is a variety of the Grantham, and expresses the Nagari alphabet, the second is the character in which public grants are drawn up, and the third, the clipped or abbreviated letter, is only a modification of the second, and both differ little from Tamul, except in the mode of joining the vowels to the consonants, and in the manner of writing.

The Malaydlam language as well as those already noticed, borrows largely, particularly in its literary compositions, from Sanscrit and is distinguished into higher and lower dialect. As a member of the Peninsular family it is prior in common use, to Sanscrit, whilst from its greater simplicity it may be inferred more modern than the Shen Tamul, agreeably to the principle that the higher the antiquity the more artificial is the structure of all language, a rule to which Mr Ellis remarks, there is no reason to believe that the Tamul dialects constitute an exception.

The list of Malaydlam books is of very limited extent, and is almost restricted to the Kerala Utpatti, entire, or in portions. This work, of which some notice appears in the fifth volume of the Researches by Mr Deane, gives an account of the origin, history and institutes of Malabar, and seems to serve as a code of laws as well as a historical record. It is ascribed to the celebrated Sankara Acharya but cannot be wholly his work, as it notices events long subsequent to any period that can be assigned for the date of his existence. It is in prose, and the only work of the kind, according to Mr Ellis. There are some poetical translations from Sanscrit, as the Rdmayana of Ezhutt Atchen, but he states also, that the Malaydlam has never been cultivated as an independent literary language.

The history and structure of the Marhatta language have not yet found such able illustrators as the preceding, and its connections and affinities are in a great measure to be ascertained. It is spoken with some variation of dialect through the whole tract of country that is bounded on the north by the Salpoora mountains, and extends from Nandode on the west along those mountains to the Wyne Ganga east of Nagpore, the eastern limit is formed by that river to its junction with the Wurda, whence it may be traced by Manikdroog to Mahood. From the latter place a waving line may be extended to Goa, whilst on the west it is bounded by the ocean. The population of the country is estimated at six millions.

The Marhatta language although spoken by such numbers of people is but imperfectly cultivated by those who use it. It has a grammatical system of inflexion in part peculiar to itself, but offering much that is analogous to the grammar of Hindi. It does not belong to the southern family of dialects, but is a member of a series which extends from Guzerat to the banks of the Jumna across the Dosh and along the Ganges to Bihar. It is very largely interspersed with Sanscrit, and derives its literature from the same source although not exclusively. The list of books comprises amidst the translations from Sanscrit, some from Hindi, and the local tracts or Balkirs are rather inaccurately designated, as they comprehend both translations from Sanscrit and original compositions, the latter of a biographical and historical character, and of some value as national records of the important events in which the Marhattas have borne a part since their rise to political power through the enterprising talents of Sivaji. The language is written in two characters, the Balaband and Mor, the former is a very slight modification of Devanagari the latter is a variety of the same, but more considerably altered. Its introduction is attributed to Hemanda Panth the Guru and minister of Ráma Deva the Raja of Deragiri, Deogerik or Dauletabad. This person being famed for his medical skill was carried off to cure Vibhishana the king of the Rakshasas of Lanka, and on his return brought with him amongst other valuable or curious things, the characters in use amongst the demon race of that island.

The Uryia or Urissa language spoken in the province of Cuttack, extended northwards nearly to Midnapur, and southwards to Kimedi, it is bounded to the east by the sea, but on the west mixes with the Gond at Sonepur on its southern boundary it adopts Telugu words, and on the north intermingles with Bengali, to which it is closely allied. The difference is rather in accent and intonation and in the use of provincialisms, than in structure or inflexion, and the words are the same. They are indeed as well as in Bengali, Sanskrit, with so very few exceptions, that if the Sanskrit vocables were excluded neither could pretend to be a language. The only basis of either is probably a few terms for the commonest objects of existence, sufficient for a state of absolute barbarism. It does not seem probable that the Uryia has even yet received elementary cultivation, or that it possesses a grammar. From the works found in the collection it appears however to have been cultivated, although not in any important department of literature. The subjects principally treated of are the passionate and mystical worship of Krishna, love tales, and local records. The collection however is not so rich in these last as might have been expected, with reference to their abundance in the province, where according to Mr Stirling,* every temple has its legend, and every Almanac maker his Pdnji and Vansdiali, records and genealogies of the princes of the country in the local tongue.

The division entitled Hindi books comprises a variety of dialects, but all with one or two exceptions, modifications of a common language, that of the Hindus of Central India, to which the term Hindi may be therefore legitimately applied. It seems to be a question yet undecided, how far Hindi and Hindustani are distinct forms of speech, and before this can be determined, what constitutes distinct form of speech must be agreed upon. The elements of both tongues are unquestionably the same, and the inflexions of Hindi even in the Brij; Bhalha variety, differ in no important respect from those of the Urdu. They are nevertheless mutually unintelligible, and are so far different languages, the Hindi retaining its own or Sanskrit words, the Hindustani in every possible case substituting for them words of Persian and Arabic origin. Although therefore the frame work is nearly unchanged, it is filled up in a wholly various manner, and for all the ordinary purposes of speech the dialects are distinct, whatever may be their original identity. The Hindi again varies probably in every hundred square miles, and the language of Agra and Ajmer may present wide discrepancies. The differences are however in words, rather than in inflexions, and they are only dialects of a language radically the same, or perhaps it may be granted individual members of one common family. They are almost copiously intermixed with Sanscrit, and although they may claim a base separate from the superstructure, the former is of the scantiest possible dimensions, and is completely overshadowed by the latter.

The Hindi dialects have a literature of their own, and one of very great interest. The indications of it in the present instance are limited to but few specimens. These are the Chhatra Prakas and Prithvi Raja Cheritra or histories of Chhatra Sal of Bundelcund, and of the last Hindu king of Delhi Pithoura or Prithvi Raja. Many such works are current amongst the Rajput states, which are not yet known to Europeans. There are also some specimens of Hindi writing in the works of Kesaria Das which are of interest, as shortly preceding the earliest Hindustani compositions, and connecting the foreign with the indigenous literature. There is also a number of works on theological subjects, which seem to have been very popular with the Hindus of Upper Hindostan during the latter reigns of the Mogul princes, and to have given rise to a great variety of sectarian divisions to which these works belong. The list comprises also two or three popular works current amongst the Jains of Upper India, one of which the Kalpa Sutra is in Pralit.

Estimated as collections of Arabic and Persian literature the works in these languages are of little consideration, but some of them are of local value. Several of the Persian books particularly contain histories of the Muhammadan principalities of the south, which afford ample means of supplying the many deficiencies in the only published account of those states, or Scott's History of the Dekhan.

The Hindustani books or writings in the Urdu language and Persian character, are few and are of no great value. The character of the language in which they are composed has been already adverted to in speaking of the Hindi manuscripts.

We shall now proceed to sketch the second series of results afforded by the collection, or the illustrations they furnish of the course of religious belief in the Peninsula.

The books and papers in the Mackenzie Collection do not enable us to trace the state of the Hindu faith in the south of India with much precision, until periods comparatively recent, or subsequent to the tenth century. Previous to that date, the traditions are brief and irregular, but they are sufficient with other sources of information, to enable us to form, with some confidence, a general notion of the introduction and progress of a foreign faith, that of the Brahmins of Northern India, amongst the people of the Deccan.

All the traditions and records of the Peninsula recognise in every part of it, a period when the natives were not Hindus. What creed they followed does not appear, but it may be reasonably inferred that if any, it was very rude, and such as might be expected from a barbarous people, for the same authorities assert that prior to the introduction of the coloures from the north the inhabitants of the Peninsula were foresters and mountaineers, or goblins and demons.

It may seem something rather extraordinary, but it is the obvious consequence of the oldest traditions, that the extreme south was first colonised, and civilised by a Hindu race, thus indeed furnishing a clue to the real purport of what appears to be the most ancient Sanscrit poem, the Ramayana. The great object of Rama's adventures in the Peninsula, during which it is to be observed he encounters no cities, and no tenants of wood and cave, except nuckarites, monkeys, bears, vultures, imps and demons, is to relieve the holy aæetics from the dread of Ravana and his giants who were not confined to Lanka, but spread through the great Dandaka forest identical with almost the whole of the Peninsula. At the head of the ascetics was Agastya, the first apostle of Draṣṭrā, the traditional author of its language, as well as of its religion, and whose exertions for the dissemination of the Hindu religion were in all probability seconded and rendered successful by Rama and his army. After the annihilation of the barbarian chiefs, who had resisted the spread of the new doctrines, and the appointment of friendly monarchs both in Kishkindha and in Lanka, Rama returned to Ayodhya, but the consequence of his incursion was the resort of individuals from his native dominions, pilgrims as it is said, but as it is admitted, eventually colonists. Two of their chiefs Pandya, and Tayaman Nale, both of the agricultural caste and both from Ayodhya, laid the foundations of the Pandyan and Chola kingdoms. At what period this happened, must be matter of mere conjecture. The traditional accounts refer as usual to dates of extravagant antiquity, and are therefore of no value. That the Madura kingdom existed in the time of Augustus Caesar we know from Strabo, and the author of the Periplus describes the Malabar coast as subject to the Pandyan king. We find at a little later period in Ptolemy, a vast number of towns and different principalities as well as nomadic races, as if towards the centre of the Peninsula civilization had not wholly extended. Some considerable interval of course must have elapsed for the conversion of a solitary forest into the populous resort of commerce and we may, speaking very vaguely it must be confessed, allow ten centuries for this revolution. This computation derives some support from the enumeration of seventy two Pandyan kings preceding Kuna or Guna Pandya whom there is reason to place in the ninth or tenth century of Christianity. That the lists are correct in details is very unlikely, but the total number may possibly not be far from the truth, and it would give nearly fifteen centuries for the duration of the Pandyan kingdom to the date indicated, or the fifth or sixth century before Christ for its origin. Allowing then some centuries for the concentration of straggling colonists into a regularly organised state, the civilization of the south may possibly be extended to ten centuries before Christ, although even that antiquity may be thought too considerable. At any rate the whole body of Peninsular tradition is adverse to the admission of high antiquity, and still more so to the ill considered theories which have connected the south of India with Egypt in antiquity, civilization and religion.

The introduction of the Hindu religion into Malayalam, or the principal tracts on the Malabar coast appears to have occurred about the same time as into Dravira. The Brahmins were brought it is said by Parasu Râma from Ahîshetra, which in the Mahabharat is a city in the north of India. They were called Arya Brahmins from being natives of the holy land Aryabhumi, central or Brahmanical India according to Menu, and we have seen that one of the written characters of Malabar that which is most allied to Nagari is still termed Aryala as probably of Brahmanical introduction. Possibly traces of these events may be indicated by the Ariaca province and Purros Mons of Ptolemy, although the former is rather misplaced, whilst Adistuthia is possibly connected with the Ahîshetra of the legend, if there be not indeed some further reference to the local traditions, in the Ahi or Aiorum Regio of Ptolemy. Ahi in Sanscrit means a snake, and it was found necessary, it is related, to invite the Brahmins into the country to remove the dread of snakes with which the province, like any other overspread with jungle, abounded. These snakes, were after the coming of the Brahmins, propitiated by worship as the Sthala Devatas the gods of the soil and the Aiorum Regio or Ahi desa the territory of serpents, would accordingly be an appropriate designation for such a country. At any rate these coincidences are sufficient to shew that Hinduism was established on the Malabar coast anterior to the Christian era.

As we proceed northwards, the traces of the early condition of the religious faith of the people are more indistinct than those hitherto followed, but such as they are, they continue to indicate the comparatively recent origin of the existing creed. According to one tradition, the Brahmins were invited to Srilakola near the mouth of the Krishna by a prince named Sudakshina, and according to another they first came to the south of the Narmada with Ultunga Bhîsa the father of Nanda, or were invited by Nanda about the beginning of the Christian era. The account most generally current assigns the introduction of the principal families to Mukundi Pallava prince of Dharanikota in the third century of Christianity. If, as conjectured by Mr Campbell, Trilinga, the origin as is usually asserted of Telenga is traceable in the Triglyphon or Trilingum of Ptolemy, and Modogalingam of Pliny, we should have the Saiva faith established in the upper and eastern portion of the Peninsula in the beginning of the Christian era. It is scarcely possible however to suppose that the geographical position of the country could be so far erroneous as it must be in this case, the Triglyphon of Ptolemy lying in the situation of Arakan or rather of Tippera. It can scarcely be doubted however that the Hindu faith existed on the Coromandel coast in the days of Ptolemy, as we have in his tables a number of names of places evidently of Sanscrit origin, by their terminating in pura and nagara, synonymous of a city, as Mapura, Minnagara and others.

On the opposite coast, or in Tuluia, and the Concan we have every reason to believe that the Hindu religion was introduced scarcely if at all anterior to the Christian era. The local traditions assert that the first prince who brought the Brahmins into the Concan, was Mayura verma, one of the Kadamba princes who reigned at Banaras, a name that occurs unaltered in Ptolemy. His son, extended the settlement of the Brahmins into Hana and Tuluia or Kanara, and the north western districts of Mysore. Mayura verma appears to have reigned in the third and fourth century after Christ, but it is difficult to suppose that the Hindu faith, had not extended itself earlier to these countries. It does not appear however to have made much progress when Ptolemy's geography was compiled. Except Banaras, few of the ancient names in this part of India bear any resemblance to Sanscrit, and a considerable tract of coast is occupied by what are termed piratical nations, or in other words possibly by inhospitable barbarians. The evidence of classical antiquity is therefore as far as it extends, in favour of the absence of Hinduism in this part of the Peninsula in the first century of the Christian era. That it was near at hand however may be admitted upon the evidence of Banaras, and such other places as bore Hindu appellations, particularly Nasik still called Nasuk or Nasika, so termed according to tradition from Ráma's having here cut off the nose of Surpanakhi the sister of Rávana. Ptolemy's Nasika is indeed north of the Nanaguna or Tapti river whilst the present Nasik is some way to the south, but independently of such errors as are to be expected in ancient geography, it is not impossible that places of reputed sanctity sometimes suffer removal, and that the name and tradition do not always continue attached to the same spot, particularly when the situations are not far removed.

The same appears to be the case with regard to the upper part of the Coromandel Coast or the country of Orissa. According to Arrian, the coast before coming to the mouth of the Ganges is occupied by the Kirrhade, a savage race. Ptolemy places them immediately east of the Ganges, to which they may possibly have extended but he has a tribe that bears a designation of precisely similar import, the Sbarra upon what appears to be the Mahánadi river. The classical Kirrhade are beyond question the Kirdas of Sanscrit, and the Sklärā, the Sararas, of the same, foresters and mountaineers, uncivilised barbarians, and their presence in the situations described is an evidence against the prevalence of the Brahmanical system in those countries earlier than the first century of the Christian era.

It has been already observed that the prevalent division of the Hindu faith in the earliest period of its establishment appears to have been the worship of Sira, and the traditions of the different countries corroborate this view, for the tutelary divinities of both the Pandyan and Chola kingdoms were forms of that deity or his bride. In Telingana the first princes are reputed to have been Vaishnava, but this is the only division in which that faith predominated. In the course of time, however, probably by the seventh or eighth century, a variety of modifications existed, to reform which Sankara Achârya, it is related, was born. He did not attempt to abolish all the varieties of the Hindu faith, but whilst he recalled the attention of the Brahmins to the tenets of the Vedas, and the injunctions of the inspired legislators, and thence founded the division known in the south as the Smartah

Brahmans, who disclaim, although they may practice, the exclusively preferential worship of any form of the supreme deity, he gave his sanction to the continuance of certain sects, over whom he permitted sundry of his disciples to preside. These were the Sanas, Vaishnavaas, Sauras Saltas, Ganapatiyas, and Kapalikas or Yogis. The renewed impulse given by Sanhara to the observance of Saiva worship appears to have stimulated the worshippers of Vishnu to an effort to obtain the supremacy, and in the twelfth century Ramanauja founded the sect of Vaishnava Sanyasis who have ever since exercised considerable influence in the south of India. That the dissemination of the doctrines of Ramanuja was attended with political convulsions is darkly alluded to in the traditions which represent him as protected by the Velala prince, Vishnu verddhana, against the persecution of Kerikala Chola, and the admitted transfer of the great shrine of Tripura from Satya to Vishnu although assigned by tradition to a miracle, is not likely to have been effected without a severe struggle. Other innovations probably sprung out of the disturbances that prevailed at the period. About the same time or something earlier perhaps, in the course of the eleventh century, a new form of the Saiva religion was instituted, that of the Langavants by Bdesaieswar and his nephew Chenna Basaieswara. That this change induced some public convulsion is acknowledged by the concurrence of various traditions which represent the king Byala Raja as having been murdered by some of Bdesaieswar's disciples. The religion spread very widely, and is now extensively diffused throughout the Dekhin.

A subsequent innovation, a revival of Vaishnava doctrines took place at a still later period, as late as the thirteenth century in the person and institutions of Madhuachari. Adapted like the Jangama form of the Saiva faith to popular acceptance, it proved equally successful, and may be considered to divide with that religion, the adherence of the greater part of the population of the Peninsula not of the Brahmanical tribe.

After so much has been said of the violent persecution of the Buddhas, in the south of India, and their extermination by the most cruel tortures, it is somewhat extraordinary that so few traces of their existence at all, should be found in the Collection. There is no book nor record whatever purporting to be the work of a Buddha. A few incidental notices occur in different memoirs, but they are brief and unsatisfactory, and are not unfrequently of erroneous application, the Jains being intended although the Buddhas are mentioned, and in one instance, in the standard history of Malabar, the name Baudenmar is perhaps applied to Christians, and is without doubt given to the Mohammedans.

That there were Buddhas at one time in the south of India cannot be questioned. Imperfect as the traditions are, they indicate their presence, and architectural remains near Tiruvalore and at Amaravati, as well as the Buddha caves at Ellora Karli, and on Sasalle, substantiate the fact. It is impossible however to avoid concluding from all the evidence that is procurable, that they existed at no very modern date, in small numbers, and for a brief period, that they enjoyed little popularity or patronage, and that they never were the objects of a general or sanguinary persecution. That they were exposed to unjust and vexatious treatment in some places, and consequently withdrew from them, possibly beyond sea, is little doubtful, and it is equally certain that their enemies were not the Brahmins alone, but that their expulsion was fully as attributable to the growing power and intolerant preponderance of the hundred schism of the Jains.

The earliest controversy of importance that is described is said to have taken place between the Buddhas and Muniya Vasala; the minister of one of the Pandyan Kings. The controversy it is narrated took place at Chidambaran, but it is worthy of remark, that the advocates of the Buddha faith came over from Ceylon, for the purpose of holding the disputation. They were of course confuted, but no note of any persecution occurs. The date of Muniya Vasala is not very satisfactorily ascertained but it was not improbably in the course of the seventh century.

The confutation of the Buddhas of Malabar by Kumari Bhatta a northern Brahmin as noticed in the Kerala Utpatti and consequent persecution, are narrated very briefly and no date is given. If the events occurred at all they preceded the time of Sankara.

The only other notices that are worthy of attention, relate the expulsion of the Bauddhas from their college and temples at Ponataga Nagaram near Tirutatur. They are said in one account to have come from Benares in the third century of the Christian era, and to have settled about Kanchi where they flourished for some centuries, at last, in the eighth century, Alalanka a Jain teacher from Srirana Belligola and who had been partly educated in the Buddha College at Ponataga disputed with them in the presence of the last Buddha prince, Hemasitala, and having confuted them the prince became a Jain and the Bauddhas were banished to Kandy. Nothing more of any value, can be added to the history of this sect, from the present collection. We know that the Buddha religion continued in Guzerat till a late period or the end of the twelfth century, when Kumara Pala of Guzerat was converted by the celebrated Hemachandra to the Jain faith, but by the fourteenth century it seems to have disappeared from the more southern portion of the Peninsula.

The substance of most of the collections regarding the Jains has already been published by Col Mackenzie. According to the information procured from the establishment at Srirana Belligola the Jains of the Dekhan were the objects of royal patronage as early as the seventh century before Christ as an inscription cut on a rock is adduced in evidence, but this testimony is solitary, and is at variance with all other documents. There is indeed on the contrary, an inscription placing Chamunda Raya, in the eight century of Sālīdhana, whilst the only Chamunda of any note, prince of Guzerat, flourished in the eleventh century of the Christian era. But the strongest argument against the accuracy of the date is, that amongst a very considerable number of Jain inscriptions, or nearly a thousand, there is no other of a similar period. The earliest grants are those of the Jain princes of Homchi, petty state in Mysore, which commence in the end of the ninth century. From this they multiply rapidly in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, particularly under the Velala Rajas, and extend to the sixteenth and seventeenth under the Rajas of Vijayanagar, who although not of the Jain persuasion, seem to have shown liberal countenance to its professors.

In this evidence which is of the most unexceptionable description, the traditions of the country offer no contradiction. In the Pandyan Kingdom, the Jains rose upon the downfall of the Bauddhas, and were suppressed in the reign of Kuna Pandya, which could not have occurred much earlier than the ninth or tenth century or might have been as late as the eleventh. The subversion of the Bauddhas of Kanchi by the Jains took place as has already been mentioned, according to some authorities no earlier than Saka 710 or A D 788. The Bauddha temples at Deiragondu and Vellapalam were destroyed by Jain princes in the eleventh century. About the same time the Lingavant Suras put to death Vijala the Jain King of Kalyan, and demolished the temples of the sect. Vishnu verddhana the Velala Rajah of Mysore was converted to the Vaishnava religion in the twelfth century. It is highly probable therefore from these accounts as well as from the inscriptions, that the Jain faith was introduced into the Peninsula about the seventh century of the Christian era, that its course south was stopped at an early period, but that it extended itself through the centre and in the west of the Peninsula, and enjoyed some consideration in the tenth and eleventh centuries, that it was mainly instrumental in its onset to the declension of the Bauddhas, and that in the twelfth century the joint attack of Suras and Vaishnavas, put a final term to its career, and induced its decline. There are however still many Jain establishments in the Dekhan, and the religion is not without numerous and affluent votaries.

The extension of the Mohammedan religion into the South of India was wholly dependant on their political power. A remarkable exception to this occurs in the case of the conversion of the Raja of Kerala to Mohammedanism, apparently in the ninth century. This occurrence is recorded in the Kerala Utpatti but neither in that nor in any other document in the collection, is one of its consequences, the formation of a Mohammedan population, the Mapillas of the Malabar coast, described. The collection is also silent on the subject of the native Christians of the Peninsula, and throws no light on their ancient or modern history. These omissions resulted from the character of Col Mackenzie's agents, who as Hindus and Brahmas were not likely to feel any interest in these subjects nor to communicate freely with the persons from whom alone, information could be obtained

A review of the religious revolutions of the Peninsula would be incomplete without some notice of the numerous and celebrated cavern temples, with which it abounds, and its other monuments of a religious character. The collections of Col Mackenzie furnish no addition to our knowledge of the former; the subject indeed is capable of little except graphic illustration, and there being few drawings or plans of any value relating to them. The omission is of little importance, for the topic has been handled in the Asiatic Researches, and in the Transactions of the Bombay Literary Society, and in the latter particularly by Mr Erskine in a manner that leaves nothing to desire. To extensive knowledge that writer adds sound judgment, discriminating observation, distinct conception, and perspicuous description, and his account of Elephanta, and his observations on the Bauddha remains in India, should be studied attentively, by all who would investigate the history of the Bauddhas and Jains. The caverns in general are Saiva and Bauddha. There are a few Jain excavations at Ellora but none at Elephanta or Koneri. There is no satisfactory clue to the date of any of these excavations, but there is no reason to think that any of them bear a high antiquity. It may be questionable whether the Saivas or Bauddhas took the lead in these structures, but there is some reason to suppose the latter, in which case the Saiva appropriation being consequent on the downfall of the Bauddha faith. Mr. Erskine observes, the Elephanta caverns cannot be much more than eight centuries remote. The Bauddhas according to a tradition previously alluded to, came into the Peninsula only in the third century after Christianity, and their excavations could not therefore have been made earlier than the fifth or sixth. The Saivas who formed similar caverns were a particular sect or that of the Jogis, as is proved by the sculptures, the large earrings, the emaciated penitents, and the repetition of the details of Daksha's sacrifice, a favorite story in the Saiva Puranas, none of which probably are older than the eighth or ninth century. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, therefore, we may infer the comparatively recent formation of these monuments. There is nothing in their construction that Hindu architects of the present day would not be as well qualified as ever to accomplish.

Sculptured rocks are analogous to cavern temples, and the history of the one may throw some light upon that of the other. The most remarkable monuments of this class are the sculptured rocks of Markapuram or Mahabalipuram the city of the great Bali, who has proved so mischievous a Jack a lantern to European scholars, leading them astray from India into Palestine and Mesopotamia, and filling them with a variety of preposterous fancies. Now local tradition asserts that these rocks were sculptured not more than five or six centuries ago by artists from the north, and the subjects of the carving, the recumbent Vishnu, and particularly the presence of Krishna and the cowherds of Vrindavan, leave no doubt of the accuracy of the chronology, for the worship of the boy Krishna, is a very modern innovation. That there was a city on this spot in remote periods, and that there may be ancient remains in the vicinity are not improbable, but the modern origin of these particular monuments shew that we are not obliged to go back to very distant ages for such laborious architecture to be devised or accomplished.

Many of the great temples of the South of India as those of Rameswara, Srirangam Tanjore, Chilambaram Congerieram and Tripuram are genuine Hindu monuments, and probably are still of the same style of architecture as when first erected, but there can be no doubt that as they are, they are modern constructions. The local Puranas which, as has been noticed, are local fabrications, refer the original foundation of each shrine to extravagantly remote periods, very commonly a preceding Yuga. They then admit intervals of neglect, and the discovery of the spot by some comparatively modern sovereign, and when they particularise the construction of individual edifices, or the grant of specific endowments, we find the persons are of very modern date. The reigns of the Vijayanagar kings, the Rajas of Mysore and the Nayaks of Madura, or from the fourteenth to the eighteenth century form the season in which the records most frequently recur. The Yadava and Belal sovereigns appear occasionally amongst the founders and benefactors of sacred shrines, whilst a great number are said to owe their origin to Chola kings of very questionable antiquity. Except at Madura the capital of the Paudyan princes, we do not find any edifices ascribed to those sovereigns, and even at Madura many of the most remarkable structures, such as the choultry of Trimul Nall, are works of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

HISTORY

THE earliest political divisions of the South of India have already been adverted to, in describing the first introduction of colonists and civilization from the north. The settlers subsequent to the invasion of Rāma, established themselves at the extremity of the Peninsula and founded the Paudyan, Chola and Cera principalities on the Western coast, whilst the country of Kerala was civilised by Parasu Rama, and formed about the commencement of the Christian era an independent kingdom. In the Carnatic, Tonda was reduced to a regular form of Government by a branch of the Chola ruling family, whilst farther north Andhra formed the chief state on the east and Tulma on the west. At later periods the political divisions of the Dekhan followed the rise and decadence of particular families, and the Yadava, Belala, Ganapati, Gajapati, and Vijayanagar princes with the Marhatta Chiefs, and Nayals of Madura, take the place of the ancient kingdoms. We shall endeavour to give a brief view of the various states and families as derivable from the Mackenzie Collections.

PANDYA

The Paudyan kingdom was no doubt extensive and powerful at a very early period. The name was familiar to the Romans in the days of Augustus, and the Hindu King is said to have sent ambassadors to the emperor.

At some short time afterwards, the state seems to have comprehended the Coast of Malabar, which is included by Airian amongst the possessions of the Paudyan King. Its limits, in general, were more restricted, and the kingdom of Chera or the southern part of Coimbatore, and the line of ghats form its western, and the Velar river its northern boundary; on the east and south it is bounded by the sea.

The founder of the kingdom according to the local traditions was a person named Pandyā a native of Oude, and of the agricultural caste. Various lists of princes are given as the successors of this individual, either in this or the preceding Yuga. The ordinary enumeration is above seventy, but some accounts with more consistency if the origin be so remote, assert that the whole number was three hundred and fifty-seven, down to Kuna Pandya, with whom all the lists close. Besides these lists we have numerous records of the actions of saudry of the Pandyan princes, particularising a few apparently authentic facts. They appear for the most part to be derived from a Sanscrit work, entitled the Haldsyā Mahātmya of the Skanda Purana, which gives an account of the sports or miracles of Sundareswara, the form of Siva worshipped at Madura, as occurring in the reigns of the different kings. A Tamil version of this work was written in the middle of the eleventh century, and the original has therefore the character of some antiquity, being composed possibly in the course of the tenth century or early in the eleventh, and thus fixing the date of the last prince it enumerates, or Kuna Pandya, to some anterior term. He is in this work the seventy fourth prince, and if he flourished in the ninth or tenth century, and the lists at all be correct, we are enabled with a very moderate computation to carry the commencement of the Madura sovereignty according to this record to the third or fourth century before Christianity. We have every reason to think this may be not very far from the truth, and the lists of princes, which it may be observed also, are found to agree very tolerably in the order of the names, may be entitled to some confidence. It is not unlikely that the compilers of the Halasyā Māhadīmya followed records preserved in the Madura temple and college, and have thus been able to give a tolerably regular and rational view of the series of kings. Its composition has been a check upon subsequent chronicles and few of the materials for a history of the states of the Dekhin found in the Mackenzie Collection are so complete or regular as for that of Madura.

The first capital of the state was Kurkhi, then Ko kha apparently of the periplus. the next was Kalyanpur. Madura was the third. The latter was founded by Kulasekhara with whom the seventy-four princes commence, referring therefore the original establishment of the principality to an earlier period than that usmed above, and furnishing grounds for a conjecture previously started, that this part of the Peninsula might have been organised about five centuries before the Christian era.

The third sovereign was a princess, but being subdued in battle by a king from the north, or by Siva in that form, she gave her hand to the victor. The prince it is said was named Sundara, and the tutelary deity of Madura is still Sundaresvara, the Linga erected by Sundara. The tradition may therefore imply the introduction of that form of worship. The queen, as an incarnation of Devi as Mindkshi, was also elevated to divine honors, and worshipped ever afterwards at Madura under that designation.

Few details of any value are given of the next following princes, beyond their frequent hostilities with the neighbouring kings of Chola, whose capital is placed at Kanchi, and who are sometimes described as Samanal, heretics or Baudhas. The eighth king of Madura, Anantaguna, also, is said to have been assailed by the Kirdas, foresters of Chedi or according to the Tamul version of the Halasya, the barbarous tribes of Marawa. Marawa however was part of the Pandyan kingdom from the first, and the assaults were probably from some other country, or from the mountainous regions along the western ghats.

A prince also appears as the nineteenth, twenty second, or twenty-ninth of different lists, Varaguna, who holds a more prominent place in Chola history than in that of Madura, a blank in the former being ascribed to his marriage with the princess of Chola, and the consequent union of the two sovereignties. This must have occurred after the Christian era, as we have the capital of the Chola kings distinguished by Ptolemy from that of the Pandyan, and the Chola kings do seem to have merged into the Pandyan for some considerable time in the first ages of Christianity.

Shortly after the reign of Varaguna a series of twenty-four or twenty-five princes occurs, of whom the names only are recorded, and they are succeeded by Vamsasekhara who appears to have been the first of a new dynasty. The different accounts concur in ascribing to him the construction of the fort and palace of Madura, and the renovation of the ancient city. If we might be suspected by this reparation of the city, we are to understand its foundation, this prince must have been anterior to the Christian era, but this is incompatible with the period of Varaguna's reign, and with the duration of the rest of the series. The computation upwards from the last of this dynasty Kuna Pāndya, will place Vamsasekhara in the fifth or sixth century. His reign is further interesting from his being the reputed founder of the Madura College.

The reign of Arimerddana the sixty-first or sixty-second prince, is remarkable for the cotemporary existence of a celebrated personage in the literary and religious history of the Peninsula, Mānīkyaśāka, the minister of the Pandyan king. He adopted the faith of Siva, and the practice of a mendicant life, composed a number of hymns in praise of Siva, and defeated the Buddhas of Ceylon in a disputation held at Chilambaram.

The twelfth prince from Arimerddana is Kuna Pāndya. He is placed by some accounts in the Saka year 950 or A. D. 1028, and this agrees tolerably well with the date deduced for him from that of the translation of the Hālasya Mūhālmya. In his reign, the Jains who had become powerful in Madura and enumerated this prince amongst their disciples, were discomfited by Jnyāna Samandhar, a Siva priest, and the king became a convert to the latter faith. Some time before the reign of Kuna Pāndya the Madura college it is said, had been abolished, but this is questionable.

The Pandyan kingdom ceased from about the ninth or tenth century to hold that eminent place in the political history of the Peninsula, which it had apparently occupied for some centuries. Its decline was owing to the extended power of the Chola sovereigns on one side, and subsequently to the establishment of the Bēlāla princes on the other. It continued to struggle on however partly as a tributary and partly as an independent principality, engaged in contests of various vicissitude with its Chola, Māraica, and Karṇṭha neighbours, until the middle of the sixteenth century, when the sovereignty devolved on the series of princes known as the Ndyaks of Madura. The first of these, Nagama Nayak was an officer of Krishna Raya king of Vijayanagar, who was sent to assist the Pandyan prince against the Chola Raja. Nagama deposed his ally, and declared himself independent. His son Viswanath was despatched against him by the Vijayanagar Raja, and defeated and sent his father prisoner to the Court. His loyalty was rewarded with the Government of Madura, which descended to his posterity. Sixteen princes of this race held the Government of Madura, and Trichinopoly, to the middle of the eighteenth century. Some of them left curious and splendid monuments of their reigns, and several were patrons or persecutors of the Catholic Missions in that part of the Peninsula. Their final downfall may be considered as one of the indirect causes of the British ascendancy in India as the excess of Chanda Saheb in obtaining possession of Trichinopoly from Minalshi Ammal, the Madura princess and regent, encouraged him to embark in those ambitious schemes against the Sabadar of the Dekhin, which involved the French and British settlements in the political revolutions of the Peninsula.

The history of the Chola kingdom is much less regular and consistent than that of the Pandyan, and the traditions relating to it are as perplexing and contradictory as they are abundant. Lists of the princes, legends relating to them, and even inscriptions dated in their reigns, are extant all over the Peninsula, but are so little accordant, that it is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible to derive from them any information on which reliance can be placed.

The sources of confusion, independent of those which naturally occur from the lapse of time and imperfect tradition, are evidently two. The one is the use of an epithet as a proper name, and its application to different individuals, thus Kulottunga Chola is he who is the elevator of his family, and although it may have originally designated an individual prince, it has unquestionably been borne by very different persons, at exceedingly distant periods. The other source of perplexity is the employment of the term Chola in a much wider sense than it legitimately expresses, and its adoption by the princes of districts considerably removed from the original Chola country. The fame of the Chola princes seems to have led the Rajas of other provinces to assume the title, and frequent grants are found at Rajamahendri, and in the Northern Circars, which purport to be made by princes, who are termed, in all probability with little exactness, Cholas.

The ancient history of the Chola kingdom commences at the same time, and in the same manner, as that of the Pandyan. The country along the Cauvery, which had been overrun by Rakshasas, the chief of whom Trisiras gave his name to the celebrated fort of Trichinopoly (Trisirapalli), was first cleared and cultivated by Tayaman Nala a settler from Oude, or from Upper Hindustan. The limits of the country were afterwards extended to the Kutakera on the west and the southern Pinakini or Pennar on the north. The sea formed the eastern boundary, and the Velar divided Chola from Pandya on the south. As comprehending Tonda Mandalam the northern boundary extended beyond Tripetti, and in recent times appears to have been pushed far into the Telugu countries, but the legitimate boundary to the north is that of the Tantul language, or a line drawn from Pulicat towards Dangalore, including consequently the whole of the Carnatic below the ghats, with Trichinopoly and Tanjore.

The first stage in the history of the Chola kings, is that immediately subsequent to the foundation of the principality. Forty eight or forty four Lingas are said to have reigned in a former age, but nothing more than their names, and those not of frequent recurrence, are preserved. It is nevertheless probable that several of the few events of Chola history which have been commemorated, belong to this period, and in particular we may assign to it the construction of the capital Warior on the Cauvery, which seems to be recognisable in the Orthoura of Ptolemy the capital of Sornag, Shora or Chola Nayak, situated on that river. The extension of the territory farther north by the reduction of Tonda Mandalam, the country of the Kurumbas or Nomadic Soretans is also referred to this early period by Mr. Ellis, but it seems to have belonged to a later date.

is said to have been occupied at an early period by wild tribes, who however, were themselves foreigners, coming from the north of India, and who exterminated the original barbarians of this part of the Dandaka forest. Although an uncivilised people, the Kurumbas, as they are styled, were not strangers to social organisation, as they had chiefs of their own, and fortified holds, and were not reduced without difficulty to subjection. According to tradition Kulottunga Chola, bad a son by a female dancer attached to a temple, or in some of the versions, by a nymph of Patala, who from his illegitimacy being debarred from succeeding to his parental dominions was sent by his father to win a principality for himself. The prince, named Adonda or Tondaman Chakravarti, subdued the Kurumbas, with the aid of his father, and introduced various races of colonists into the country from more civilised districts. It does not seem however that Tondam contained an independent state, for no separate lists of its princes are preserved, nor is any notice of its later fortunes handed down, except as part of the Chola kingdom. Its subjugation by a branch of the ruling dynasty of Chola is conjectured by Mr. Ellis to have occurred before the commencement of the Christian era, as many of the names by which places are still known, and which seem to have been imposed by the colonists are to be found in Ptolemy's tables thus the Arcati Regio Sorae, is considered by him to be the Arcot of modern times the original term Arcadu being a Tamil compound of Al or Ar, the banyan tree, and Cadu a forest, and Arcot being the chief town of one of the Nadus or early divisions of the country although not the capital. This he supposes to have been Kanchi or Conjetram, which is considered as the metropolis of the Chola kings in their early intercourse with the Pandyan monarchs. Kanchi is said to have been founded by Adanda Chakravarti, and made his capital, but its own traditions ascribe its restoration, or in other words its foundation to Vira Chola, a prince cotemporary with Salivahana in the first century of Christianity. The chief temples of this celebrated place of Hindu devotion, are of much more recent origin, and no traces of it appear in the classical geographers. The specification by Ptolemy of the inhabitants of this part of the Peninsula as a Nomadic tribe seems also to indicate the existence of the Kurruñlas, as an independent people in his day, for the colonists whose descendants still occupy the country are Vellalas an agricultural not a pastoral people. It is therefore probable that this transaction belongs to a more modern date, and that the Tonda country was not settled until after the separation of the Chola from the Pandyan principality. The line of sea coast may perhaps have been occupied earlier, but the tracts a little removed from it, were but imperfectly civilised in the first centuries of Christianity. Another event of some importance, the destruction of Varur by a shower of earth, and the removal of the capital to Kumbakonam or to Ganga Gondaiaram can scarcely be referred to the first period, as it gives designation to a prince of a subsequent era, named Varur Chola, and if it be as above conjectured identifiable with Orthoura.

The Chola Kingdom merged by marriage as has been noticed into the Pandyan, and continued so for 570 years. The duration of the interval may perhaps not be very accurately stated, but the occurrence seems very probable, and explains why the Chola records are so much more defective than those of Madura. Whether the cause be correctly assigned is also doubtful, but we may be satisfied to admit the traditional memory of the result, and to conclude that the kings of Madura extended their authority over the whole tract between the eastern ghats and the coast, for a considerable period during the early ages of Christianity.

The series of princes who succeeded, is very differently stated by different authorities. Lists preserved at the temples of Tripeṭi, Chandragiri and Pernatur make the number twenty three, whilst others at Kondatur and Kānchi give eighteen, supplying also dates or from Sal 136 to 830, (A.D. 214 to 908,) an interval of 694 years, which is much too considerable for eighteen reigns, giving an average of 39 years to a reign. The more extensively received enumeration, however is sixteen, resting upon the authority of the Vrihadisvara Mahatmya a Sanscrit work of which translations in Tamil and Mahratta exist. Although not of unexceptionable authenticity, it should be a preferable guide to the barren lists above adverted to, but there are some irreconcileable contradictions between its series of princes, and the dates assigned to some of them from other sources, and the total number is in all probability less accurate than that of the local lists. That some of the princes particularised in all had a real existence is undoubted, as it is verified by inscriptions. The inscriptions of the Chola princes in the Dravira country and language are exceedingly numerous, every temple abounds with them. Unfortunately however the old Tamul inscriptions, the antiquity of which is easily recognisable by the style, very rarely present any other date than that of the year of the reign in which the circumstances they record took place. They are consequently of little chronological value.

According to the Vrihadisvara Mahatmya the first of the series, Kulottunga, was distinguished originally only for his devotion to Siva, by whose favour he became possessed of great wealth, which he employed to raise forces, defeat his enemies, and occupy the country on both sides of the Canvery. He erected a number of temples to different forms of Siva, and amongst others one of great splendour to Tungesvara, the form of that divinity worshipped at Tanjore, which may hence be considered as the Chola capital.

The names and chief actions of these Chola princes as recorded in the Vrihadisvara Mahatmya will be found in another place* as well as an attempt to establish the period of Kulottunga's existence in the ninth century, upon what appears very good authority. At the same time it is difficult to suppose that the series of Chola princes, and the many celebrated shrines originating with them should not have borne an earlier date, and we cannot satisfactorily refer them to the Kulottunga of the Sanscrit text. A very current tradition, indeed places Kulottunga in the time of the poet Kamban who has left his own date on record Sal 808 (A.D. 886) and makes him the last not the first of his race. The story may perhaps originate in some change of dynasty, but it is scarcely admissible at all, for Kamban's work is dedicated to Rájendra Chola not to Kulottunga. Supposing them to be the same individual, it leaves as probable the existence of two Kulottungas about this date, and the prior antiquity of a race of princes whose names are now lost or but partially preserved in the local lists. Rajendra Chola appears to have been a very distinguished member of the dynasty, and his inscriptions describe him as victor over the Pandyan and Chera princes and those of Uttala and Virat. He is said even to have undertaken maritime aggressions, and embarking on board ship to have subdued Ceylon, or Ceylon, Kalinga or the northern part of the Coromandel Coast, Gaur and Bengal. These are no doubt exaggerations, but they leave it likely that Rajendra was a prince of more power than any Chola monarch could have enjoyed after the Yadava and Belal Rajas had the ascendancy, and this consideration confirms his living in the ninth century. There were no doubt many Chola Rajas after him although of more circumscribed authority, and the destruction of the family in the time of Kamban, unless it were in the person of Rajendra, as the subverter of a prior dynasty, is therefore an idle fiction.

The Chola princes of this race are said to have carried their arms far into Telingana and Kernata but to have been checked in their career in the former direction by the Yadava princes in the beginning of the eleventh century, and finally expelled from the northern tracts by the Kahaleya princes in the twelfth. They continued to hold the government of their original possessions to a much later date, either independently or as feudatories to Vijayanagar. The flight of Rāmanuja from Tanjore above the ghats is invariably said to have been in consequence of the persecution of the Chola king, and it occurred in the twelfth century. Grants by a prince named Potambi Chola with the title of Madhurantaka destroyer or conqueror of Madura, are found dated in Sal 1153 (A D 1231). In the sixteenth century, as has been noticed, an officer of the Vijayanagar Government was despatched to protect the Raja of Madura from his Chola neighbour and in the end of the seventeenth similar aid being afforded to the Nayak of Tanjore against the Nayak of Madura introduced the Mahratta family, by which it is still governed. Ehoji the half brother of Sivaji being ordered by the superior state of Vijayapur or Bijapure to march to the aid of the Chola prince, relieved him not only from the attacks of his enemies but the cares of administration, and usurping the supremacy put an end to a dynasty that had been masters of the greater part of Dravira through many successive centuries, and had attached a degree of credit to the Chola name, which led to its adoption in other portions of the Peninsula.

One of these appropriations appears to have occurred in the Carnatic, and a series of nine Cholas is sometimes enumerated, a few of whom are borrowed apparently from the genuine lists, but others, if they ever had a real existence were wholly unconnected with the Chola dynasty. These princes are described in the Nata Chola Cheritra, a Telugu work, (p 305), and were named Kerilala Vikrama, Uttunga, Aduara, Varadherma, Satyendra, Manujendra, Vira, and Ultama. The object of the record is to detail the encouragement given by these princes to the Jangama religion, and is therefore not likely to be very authentic. Of four of the nine, Aduara, Varadherma, Satyendra, and Manujendra, no traces occur in any other accounts.

Other instances of the use of the term Chola are found in the Telugu countries, and in these, individual appellations, as Kulottunga, Rajendra, Vicrama, and Vira, and Kerilala, are assumed. The adoption of these names and titles appears to have been divided between two families, grants by both of whom are very numerous and are nearly cotemporary, the one dating from Sal 1022, to 1097, (A.D. 1100 to 1175), in the reigns of Gonla Raja, Kulottunga Chola and his son Rajendra Chola of Velnad, and the other embracing the period of Sal 1023 to 1101, (A.D. 1101 to 1182), being chiefly grants by Kulottunga Chola Vishnu Verdhan of the Chalukya princes of Rajamakendri. There is also a grant by a Kerilala Chola in Sal 1114 (A.D. 1192,) who is described as the great grandson of Gonla Raja, prince of Velnad, the country of the East of the Tungabhadra and along the Krishna. In the ceded districts occur the grants of a Dera Chola, who took Gandikota in Sal 1244, (A.D. 1322) and an Aholala Dera Chola in Sal 1342 (A.C. 1410). With exception of the Rajamakendri Cholas the others were petty chiefs, little better than Zemindars, in which class we may also reckon another Kerilala Chola who is said to have been conquered by one of the Jupalliwars or Zemindars of Jupalli in the Hyderabad country

CHERA

Another political division of the south of India which may be traced to periods of some antiquity, is that of the Chera kingdom, which is always enumerated along with the Pandyan and Chola states, by original authorities. The boundaries of this principality seem to have been of little extent, and it was probably most commonly feudatory to its more powerful neighbours, except where it had extended its northern limits so as to interpose a mountainous barrier between it and its enemies. The northern limit of Chera varied at different periods, being originally placed at Palni near Dharapura, whilst at a subsequent period the capital, Dalaranpur or Talcaud above the Mysore ghats indicates a considerable extension of the boundary in this quarter, and the Chera principality probably included the greater portion of Kernata. Its eastern limits were the possessions of Chola and Pandya, and the western those of Kerala. In its early state however it comprehended the extreme south of the Malabar coast or Tirancore, and consisted of that province, Wynad, the Nilgiri mountain district, the southern portion of Coimbatore, and part of Tinnetrally. In this tract we have in Ptolemy the people called Cares, and not far from it Carura Regia Cerebothr, in which, making an allowance for inaccuracies of sound and expression, we have the Cheras, and Carur still a city in this district, and Cherapati, the sovereign of Chera.

It seems probable therefore that in the commencement of the Christian era, Chera or as it is also called Kanga, was an independent principality. Of its history, either before or since, little satisfactory occurs until periods comparatively modern. Lists of princes, one of thirty, and another of twenty, who it is said reigned in the Dicpar and beginning of the Kali age, are given, but they are unaccompanied by details. Another series of twenty-six princes adds the political events of their reigns and closing with the conquest of the province by Aditya verma, a Chola prince in A D 894, it enables us to place the commencement of the dynasty in the fifth century. The occupation of the country by the Cholu Rajas was not of very long continuance, and in the course of the tenth century the capital Taledd was that of the first or second sovereign of the Hayasalu or Belál dynasty of the sovereigns of Karnata. The name of Chera appears to have been discontinued from this period, and the districts were annexed to the neighbouring principalities of Karndín, Madura, or Tanjore.

KERALA

Before leaving the southern extremity of the Peninsula it will be convenient to advert to another ancient division of some interest, the state of Kernla or Malahar. The country intended by this designation in its widest sense extends from Golernam to Capo Comorin, but it was subdivided into four provinces as has been already noticed, Tulma, Curn, Kerala, and Mushica. Of these no traces occur in Ptolemy except Cura which he gives without any alteration, Curn, only as a city not a province. It is possible that the Paralia of his tabloes may be a wrong reading for Kuralin or Kerala and in the Aycotta of the Malabar coast near Koranganur, some vestige of the An or Anorum Regio may be conjectured. As already observed some other identifications along this coast may be made, as Nelcynda or Nillantha with Nileswurm, and Purrl os mons with the mountain of Parasuráma to whom the whole tract is said to owe its origin.

This hero after the destruction of the Kshetriya race bestowed the earth upon the Brahmins, who repud the obligation by banishing him as a homicide from amongst them. Being thus at a loss for a domicile he solicited one of the ocean, and its regent deity consented to yield him as much land as he could hurl his battle axe along. Parasurama threw the weapon from Golernam to Kumári, and the retiring ocean yielded him the coast of Malabar below the latitude of 15°.

The introduction of Brahmins into this province, which has already been noticed, appears to have been accompanied with a political organisation of very unusual occurrence in the east. The Government was vested in a sort of hierachal senate, formed of the Brahmins of the sixty four districts, into which they parceled out the country, the land they rented to people of inferior castes, reserving to themselves the right to property in the soil, and the management of public affairs. The defence of the whole or the use of weapons, was intrusted to ten divisions and a half, out of the sixty-four, and the executive Government was consigned to one individual, and a council of four others appointed by the Brahmans of the sixty-four villages for three years each. This arrangement however in the course of time gave way to the election of one sovereign, of the military castes, who took an oath on his installation to acknowledge the authority of the Brahmans, and do nothing contrary to their interests, or without their concurrence. This Military Governor was brought, in the first instance, it is said, from a foreign country : what country is not mentioned : according to Arrian and Pliny, Malabar was included in the Pandyan kingdom, and it is probable therefore that in the early ages of Christianity the Brahmans of Kerala had been induced or compelled to accept a Military Viceroy from the monarch of Madura, retaining in consideration of their sacred character, and actual privileges, substantial influence in the internal administration of the Government.

Subsequently to these events which appear to belong to periods of some antiquity, the history of the province is very imperfectly preserved. The separation of sixty-four districts into two portions, thirty-two north and thirty-two south, indicates the distinction of Tulura from Kerala but on what account it was made is not recorded : we shall find it again noticed elsewhere. Obscure traditions then occur of the temporary prevalence of the Bauddha faith, and its final suppression by six learned Brahmans, who came from other countries, and of the encouragement given by Kula Sekhara, a prince who is placed by some authorities in the fourth and by others in the seventh century of Christianity, to persons of that description to settle in Kerala.

From the death of this prince an extraordinary anachronism in the Malabar annals assigns the appointment of kings or Viceroys to Krishna Ráya the king of Vijayanagar in the sixteenth century. Eighteen rulers of this class are enumerated, each of whom reigned for twelve years, thus occupying an interval of 216 years. The last of the number, Cheruman Perumal, is celebrated for a very singular event in the annals of the Hindus, his conversion to the Mohammedan religion. He finally retired to Mecca, dividing on his departure the Kerala kingdom into eighteen or more distinct principalities. There is no reason to doubt the general accuracy of this story. A Raja of Malabar did become a Mohammedan, and whether he went on pilgrimage to Mecca, or not, his apostacy was no doubt the occasion of political convulsions, and made the plea of general disobedience by his officers who took the opportunity of rendering themselves independent. These events seem to have occurred in the ninth century, and at the end of the fifteenth we know that the Portuguese found the country broken up into numerous petty principalities, acknowledging a sort of fendiary obligation to a few of the more powerful of their number, but all affecting independence. Amongst the superior states was that of Kdlicat, whose chief was entitled the Sdmudri Raja or Raja of the sea coast, and who was thence probably termed Zamorin by the Portuguese. The origin of Calicut was subsequent to the partition of the country by Cheruman Perumal. The foundation of another chieftainship furnishes an era in common use, and events in Malabar are ordinarily dated from the building of Kulam, Oulao, or Quilon, which occurred in the ninth century.

KADAMBA

The traditions of Malabar respecting the partition of the country amongst sixty-four families of Brahmans, and their subdivision into two sets of thirty-two each, one retaining the northern, and the other the southern portion of the country occur in the records of Tulura, and that province is said to have been apportioned in a similar manner. The separation however is ascribed, not to Parasu Ráma, but to Mayúra Varmá, a prince of a dynasty known by the name Kadamba, which long reigned in this part of the Peninsula. To Parasu Ráma is attributed nevertheless the recovery of the whole tract over which they reigned from the ocean, and which is said to have extended from Nasil to Kanyd Kumári. The country so recovered was divided into seven districts, called Rdma, as the seven Konkanas, which are severally Maharatta, Konkan, Hayga, Tulura, and Malabar. The princes appear to have ruled over Kanara, extending their authority inland over part of Karnata conflicting with the limits of Chera. The Konkana appears to have been in ancient as in modern times, the residence of uncivilised and piratical tribes. The Kirata country is of course that of barbarians, and the term Mahratta or Maharashtra is of so vague an import, and the early traditions of the modern Mahrattas so utterly deficient, that it is not likely they existed as a separate and organised community in ancient times. In place of this division, indeed, some accounts specify Gorakshtra but this should be more properly Hayga, which is also omitted, and another division that of Berbera inserted. Berbera, Kirdla, and Virata are also said to form the kingdom of Trigerita both Trigerita and Virata are known by name in the Mahabharat but the latter is there placed much more to the north, and it is difficult to understand on what grounds it is included amongst the Konkanas. At no rate it appears probable from the classical geography, as well as the imperfect character and general tenor of the traditions regarding this part of the peninsula, that a considerable tract of country between the Goddery and Krishna rivers from the sea coast eastwards, continued to a comparatively modern date in the possession of scattered and barbarous tribes, or on unbroken expanse of mountain and forest, such as it was when Rama with his wife and brother, resided in a cottage of leaves near the sources of the Goddery.

At the time that Parasu Rama recovered Tulua and Hayga from the sea, it appears that he obtained a population also, for it is asserted that he converted the fishermen of the coast into Brahmins. He then departed telling them that if ever they had occasion for his aid, their wishes would bring him to their assistance. After some interval they were anxious to see whether he would keep his word, and summoned him to their presence upon his arrival, and learning the cause of his being put to unnecessary trouble, he was exceedingly wroth, and degraded them to the condition of Sudras, in which light the Brahmins of the Konkan are still considered.

When some ages had elapsed Sita and Parsuram came to the Sahyadri mountains, the Ghats above Konkan and Kanara, and in consequence of their pastimes a boy was born under a Kadamba tree whence the name of the dynasty other accounts ascribe his birth to a drop of Sita's perspiration which fell upon a Kadamba flower. The people of the country being at the time without a monarch, had recourse to a mode of election which is of frequent occurrence in the peninsular traditions. Due worship having been performed, a state elephant is turned loose, carrying a wreath, and the person to whom the animal presents it, is chosen king. In this instance the wreath was given to the youth whose birth was so miraculous, and the first of the Kadambas ascended the throne of Tulura. In consequence of his derivation from Sita he was born with a third eye on his forehead, visible only at the moment of his production, and was in consequence termed Trinetra Kadamba. He was a great benefactor of his people, and a devout worshipper of Siva as Madhulisvara and Kollisvara. His date is placed early in the Kali age, but inscriptions occur in his name dated Sal 90 or A D 168. It is not very likely that the Salirâhana era should have been adopted thus early, else the date is not inconsistent with the subsequent traditions. It must be observed, however, that in this case the city Banarâsi existed before the Kadamba family, as it occurs in the vicinage of the Malabar coast something near its actual position in Ptolemy's tables.

The sixth prince of this family, or the third according to some accounts was Mayûra Verma to whom the foundation of Jayanâtipur is attributed. This is usually identified with Banarâsi, but some notices make it Kundapur on the sea coast. This is the prince to whom the introduction of the Brahmins is ascribed. The place whence he brought them, and their number, are variously given, as Ahilshetra or Vallabhapur, and one hundred, or thirty-two thousand, all the traditions agree that he distributed the country below the ghats into sixty four portions, which he gave to the Brahman colonists, and the very large proportion which the Brahmins of Kanara and Tulura bear to the whole population indicates a considerable immigration of this class at some distant period. The greater part are also admitted to belong to the Pancha Gaura, the five Gaura Brahmins, or those of northern Hindustan. Mayûra Verma is said to have established four cities in each of which he placed a Brahman Governor: these were Kasargodi, Barkur, Mangalur, and Kadaba. The marvellous adventures of this prince, a brief notice of which will be found in another place, (page 56) do not occur in what seems to be the chief authority for the history of the Kadamba Kings, the Sahyadri Khanda of the Skanda Purana.

The Brahmins introduced by Mayura Verma attempted in the reign of his son and successor to leave the province, but they were brought back, and in order to prevent a repetition of their attempt were compelled to leave unshorn a lock of hair on the forehead as a distinguishing mark. The son of Mayura Verma is variously named Kshetra Verma, Chandragada, and Trinetra Kadamba. This latter it is said, extended the Brahmins to the southern portion of Tulura or Gokarna, which was under the Government of a kinsman of the prince named Chandrasena. The son of Chandrasena, Lokaditya married the sister of Trinetra, and had by her a daughter, whom the king of the mountain Chandilas, solicited as a wife for his son. The request was seemingly complied with, and the king and his attendants invited to Tripura, the residence of Lokaditya, to celebrate the marriage. Whilst unsuspecting of peril they were assailed by the soldiers of Lokaditya, and his brother-in-law, and destroyed, and the authority of the Kadamba prince was extended in consequence above the ghats into Carnatic. The Brahmins followed this accession of territory.

From the first of the Kadamba dynasty to the last, seventy-one or seventy-four princes are enumerated but their names alone are particularized. They were followed, it is said, by the Abhiras, Mauras, &c., the lists of princes given in the Puranas, who could have had no connexion whatever with the dynasties of the south. The interval is thus filled up to the reign of a Sankara Deva in Sal. 1858, or A.D. 1336, the date of the origin of the Vijayanagar kingdom. The period from Sal. 90 that of Trinetra Kadamba to 1258, is 1168 years, and these distributed amongst seventy-four princes would give fifteen years to reign, on average not unlikely if we can suppose the princes enumerated to have had a real existence. There is little doubt also that the first princes of Vijayanagar were descended from a Tuluia family of ancient origin and power, whose dominions extended towards the western sea whether they were connected with the Kadamba family does not appear, but that this race continued to hold possessions in Karnata, till near their time, is proved by grants at Banavasi, Saranur, and Gokernam, dated in the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth centuries by Kadamba kings. Their territorial possessions, and their personal independence during this period were no doubt subject to many fluctuations, and the Belal Rajas of Karnata appear to have exercised some supremacy below the ghats, and even the Telunga kings of Warangal extended their conquests thither. Under the patronage of the former of these, the Jain religion was very widely diffused throughout Tulura and in the interval between the decline of the Belal kings, and the ascendancy of the Vijayanagar kings, a number of petty independent Jain Rajas sprung out of the officers of the former princes. They were allowed to retain their possessions under the Vijayanagar kings, but the management of the country and command of the military force, were vested in three deputies, appointed by the superior sovereign. A branch of the Vijayanagar family appears to have settled after their downfall, in Sonda whilst Sadasiva Raja conferred in the end of the sixteenth century the government of Guti, Barkur, and Mangalur, upon a petty chief, whose descendants known as the Rajas of Ikeri reduced the Jain Rajas to subjection, and continued to hold authority in Kanara till the middle of the last century, when their dominions were annexed to the Mohammedan kingdom of Mysore.

NORTH OF THE KRISHNA

The collections of Col Mackenzie do not present any satisfactory materials, for tracing the ancient history of the countries north of the Krishna on the western part of the Peninsula and the fabulous stories of Vārunḍilīya Saturnana and Bhoja which relate to them, differ in no respect from those common in other parts of Hindustan, and reflect little light upon the real history of the country or its princes. Materials for an accurate record of the political transactions of modern times, the fortunes of the Mohammedan kingdoms and the Marhatta confederacy are not deficient, but it is unnecessary to notice these, as the results are already well known by the translations of Scott, and the works of Orme and Duff. It is sufficient here to observe that the foundation of Deogerh or Dowletabad is attributed to a shepherd named Ramji who resided on the mountain, and discovered a hidden treasure in the year of Kali 2500 or about five centuries before the Christian era. His minister was Hemanda Panth by whom the Mahratta written character was invented. The excavations at Ellora are ascribed to Ila the son of Buddha the son of the moon. The Rajas who ruled subsequently at Ellore, are said to be Yurandaswa, Dandaka, Indradyumna, Darudhya and Ráma Raja, none of whom, except the last, probably ever heard of the place. The legendary origin of Násika has already been given. In more modern times, or 500 years ago, a Raja entitled Gauri Raja is said to have ruled here and at Tryambak. He is said to have been a brother of Ráma Raja of Dowletabad, of which the date would tolerably well admit. His nephew at the same time governed the country below the ghats or the Konkan. At that time a ferryman named Jayaba rose in insurrection, defeated and deposed the nephew of Gauri Raja, and became master of the Konkan from Junar to Anhola. Jayaba extended his power above the ghats, but was checked by the progress of the Mohammedans. Seven princes in succession descended from this person, continued to hold the government of the low country.

BELAL KINGS.

The ancient history of Keradla is but little elucidated by any of the documents of the Mackenzie collection. The Pandyan and Ohera princes, and those of the Kadamba family, probably divided it in a great measure amongst them, and we may feel satisfied that in other series of very consideration exercised the sovereignty, until those whom we shall hereafter notice. There were no doubt at various intervals petty princes holding portions of it with a greater or less degree of independent authority, such as the Jain princes of Humchi to whose inscriptions we have already referred : authorities of a similar description prove that princes of Telugu origin, and particularly those of the Chálukya family of Kalydna, held portions of the country, and the Fádara princes of Chandragiri also, in all probability extended their sway over part of its northern districts. In later times the Ganapati princes of Warangal included part of it in their territory, and finally the Rajas of Vijayanagar, established within its limits, ruled over Karnata as well as the other divisions of the Dekhin. Before noticing any of these however we may pause to describe a dynasty of Karnata princes of considerable eminence in the annals of the south, that of the Haysalas or Belalas.

The founder of this dynasty, like that of many others of the south of India, is the hero of eandry marvellous traditions. He is said to have been a person of the family of Yadu or that of Krishna some accounts make him a Raja, others, a peasant or a cowherd, but all agree that he derived his name and fortune from killing a tiger, which had infested the vicinity of a shrine of Vasantikid, a sylvan goddess near Sasakapuri. Some traditions say he killed the animal in defence of a Rishi or holy sage, on whom he attended, whilst others relate that he undertook to destroy the animal at the request of the villagers, who consented to pay him annually for the duty, a quarter of a fanam on every Kandy of grain they raised on their fields. With this revenue he engaged followers, and made himself formidable to his neighbours, increasing his demands upon them until they amounted to fourteen fanams for the same quantity of corn as that for which they had originally agreed to give a quarter fanam. The name of this individual was Sala, to which the exclamation of the Muni, Hohe, kill! being prefixed, his designation and that of his family became Hohe sala or Haysala. He also bore the title of Beldla from Bala strength, with reference to his prowess. It is not unlikely that he was a Zemadar or petty Raja in the Carnatic, subject or fendatory to the Kangyam or the Chola Raja, until by his prudence and enterprise he elevated himself to be the founder of an independent dynasty.

The number of the Belala Rajas, according to one genealogical account is seventeen, but the ordinary enumeration, particularly that of various inscriptions, apparently worthy of confidence, is nine. There is a greater variety in the duration assigned to their authority, and the records of various temples in Telingana limit it to eighty-seven years, whilst the genealogical list extends it to more than five centuries. The dates of the inscriptions extend from Sal 991 to Sal 1235, or two hundred and forty-four years giving nearly thirty years to a reign, an average certainly exceeding that of most series of princes when at all protracted, but which we have no reason to dispute in the present case, resting as it does upon many concurring documents. The first date may be perhaps a little too remote, but the list we know from Mopamedan history is the period at which the capital of the Belal kings was taken and destroyed, and according to all probability their power irretrievably subverted.

The first capital of the Belal princes was Tallad but Vinayaditya the second of the race, was obliged, it is said, to retire into Tuluta, his son, called in some places Yerayenga, and in others Vitala Deta recovered possession of the ancient capital, and extended his authority over part of Dravira on the south-east, and westwards into Kanara.

The fourth prince named Betada or Beldia and subsequently Vishnuierddhana is of great celebrity, as the patron and protector of the Vaishnava reformer Ramāniga. The Chola Raja it is related, having insisted that his subjects should sign a paper attesting their belief in the supremacy of Sita, Rāmānuja refused to subscribe and to escape the consequences of the Raja's indignation, fled above the ghats, into the territory of the Belal Raja. The Belal Rajas had hitherto been Jains, as is sufficiently proved by their grants to Jain temples, and establishments, but the wife of Betada was of the Vaishnava persuasion, and induced her husband to protect Rāmānuja who afterwards effected the Raja's conversion. This change of religion was in some degree brought about by the insolence of the Raja's Guru, a Jeti or Jain priest, who refused to take food in the palace, because the Raja was mutilated, having lost one of his fingers. Resentment of his conduct disposed Betada to adopt the doctrines of Rāmānuja, and he became a Vaishnava. It does not appear however that he molested the Jains on the contrary, many grants were made to them in his reign, and in the reigns of several of his successors either by the Rajas themselves, or their chief officers. At a later period, the Rajas and their ministers appear to have deserted the faiths of Vishnu and Jain, for that of Siva, and the shrine of Mallikarjuna near Talikad became the repeated object of their munificence. Vishnu Verddhana greatly extended the limits of the Balala principality, capturing Banaras, and subjugating part of Telingana grants by this prince occur dated as late as Sal 1055, (A D 1133) which agrees well enough with the date usually assigned to Rámánuja.

Narasimha Raya or Vijaya Narasinha is said by some authorities, to have made Dúrasamudra his capital, whilst other traditions ascribe the foundation of that city to the first of the dynasty. His successors however Vira Beldla, and Vira Narasinha appear to have been of more eminence, and to have elevated the Beldla sovereignty to its greatest power, when the whole of Karnáta as far as to the Krishna, was subject to their sway, and the provinces of Malabar and Canara on the west, the Dravira country on the south and east, and part of Telingana on the north east, acknowledged them, if not as immediate masters, yet as exercising supreme authority over them through their officers, or through the native Rajas as vassals, and tributaries.

The successor of Vira Narasinha Beldla is the first of the series who seems to have patronised the worship of Siva and is hence commonly designated as Santa Beldla. The power of the dynasty was now in its decline, as the Rajas of Kerala, Chola, and Kanga asserted their independence, and in an attempt to redress the latter the army of the Beldla Raja was almost annihilated by sickness, and was compelled to retire within the barriers of their native ghats. He is said however to have repelled an incursion of the Gauda Raja from the north, and driven the invaders back across the Tungabhadra. It is not clear who is intended by the assailant, unless it be the Gonds, the territory occupied by which probably descended much lower to the south than of late years, and included part of Berar they may have therefore ventured upon a predatory incursion into the Carnatic. Many grants in this reign are made in the name of the Dandanayaka, Danai, the general or military prime minister the surname is observable in the two following reigns, and at this early period therefore Hindu sovereigns seemingly lapsed into the same career, which they have pursued in more modern times - a few reigns of enterprise and vigour, which found and extend the power of a rising race, are followed by a succession of indolence and sensuality, in which the servant becomes the master, and the pageant prince is set aside by his more active minister - in the struggle that ensues a new dynasty is established on the ruins of the old, or the state is subverted by a foreign enemy. Such seems to have been the case in the present instance, and although it is not probable that the Beldi kings could have opposed any effectual resistance to the Mohammedan arms, yet it appears likely that internal disunion and decay, facilitated their downfall, and prepared the way for their utter extirpation. Dicasamudra was taken and plundered by a Mussulman army in A.D. 1310-11, and from that period nothing more is preserved by tradition, or in inscriptions, of the Belala kings.

THE YADAVAS

The authority of the Belalas was limited on the north by the Krishna river, and as there can be little doubt of their disposition to extend their domains far beyond that boundary, we must infer that they had obstacles to encounter in that quarter of more magnitude, than to the east or west. During the latter years of their sovereignty these were presented probably by the power of the Ganapati princes of Telingana, but it is not easy to discover any antagonists of equal strength in the earlier part of their career.

The general lists of the princes of the Dekhin place a dynasty anterior to the Belalas and immediately subsequent to the Pandya and Chola monarchs. These are denominated the Yadavas and eighteen names are enumerated of Rajas who are said to have ruled from Sal 730 to 1012 or A.D. 808 to 1080. Few circumstances are added to this nomenclature. The capital was Narayanaram, and Chandragiri and Tripeti were the chief seats of their fame, the fortress at the former, and the principal temples at both, being attributed to some of the family. The resumption of the temple of Tripeti from the Sasas, and its appropriation to the Vaisnava religion by Ramanuja is said to have occurred in the reign of Toya Yádava the twelfth of the number, which if correct, provee the chronology of thesa princes to be wrong by about two centuries, and they must have flourished from the eleventh to tho thirteenth century or nearly the same time as the Beldi princes , according to some accounts however it was Toya Yádava who cleared*the thickets nn Chndragiri, and built the fort, whilst other accounts ascribe this to his predecessor Imadi Nara sinha, and affix the title of Sribháshya conferred upon him by Rámdnuja, to his successor Talalugolena Raja Again Teruenda Yádava is said to have built the principal temples at Tripeti before the time of Rámdnuja, and he is the fifteenth of tho series The accuracy of any of these identifications is therefore rather questionable, but there is na donht that a dynasty of princes reigned at Narayan iaram about the tenth and eleventh centuries of sufficient political importance to impose a check upon the extension of the Chola and Belala sovereignties in this part of the Peninsula

CHALUKYAS

The princes of this denomination, appear distinguishable into two families, one of which reigned at Kalyán in Karnala, and the ather gave sovereigns to Kalinga, tho part of Telingana extending along the sea shore

Of the former of these, the records are far from satisfactory a great number of grants in Karnáta are found, which appear to proceed from members of this dynasty, but the family title seems to take the place of individual designations, as the denomination of Tribhúanna or Triloka Malla occurs for nearly two centuries, or from Sal 92 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1114 (A D 1002 to 1192) the greater number are from Sal 960 to 990 (A D 1033 to 1068) making the granters consequently cotemporary with the first Belala princes Other names occur, with dates, included in the abovo range, as that of Vira Ráya of the Chálukya family, king of Kalyán and Banaras, in Sal 1000 (A D 1078), and Somesvara of the same reca and country, in Sal 1095, (A D 1173) The latter is also described as tha eon of Nirangola the son of Rnksha Malla entitled Tribhúanna Malla sovereign of Kuntaladésa, the capital of which is Kalyán, the constructor of the hill fort of Kunugode, and the subjugator of the Chola and the Gurjara Rajas; the latter would extend the attempts, if not the conquests of these princes, far to the north-west, and indicates as well as the possession of Banatási a state sufficiently powerful to stop the progress of the Baldás north-west of the Krishna. The grants in which the names of these princes occur are usually made to the shrines of Sira, but about this period of the history of Kalyán its princes were of the Jain persuasion. What relation Vijala Ráya of Kalyán bore to Somericara has not been ascertained, but the former is invariably entitled a Chálukya prince, and was therefore of the same family as well as capital: all the traditions relating to him and to the celebrated Básava the founder of the Jangama religion in the eleventh century, describe him as king of Kalyána, and of the Jain religion. He was murdered by the followers of Básava; and Kalyána, it is said, was utterly destroyed. It is not unlikely that religious disputes undermined the power of the Kalyán kings, and the principality disappeared before the extending sway of the Ganapati kings of Telingana, who appear to have been at first either feudatories of these Chálukya kings or members of the same family.

of Rajanarendra, the son of Vimalayāditya, the patron of Nannaya Bhatt, the last rests upon the authority of inscriptions, the former is a fable. The reputed descendants of the Pandavas were first driven to and finally remained at Kundarola in the Nellore district, and at some subsequent date, princes of the Chidulya dynasty, reigned at Rajamahendri. A list of the kings of this race is given in an inscription which comprises twenty four descents, and a period of four hundred and two years. The inscription is unluckily without a date. It does not include Rajanarendra nor his father, nor does it allude to the Canapati kings who flourished in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and it is therefore probably anterior to both. The name or title Vishnuverddhana occurs in it six times, and one of these may be a prince whose grants are very numerous in the Rajamahendri district, who is designated as Kulottunga Chola, the Saztama or seventh Vishnuverddhana. That these are both titles is unquestionable, and that the former, as well as the latter, was assumed by more than one of the Kalinga princes is evident from the grants in the same name at Rajamahendri extending nearly a century from Sal 1020 to 1104 (A. D. 1098 to 1182). As the genealogy referred to, does not profess to take up the family from its commencement, we can scarcely venture to compute the period of its origin, although it is not likely to have been very recent. If the last prince entitled Vishnuverddhana, properly named Saktiverma, were the same with the seventh Vishnuverddhana, the first of the series would be placed in Sal 630 or A. D. 708, an antiquity perhaps higher than is allowable, but one inscription specifies a grant by Vishnuverddhana, Chalukya of Rajamahendri to a temple of Trivikrama in the Coudavir district dated 2628 of Kali or 373 years before the Christian era, a date much more questionable. All that we can venture to assert is that these princes reigned at Rajamahendri from the end of the eleventh to the end of the thirteenth century, and may have commenced perhaps two centuries earlier. They might have been connected with the Chidulya of Kalyan, when the power of those princes extended over the country subsequently ruled by the Canapati Rajas. The last of the list on the inscription, Saktiverma is said to have defeated and killed in battle Kerikala Chola.

Another race of Kalinga princes is found more to the south, in the Gantur Circar and country adjacent to the Krishna river on its approach to the sea. In this tract, traditions particularise a Mukundi Raja as flourishing about a century and a half after Saluvdhana, or in the third century of Christianity, and as having encouraged the Brahmins of the seven tribes, which profess to be descended from the seven Rishis, to settle in the country, and granted them villages at Gantur, Kochila, Innagonda, Upatur and other places for their support. The capital of Mukundi Raja was Daranikota, west of Condapilli, and his descendants are said to have reigned for eight hundred years. Some accounts place Madharaverma, Kulaketana and Nilkantha, as we shall hereafter see, prior to Mukundi, whilst others call him the son of a girl of the mountain tribe or Chensuars by Malddera. The introduction of the Brahmins into this tract is also inscribed to another prince Trinetra Pallata, and an inscription to this purport occurs in the village of Upatur in the Gantur district dated 2000 of the Kali.

These princes, however, although they not improbably ruled over part of the Telunga country in former times, are too imperfectly handed down, for us to attach much importance to their history. The evidence of inscriptions is much more decided in favor of a later race, that ruled in Gantur, that of the Gonka Rajas, like the Rajamakendri princes they assumed the title of Kulottunga Chola, and they reigned about the same time as the former, only for a shorter period. Four descents may be made out of Valanati Kulottunga Chola Gonka Rya, his son Rajendra Chola, his son another Kulottunga, and a fourth prince of the same appellation, who appears to be a different person. Their grants which are numerous in the Gantur Circar extend from Sal 1022 to 1120 (A.D. 1100 to 1198). They were, it is related, annihilated in the political sense by the superior power of Ganapati Dera. The Chalukyas of Rajamakendri managed evidently to survive the Ganapati power, and one cause appears to have been an intermarriage with that family, for Pratapa Rudra the grandson of Ganapati Dera was the son of that prince's daughter by Chalukya Tilaka, the

We have still another series of kings to notice, who appear to have held the country about the Vennar. These, as has already been noticed, were originally from Rajamahendri, Mahhasena the son of Asuamedha datta having been expelled from thence by Somasena a foreign prince. With the aid of the Kalinja king, he recovered Rajamahendri, but it was again lost to the family in the reign of his son, Somasekhara who was killed at its capture. His son Uttunga Bhoja escaped, and fled to Kondurole of which place he was elected Raja. He recovered Rajamahendri but conferred it on his general and continued to reside at his new capital. His son Nandana Chakravarti is said to have invited five hundred families of Brahmans from Benares, to whom he gave the village of Nandaram, the formal grant of which on copper plates is still produced. These transactions of course occurred early in the Kali age. The country over which these princes ruled became subsequently subject to the Pandyan and Chola princes, the Yddas of Chandragiri, and the Rajas or Paligars of Nellore and Condamer until incorporated with the Vijayanagar dominions.

ANDHRA KINGS

The portion of Telingana removed from the sea coast, is known in Sanscrit and classical writers by the name Andhra. According to the first of these, the Andhra kings extended at one time their authority to Hindustan, and furnished a series of sovereigns to Magadha, whose capital was Palibothra. According to the latter, the kings of Andhra were sovereigns of great power in the early years of Christianity, and Pliny states of the Andhra king that he was the master of thirty walled towns, and could bring into the field 100,000 foot, 10,000 horse and a thousand elephants.

Notwithstanding these testimonies the local traditions are as usual unsatisfactory in all that relates to the early history of the country, and we have little worthy of notice anterior to the eleventh century, the commencement of the Kakateya or Ganapati.

Rajas of Warangal. The history of the upper part of the Peninsula, and indeed every attempt at a general history of the whole of the South of India, as well as of different detached portions, commences in the native chronicles, with Yudhishthira, or at the end of the Dvapar and beginning of the Kali age, three thousand years before Christ. The interval to more modern times is thence filled very scantily, by a few descents taken from the Puranas, and Parikshit, Janamejaya, Satānika, Nanda, Chandragupta, Sārangdhara and Sudrīka are the only names that occupy this space till the time of Vikrama fifty-six years before the era of Christianity. To Vikrama, succeeds Sālīdhana, and then, with a very absurd disregard of all chronological consistency, comes Bhoja, who is thus placed anterior to dynasties that must have been longer prior to his time, if they ever existed. It is impossible therefore to include him amongst the monarchs of the south, as it is to place Yudhishtira in the number. It is not unlikely that Vikrama may have extended his authority to the south of the Narmadā, and Sālīdhana whose capital Pratishthāna, now known as Pythan, stood upon the Godavari, is a legitimate monarch of the Dekkic. The countries along the Godavari, or between it and the Narmadā, may have been subject to that prince and his successors, early in the Christian era, and their authority may have extended east and south so as to have comprised the upper part of Karnata, and the western portion of Telingana or Andhra. The traditions and monuments of the Peninsula, as far as the Mackenzie Collection extends, have however preserved no particulars of such reigns.

We have already adverted to the existence of a Raja of Gantur, Mukunti, early in the era of Sālīdhana. When Mukunti is not considered as the founder of a local dynasty, the ordinary course of enumeration is Sālīdhana, Mddhava verma, Kulaketana, Nila-Lanha, and Mukunti, and these princes are not held to be sovereigns of part of Kalinga only, but of the whole of Telingana. They are followed by the Chola Mahdrāja, intending thereby the series of princes so termed, as the period of their Government is said to be 217 years, bringing the whole to the year of Sālīdhana 437 (A. D. 515.) These are succeeded by eight or nine Yavana princes. It is difficult to understand what is meant by the term, as the name Yarana invariably implies foreigners, and in late times Mohammedans. In general, the only name specified is Yarana Bhuja but in one list we have the following named as his descendants

Nanda who reigned years	62
Bhadra	70
Dumatsena	50
Satyasena	42
Sampati	67
Retnamadana	• 30
Sumanta	• 50

or altogether with the reign of Yarana Bhuja which is called 41 years, 458 years bringing the last, to the year of Salividhana 875 (A D 953). The succeeding princes are termed the Narapatis, Gajapatis, and Asuapatis or the sovereigns of Warangal, and Orissa, and the Mohammedans. It appears therefore that the termination of the Yarana series is as far as the chronology is concerned, fully two centuries too early. As to its historical accuracy it is impossible to offer any conjecture, as nothing but names is traceable, and those names throw no light on the foreign origin of the individuals as they are all genuine Sanscrit appellations. Whether any such persons existed as these Yaranas is questionable, but the answer to the question must be sought in the countries between the Narmada and the Krishna. Colonel Mackenzie's enquiries are for the most part bounded by the latter, except along the sea coast and the adjoining districts.

The Kakateya family is traced to a still higher source, and deduced from the Pandava family without the intervention of Vikrama or Salividhana. One account begins indeed with Vrishasena, who may be thought the same as Yarana Vrishasena, but in general the line proceeds direct from Janamejaya through Satnika, and Kshemaka to his two sons Vijaydrka, and Somendra. Their sons, named severally Vishnu Verddhana, and Uttunga Bhuja disagreeing, the latter quitted Upper India, and settled to the south of the Godavari. His son Nanda who founded the fort of Nandagiri, married the daughter of the Chola king, by whom he had Vijayapala. His son was Somadeva or Somadeva whose cattle grazed between the Godavari and Krishna rivers. They were harried or driven by the Outcaste Baladhara or prince so titled, apparently the Balkara of the arahic voyagers in the eighth and ninth centuries. The circumstance, which is not singular in the annals of the south, gave rise to a war, and its result is characteristic of the manners of the times, in which such a transaction could have occurred. Having in vain attempted to obtain redress or effect retaliation, Somadeva, had recourse to sacrifice, to procure a son who should revenge his father's wrongs. The Outcaste prince on hearing of this procedure, hastened to stop it, and marched to Kondar the capital of Somadeva, took it, and slew the king. The queen however being pregnant, fled to Anumacanda, where she was concealed by a Brahman named Muddhata. She was delivered of a son, who in compliment to her protector was named Muddhata terma. The prince when he grew up won the especial favor of the goddess Padmavati, and so consequently became master of Anumacanda and deserted and made tributary the sovereign of Cuttack. There was probably some such prince, as traces of him appear in so many various forms. We may attach what credit we please to his early history, to his receiving an enchanted sword and shield from Padmavati which secured prosperity to his house for ten centuries, and to his own long reign of 160 years.

From Muddhata terma seven descents, occupying a space of 475 years, proceeded to the prince who appears to have been the actual founder of the Kalaleya princes of Warangal, Kalati, Prolaya or Pula. He appears in the genealogy of the Ganapati kings, as the son of Bhutanika Malla, or Tribhuvanika Malla and in one inscription as the son of Tribhutana Malla. We have already seen that this title belongs to a set of princes of the Chalukya family of Kalyan, and it is rather unusual for a similar denomination to be borne by two families at the same time. They cannot well be the same, for about the same date the prince of Kalyan is named in various inscriptions, Sariesvara or Somadeva the son of Tribhutana Malla, and bearing apparently the same title himself. The Rays of Kalyan and Anumacanda might have been suspected to be rivals and enemies, and they might each claim an epithet which implies merely, the hero of the universe—but one inscription of the time of Kākati Prolaya is dated in the twenty third year of Chāluhya Vikrama, an acknowledgment of inferiority to the Chāluhya princes. It seems probable therefore that before the Kākati family rose to power, they were officers or feudatories of the Chāluhya kings of Kalyāṇa. In their early career also, or in the end of the eleventh century of our era, when Kālāteya Prolaya reigned, they were Jains, or at least the patrons of the sect. That the wife of Prolaya was a Jain, is proved by her grants—the name of the family is said to be derived from the goddess Kākati, possibly a Jain divinity, to whom Tribhutana Malla addressed his devotions to obtain a son. The tutelary goddess of the family Padmāshī is also a Jain divinity.

Kākati Prolaya is said to have discovered by accident a Sitalingam which was a Parispatra, or Philosopher's stone, and by the transmutations effected with it, he became possessed of great wealth. As the stone was immovable, Prolaya removed his capital from Anumāconda to the place where it was found, and there established the new capital of the Kālāteya princes, Warangal. The date assigned to this event in some accounts is Sal 990 (1068) but from the Raja's inscriptions, it should seem he was residing at Anumāconda as late as Sal 1010 (1088). He is described as a prince of a warlike character, the defeater of Telaga and Gorinda Rajas, and even of the Chola king. As already observed however, he appears to have been a feudatory or officer of the Raja of Kalyāṇa whose political ascendancy may have been about this time in the wane, so as to have permitted Prolaya to take upon himself the character of a sovereign.

On the birth of the son of this prince the astrologers foretold he would be the murderer of his father. To prevent this he was exposed but was found by some persons attached to the temple of the Parispatra Linga and brought up as an attendant of the inner temple. After he had grown to manhood, the Raja entering the temple suddenly, was treated by the son as a rude intruder and stabbeth. The youth being apprehended, his story became known, and the dying Raja recognising the impossibility of evading the decrees of destiny, acknowledged his son, and nominated him his successor.

Rúdra Dera to expiate the crime of killing his father, built a vast number of temples, a thousand it is said, chiefly to Síra. He levied tribute on the Rajas of Cuttack, and conquered the Vénuad Raja. After some time his brother Mahádera rebelled, defeated him in battle, and slew him, and assumed the direction of affairs. He left however to the son of Rúdra the title of Yura Raja, heir and partner of the kingdom. Mahádera lost his life in war with the Raja of Deragiri.

Ganapati Dera the son of Rúdra succeeded. He was a prince of considerable power, and gives a name to the family, who are often termed Ganapati as Kálateya Rajas. His first exploits were against the Raja of Deragiri in revenge of his uncle's death, and he compelled the Ráma Raja to pay him tribute, and give him his daughter in marriage. He then subdued the Vénuad country, probably with the aid of some petty Palligars, particularly one named Jyáya whose two sisters Ganapati Dera married. Jyáya was also his general and fortified, with the Raja's permission, the island of Deri at the mouth of the Krishna. The Raja also extended his arms to the south, on behalf of the expelled Raja of Nellore whom he restored, receiving in return his allegiance. Ganapati Dera is said to have persecuted the Jains, seizing their temples, and putting many of them to death. He was a devout worshipper of Síra to whom he erected many temples. He built several towns, and enclosed his capital with a stone wall, whence it was named Elaile Nagara the entire stonecity. He was a patron of Telugu literature, particularly, it is said, of Tillimí Somayaji but this is rather doubtful. Various inscriptions record his munificence to the Brahmins, and a document of this kind preserves a transaction of a curious nature, in which a large division of the Brahmanical caste was highly discontented. The Raja gave to his prime minister Goparaj Panina, the power of appointing secular or Niyogi Brahmins, as the village accountants throughout the principality. The religious Brahmins, etc., who preferred to follow the ritual of the Vedas, opposed the grant, but the insistence of the minister prevailed. The i.

tion specifying this discussion is dated Sal 1057 (A.D. 1145), but this is erroneous, unless the transaction took place in some other reign, as that of Kalati Prolaya for instance, for numerous inscriptions, as well as the subsequent history of Warangal sufficiently prove that Ganapati Deva lived about the middle of the thirteenth century, or from Sal 1145 to 1183 (A.D. 1223 to 1261).

This prince had no male issue. His daughter Umaka or Mumaka was married to Vira Deva or Virabhadra entitled Chdluhya Tilaka the ornament of the forehead of the Chalukya family. It has been conjectured above, that this might have been a prince of the Rajamahendri family. As the lady had not borne a child at the time of her father's death, her mother, Rudrama Devi assumed the regency, which she continued to hold for twenty-eight years, until a grandson was born and had arrived at maturity. This was Pratapa Rudra the last prince of Warangal of political importance. Umaka bore also a second son named Anama Deva.

Pratapa Rudra in the early part of his reign was no doubt a prince of power, although tradition ridiculously exaggerates its extent. He is said to have reigned from the Godavari to Rameswara, and to have carried his arms into Hindustan as far as Prayaga or Allahabad. The territories over which he reigned appear to have extended across the Peninsula between the fifteenth and eighteenth degrees of latitude, being checked on the north-east by the Gajapati Raja of Orissa and on the north and north-west by the Rama Raja of Delagiri—whilst on the south the Belala Raja and the remains of the Chola sovereignty checked his progress in that division a more formidable enemy however now appeared on the scene, whom even the Raja of Warangal was unequal to encounter.

According to the traditions of the south, a Mohammedan chief, it does not appear of what state, and the Cuttack Raja beingalarmed by the power and ambition of Pratapa Rudra applied to Delhi for aid, an army was sent to their assistance and besieged Warangal, but was totally defeated. This happened repeatedly until the fated period of one thousand years, during which the goddess Padmákshi had promised prosperity to Madhava and his postancy, expired Warangal then fell, and Pratapa Rudra was taken and carried prisoner to Delhi. The Mohammedan historians confirm these occurrences generally, and place them in 1323 which agrees well enough with the Hindu chronology as derivable from Pratapa Rudra's inscriptions. After a short interval, the Delhi Sultan it is said, gave Pratapa Rudra his liberty, and he returned to Warangal where he shortly afterwards died. He was succeeded by his son Virabhadra in whose time Warangal, it is related, was again taken, and utterly destroyed. Virabhadra with his chief adherents fled to Kondavir and founded a new principality. These last events however are not compatible with other Hindu accounts apparently of an apocryphal character, nor with those of the Mohammedan writers. The Rajas of Warangal are represented by the latter as at various times the allies and enemies of the Bahmani Sultans and the Rayas of Vijayanagar, and although Kondavir became the seat of a new Government, all the records and traditions refer its origin to a new dynasty. Some accounts describe the succession of both Pratapa Rudra's sons, and the further continuance of the family as nominally tributary to the Gajapatis of Orissa. Warangal was finally occupied by the Kutteb Shahi kings, and merged into the Mohammedan principality of Golconda.

KONDAVIR

Upon the decline of the Warangal kingdom the petty chiefs who had been reckoned amongst its feudatories availed themselves no doubt of the opportunity to throw off their allegiance, and assert a claim to independent sovereignty. The records of some of the Telungars trace their origin from this date, although the greater number were again absorbed in the extension of the Vijayanagar supremacy, and the present families date only from the downfall of the latter principality. It is therefore impossible, as it would be uninteresting to particularise the several independent chiefs who shared amongst them the fragments of the Warangal state, and it will be sufficient to notice the fortunes of two of them one of which rose to some importance, and left many memorials of its existence in public grants, and inscriptions, and the record of cotemporary writers The capital of this family was Kondavir and its authority extended along the Krishna, chiefly in the Gantur circar On the south they were in contact with the Rajas of Nellore—on the north with those of Orissa, and on the west with the sovereigns of Vijayanagar, beneath whose ascendancy they sunk after an independent reign of about a century

The first of the family is said to have been a farmer of Anumaconda, who obtained possession of the philosopher's stone He removed with his treasure to Kondavir, constructed that and other strongholds as Venuconda Ballamconda and others and left them to his descendants From his agricultural profession or rather from his being the head man of his district he was termed Reddi, and the family is known as the Reddywar or Reddis of Kondavir The migration of Dhouti Ala Reddi or Prolaya Reddi is variously dated, and the chronology of his descendants differs accordingly Notwithstanding the comparatively recent occurrence of the event too, the era of the Reddywar rule is very inaccurately stated in all the traditions, and the whole are placed about a century too early, as is established by books and inscriptions The number of descents is uniformly stated at seven, and this is apparently correct

The first prince of whom authentic records exist is Ala or Anumāma Reddi, who is probably the founder of the political power of the family An inscription at Amareswara on the Krishna, specifies his being in possession of Kondavir, Ardingi, and Raichur, his repairing the Causeway at Sri Sailam and the temple at Ameraiati, both on the Krishna, and his defeating various Rajas amongst whom the Kakateyas only are of note The inscription is dated Sal 1283, or A D 1361, and consequently follows nearly the period at which Warangal was taken by the Mohammedans, an event likely to have been followed by the erection of an independent state by a family, the members of which were previously opulent landholders or heads of a district, under that principality.

One tradition describes the downfall of the race to Raksha or Rachha, who reigned oppressively and was assassinated,— another, with great inconsistency ascribes it to the conquest of Langula Gajapati, who flourished in the thirteenth century, a third account and not improbably the correct one, is that of the Amukta Mala, in which it is related that Kondair, was taken in the reign of Virabhadra Vama Reddi by Krishna Raya, the sovereign of Vijayanagar, in the beginning of the sixteenth century. The annals of Orissa, however relate the capture of Condapilly and consequently the invasion of the Reddi principality by Capeleswara, who reigned from A. D. 1451 to 1478, and it is not unlikely that he began the work of subversion which Krishna Raya completed. From the latter period till the overthrow of Vijayanagar by the Mohammedans, Kondair continued to be part of the possessions of that state. The Reddiwar, were great patrons of Telugu literature, and Srinath, translator of portions of the Puranas and author of various poetical compositions, flourished under the last of the dynasty.

NELLORE.

This appears to have been the seat of a petty principality at various periods from the extinction of the Chola authority in the upper part of the Deccan to the reign of the Ganapati princes. It had its own Rajas, apparently as late as the reign of Ganapati Deva, to whom one of its princes being expelled by his competitor Bayana, repaired for assistance. He was accordingly restored by the Raja of Warangal. Other accounts however state that the prince in the Government of Nellore was a fugitive from the western country, who was made sovereign of the province by Ganapati Deva. He was named Amboja Deva. On his death without issue, Manatakesvara, was appointed by the Warangal Raja, governor of the country, and he was succeeded by his son Manata Siddhi: the latter is celebrated for his patronage of the family of Tikkana, three grandsons of Bhaskara manti, so named, of whom one was his minister, another his general, and the third and most illustrious, a poet the continuator of the Telugu translation of the Mahabharat under the patronage of Pratapa Rudra. On the downfall of the Warangal kingdom, Siddhi Raja was engaged in hostilities with Kitama petty Raja of Pahlad, and both lost their lives in the contest. Their principalities were presently after subdued by the Reddis of Kondavar.

GAJAPATIS OF CUTTACK

The Mackenzie Collection is not rich in materials illustrating the history of Orissa. With the exception of some inscriptions, the only authority that is given is a genealogical account of the Gangaramsa princes, from Choranga Vamsa Deita in Sal 315, to Purushottama Deita, in Sal 985. Inscriptions by several of these princes prove that this chronology of the race is from five to six centuries too ancient, and Choranga or more properly Chora Ganga Deita must have lived in the twelfth century of the Christian era, whilst the last, Purushottama, reigned in the fifteenth or sixteenth. In general the inscriptions confirm the account given by Mr Stirling,* which is altogether much fuller and more satisfactory than anything derivable from the Mackenzie Collection. A few trifling matters may perhaps admit of correction, and an inscription procured since Mr Stirling wrote, by Mr Colvile, shews that Choranga was not the founder of the Ganga Vamsa family, but that the first who came into Kalinga, was Ananta Verma,—also called Koldhala, sovereign of Ganga Rdrhi—the low country on the right bank of the Ganges or Tumlook and Midnapore. This occurred at the end of the eleventh century of our era, and from that till the beginning of the sixteenth, the same family occupied the province of Orissa, the boundaries of their rule being extended or contracted variously at various times according to the personal characters of the princes themselves and of those to whom they were opposed. They seem accordingly notwithstanding the contrary pretensions of their panegyrists, to have made little way to the southward, until the overthrow of the Warangal kings. In the course of the fifteenth century they penetrated to Conje Veram, but were compelled to recede before the superior activity and resources of the Rajas of Vijayanagar. The advance of the Mohammedans prevented the Vijayanagar princes from following up their success the vicinity of the same enemies as well as intestine discord confined the Rajas of Cuttack to the natural limits of the province. In A. D. 1558, the Mohammedan general of Bengal invaded the country, killed the Raja, or compelled him to fly it was never known whither, and finally overthrew the independent sovereignty of Orissa.

VIJAYANAGAR.

We now come to the last Hindu principality of any note in the annals of the South of India.

The foundation of the state of Vijayanagar is very generally admitted to have arisen out of the subversion of the Hindu Governments of the Kakateya and Belala Rajas by the incursions of the Mohammedans in the beginning of the fourteenth century, and traditions are tolerably well agreed as to the individuals to whom it is ascribed, Harihara and Bukka Raya, and the celebrated scholar Mddhara entitled Vidyaranya the forest of learning. Accounts however vary very considerably as to the circumstances which connected these persons with the event, or the share they bore in it.

One tradition ascribes the origin of Vijayanagar to Mddhara who having by his devotions obtained the favour of Dhruvaneswari was directed by her to the discovery of a treasure with which he built the city of Vidyanagar or Vijayanagar and reigned over it himself; leaving it to the Kurma or Kuruba family. Another statement describes him as founding the city, and establishing the principality for Bukka, a shepherd who had waited on him and supported him in his devotions. A third account states that Harihara and Bukka two fugitives from Warangal after it was taken by the Mohammedans encountered the sage in the woods, and were elevated by him to the sovereignty over a city which he built for them, and a fourth statement whilst it confirms the latter part of the story, makes the two brothers officers of the Mohammedan conqueror of Warangal, who were sent by their master, after the capture of that city, against the Belal Raja. They were defeated, and their army dispersed, and they fled into the woods where they found Vidyaranya. His treasures enabled them to collect another army with which they obtained a victory over the Belal Raja, but instead of rendering him the servant of their superior, they set up for themselves, by the advice and with the aid of the hermit. There is good reason to know that none of these traditions are entirely correct, although they preserve perhaps, some of the events that actually occurred. Vidyaranya or Madhava was a learned and laborious writer and in various works particularises himself as the minister of Sangama the son of Kampa a prince whose power extended to the southern, eastern and western seas. He also terms Bulka and Harihara the sons of Sangama, and the same relationship is confirmed by inscriptions. The political importance of Sangama is no doubt exaggerated, but it is clear that Bulka and Harihara were not the mere adventurers they are traditionally said to have been. They were descended from a series of petty princes or landholders, possibly feudatories of the Belal kings or even of Pratapa Rudra, who took advantage of a period of public commotion to lay the foundation of a new state. Besides experience and talent, Madhava may have brought pecuniary aid to the undertaking. His title Vidyaranya, and the scope of his writings, show that he was a disciple of Sankaracharya, and in all probability he was connected with the Sringavri establishment, the members of which alarmed by the increasing numbers of the Jangamas and Jains, and the approach of the Mohammedans, may have contributed their wealth and influence to the aggrandisement of the sons of Sangama.

However this may be, there can be no question that the city of Vijayanagar was founded by Bulka and Harihara, on the southern bank of the Tungabhadra river, about the middle of the fourteenth century. The date most commonly given for the foundation of Vijayanagar is Sal 1258, or A.D. 1336, but this is perhaps a few years too soon. The earliest of the grants of Bulka Raya is dated in A.D. 1370, and the latest 1375. The period of his reign is usually called fourteen years which would place his accession to the throne in 1361. Some accounts give him a reign of thirty four years which places him in 1341. So that the traditional chronology is not in all likelihood very far from the truth.

From Bulka to Virupaksha, the third of the name, the usual lists give thirteen princes and a hundred and fifty three years. This series is not entirely confirmed by inscriptions, as is observed elsewhere, (page 265), we have from them but five princes in regular succession, and a sixth cotemporary with the fourth, who may have been the nominal minister or general although in actual power the prince. There may be some omissions in the grants but the number of Rajas in the ordinary lists is rather disproportionate to the whole interval, and allows less than twelve years for the average reign. In this time the Rajas of Vijayanagar, added considerably to their territorial possessions, having subdued the coast of Canara, and great part of Karnala and Telengana. The simultaneous origin and progress of the Dhamini Kings prevented their extending their dominions to the north, and on more than one occasion the destruction of the principality was threatened by the superior prowess and enterprise of the Mohammedans. Towards the close of the fifteenth century the Hindu Rajas enjoyed a respite of some duration, in consequence of the decline of the Dhamini dynasty, and foundation of those of Bijapur and Ahmednagar. Instead however of consolidating their power, or taking advantage of the discontents of their enemies, the opportunity seems to have been lost in discord and disorganisation at home.

The circumstances under which the Kuruba family became extinct are but obscurely adverted to in any of our authorities. The last prince was Virupaksha whose grants extend from A. D. 1473 to 1478. According to some accounts his territory was subdued by a Telenga Raja, but others say that having no issue, he raised one of his slaves named Sinhama, a Telenga by birth, to the throne. Agreeably to the latter version of the story, Sinhama, entitled Prajña Deva, reigned but four years, and his son Vira Narasinha who succeeded him, but two he being also childless gave his signet to his falconer, Narasa or Narannha. An interval of eight years occurs between the inscriptions of Virupaksha and Narasinha which these events would conveniently supply. There is no question that Narasinha was of a different family and nation from the preceding Rajas of Vijayanagar, and became irregularly possessed of the throne. He is admitted to have been a Telenga, and is usually called the son of Isvara Raja the petty servant of their superior, they set up for themselves, by the advice and with the aid of the hermit. There is good reason to know that none of these traditions are entirely correct, although they preserve perhaps, some of the events that actually occurred. Vidyaranya or Maddhava was a learned and laborious writer and in various works particularises himself as the minister of Sangama the son of Kampa a prince whose power extended to the southern, eastern and western seas. Besides experience and talent, Maddhava may have brought pecuniary aid to the undertaking. His title Vidyaranya, and the scope of his writings, shew that he was a disciple of Saularācharya, and in all probability he was connected with the Singagiri establishment, the members of which alarmed by the increasing numbers of the Jangamas and Jains, and the approach of the Mohammedans, may have contributed their wealth and influence to the aggrandisement of the sons of Sangama.

However this may be, there can be no question that the city of Vijayanagar was founded by Bulka and Harihara, on the southern bank of the Tungabhadra river, about the middle of the fourteenth century. In this time the Rajas of Vijayanagar, added considerably to their territorial possessions; having subdued the coast of Canara, and great part of Karnata and Telingana. The simultaneous origin and progress of the Bhamini kings prevented their extending their dominions to the north, and on more than one occasion the destruction of the principality was threatened by the superior prowess and enterprise of the Mohammedans. Towards the close of the fifteenth century the Hindu Rajas enjoyed a respite of some duration, in consequence of the decline of the Bhamini dynasty, and foundation of those of Bijapur and Ahmednagar. Instead however of consolidating their power, or taking advantage of the dissensions of their enemies, the opportunity seems to have been lost in discord and disorganisation at home.

The circumstances under which the Kuruba family became extinct are but obscurely adverted to in any of our authorities. The last prince was Virapalksha whose grants extend from A. D. 1473 to 1478. According to some accounts his territory was subdued by a Telinga Raja, but others say that having no issue, he raised one of his slaves named Sinhamā, a Telinga by birth, to the throne. Agreeably to the latter version of the story, Sinhamā, entitled Fraurha Dera, reigned but four years, and his son Vira Narasinha who succeeded him, but two: he being also childless gave his signet to his falconer, Narasa or Narasinha. An interval of eight years occurs between the inscriptions of Virapalksha and Narasinha which these events would conveniently supply. There is no question that Narasinha was of a different family and nation from the preceding Rajas of Vijayanagar, and became irregularly possessed of the throne. He is admitted to have been a Telinga, and is usually called the son of Iswara Raja the petty sovereign of Karnul and Arviri, a tract of country on the Tunga Bhadrā to the east of it, near its junction with the Krishna, his grants extend from A. D. 1487 to 1508.

Narasinha had two sons Viranarasinha and Krishna Raya, the former by one of his queens, the latter by a slave or concubine a story is related of the exposure of Krishna Raya when a child by order of the queen who was jealous of the favour he enjoyed with his father. He was secretly brought up by one of the ministers, and restored to Narasinha when dying, who bequeathed to him the succession which by the judicious measures of the minister he secured. Some accounts state that he acted as the minister and general of his brother whilst he lived, and became Raja on the death of that prince, other accounts assert that the latter was deposed, and one narrative adds that he died of vexation in consequence. It is clear that the regal power was usurped by Krishna Raya, at first perhaps in a subordinate character, but finally as Raja.

The existence of an independent principality on the east so near as Karnul the presence of the Mohammedan sovereignties on the north, and the continued series of Pandyan and Chola princes to the south, shew that the Rāj of Vijayanagar could not boast of a very spacious domain on Krishna Raya's accession. From the range however of the grants of former princes, particularly of Hariharā, it cannot be questioned that their sway had at one time extended much farther east, and it must have therefore been considerably reduced before the Aurula dynasty was exterminated—Krishna Raya not only restored the kingdom to its former limits but extended them in every direction. He defeated the Adil Shahi princes on the north, and maintained possession of the country to the southern bank of the Krishna, on the east he captured Kondavir and Warangal, and ascended to Cuttack where he wedded the daughter of the Raja as the bond of peace. In the south his officers governed Seringapatam, and as we have seen founded a new dynasty of princes at Trichinopoly and Madura. The western coast had been held apparently through some extent by his predecessors, but he added to the Vijayanagar territory in that quarter also, and his besieging and taking Ruchol on Salsette is recorded by Portuguese writers, whilst the imperfect traditions of Malabar preserve the fact of part of that province at least having been governed by the officers of Krishna Raya, although they refer the circumstance to an erroneous era. At no period probably in the history of the south of India did any of its political divisions equal in extent and power that of Vijayanagar in the reign of Krishna Raya.

The reputation of Krishna Raya is not restricted to his warlike achievements, and he is celebrated as the great patron of Telugu literature. He is said to have had a number of eminent men attached to his court, eight of whom were particularly famed, and are known as the Ashtha dig gaju, in allusion to the eight elephants that support the universe at the cardinal and intermediate points of the compass. The names of some of these will be found in the following pages as well as a notice of a number of their compositions.

The Hindu traditions represent Krishna Raya as conducting his affairs both in peace and war in person; they acknowledge, however, that he benefited by the aid and council of the Brahman minister of his father, who had preserved his life, and who continued to be his minister until his death, three years preceding that of the Raja. This person is named Tinma Raja, and is evidently the same with the Heemraje of Scott who makes so great a figure in the Mohammedan annals. The account given by Ierisila of the various pageant princes successively elevated and deposed by Heemraje originates probably in the circumstances attending the death of Vira-arasinh and the accession of Krishna Raya, but the particulars are evidently confused and inaccurate; the date of numerous inscriptions testifying for instance the reign of Krishna Raya for above twenty years, although the Mohammedan account would leave it to be concluded that he came to the throne an infant, and died without reaching maturity.

The transactions that followed the death of Krishna Raya are very unsatisfactorily related by the native writers. The prince had no legitimate male children of his own and the nearest heir Setti Raja who is variously termed his brother, cousin, and nephew, being absent, so placed a prince named Sadasiva on the throne, under the charge of Râma Raja his own son in-law Achyuta returned and assumed the Government, and on his death Sadasiva succeeded under the care and control of Rama as before. There is in some statements an intimation of a short lived usurpation by a person named Sakka Timma, and of the murder of the young prince who succeeded Krishna Raya in the first instance, and the Mohammedan accounts tend to shew that some such transaction took place. On the downfall of the usurper, the succession proceeded as above described. The reigns of Achyuta and Sadasiva and the cotemporary existence of Rama, are proved by numerous grants. Those of Achyuta extend through a period of twelve years from A.D. 1530, to 1542 and Sadasiva's from 1542 to 1570, whilst those of Râma occur from 1547 to 1562. Who Sadasiva was, does not very distinctly appear. Some accounts call him the son of Achyuta, whilst others represent him as descended from the former Rajas of Vijayanagar, at any rate it is evident that during Rama's life he was but a pageant prince. According to the Mohammedan author, Ramraj was the son of Heemraj and son in law of a Raja whom he names Suaroy, erroneously for Krishnaroy. Rama Ray, he adds, succeeded on his father's death, to his office and power, and on the death of an infant Raja, for whom he managed the affairs of the Government, he placed another infant of the same family on the munsind, and committing the charge of the prince's person to his maternal uncle named Haji Trimil Roy, retained the political administration of the state. During his absence on a military excursion, the uncle of the Raja and several nobles conspired against the minister, and gained to their party the officer of Ramraj, one of his slaves who had been left in military charge of the capital. Finding the insurgents too strong for him Râma submitted to an amicable compromise with them, and was allowed to reside on his own territorial possessions. After a short interval the slave being no longer necessary was murdered, and Trimil the uncle assumed the whole power. He next killed his nephew and reigned on his own behalf, conducting himself with great tyranny, the chiefs conspired to dethrone him, but with the assistance of Ibrahim Adil Shah he was enabled to maintain his authority. On the retreat of his Mohammedan allies, the Hindu nobles with Rama at their head again rebelled, defeated the usurper, and besieged him in his palace in Vijayanagar, when finding his fortune desperate, he destroyed himself. Rama then became Raja. Now comparing this with the Hindu accounts we should be disposed to identify Hoje Trimal with Achyuta Raya. Some of the Hindu accounts as above noticed, concur with the Mohammedan as to the murder of the young prince, and in Salika Timma we may have the slave of Rama although the part assigned him in the two stories does not exactly coincide. Rama, both agree, was obliged to resign the authority he held after the death of Krishna Raya. The only irreconcileable point is that of the Hindu accounts which specify the appointment in the first instance of Sadasiva. But the weight of evidence is unsavourable to their accuracy, and Sadasiva was probably made Raja by Rama and his party in opposition to Achyuta Raya. This will account for the uncertainty that prevails as to his connection with Krishna Raya, as well for his having taken, as some statements aver, from the family of the former Rajas.

That Rama Raja was a man of spirit and conduct is evident from the course of Mohammedan history. The princes of the Dekhan were glad to court his alliance. Ali Adil Shah and Kuttab Shah were compelled to purchase his forbearance by territorial concessions. The arrogance with which he seems to have been in consequence inflated, led him to treat their ambassadors with indignity, and insulted pride, religious bigotry and political dread combined them in arms against him. The Padshahs of Bijapore, Golconda, Dowlatabad, and Berar, united their forces in the year 1561, and marched to Talikota, on the Krishna, to overthrow the power of the Vijayanagar principality. The Hindu prince on hearing of their designs collected a powerful force, and occupied the right bank of the Krishna, which the allies were unable to cross in the face of the hostile army. By a judicious feint the Sultans drew the Hindu prince away from the ford and effected the passage—a general action ensued in which the Hindus had the advantage until the Raja was taken prisoner. The Hindu account says that the divisions of Kuttab Shah and Ali Ali Shah had been defeated, but the forces of Ali Adil and Ammad al Mulk covered their retreat. The Hindus conceiving the enemy annihilated gave themselves up to rejoicing and festivity, and were surprised in their encampment. Ferishta who may be considered as a cotemporary, admits that the wings of the Mohammedan army were thrown into disorder, and that some of the leaders despaired of the day, when it was retrieved by the success of the centre under Nizam Shah and the capture of Rama Raja. The Hindu prince was taken before Nizam Shah who ordered his head to be struck off, and mounted on a lance to intimidate the victorious division of the Hindu army. The Hindu accounts concur in the capture and death of Rama Raja but ascribe them to Ali Adil Shah. The Sultan is described as beheading the Raja with his own hand at the request of the latter, to save him from the personal degradation of confinement. The Hindu memoirs assert that Ali Adil Shah was forced into the war by the other Mohammedan princes, but Ferishta makes him the author of the confederacy. That writer mentions also the visit made formerly by Ali Adil Shah to Vijayanagar to secure the alliance of Ramraj and his adoption as a son by the Raja's mother. In the Ramraja Charitra the Hindu prince terms the sultan his son, and reminds him how often in infancy he had sat upon his knees. In complying with his request and striking off his head, Ali Adil Shah, is represented as performing no more than filial duty.

After the defeat of the Hindu prince the confederates marched to Vijayanagar, which they took, plundered and destroyed. Ferishta writing about twenty or thirty years afterwards, observes, that the city was still uninhabited and in ruins, whilst the country was occupied by the Zemindars, each of whom had assumed an independent power in his own district. Several of these were members either of the Royal Family of Vijayanagar or of that of Rama Raja. Grants in the reign of Sadasma are continued to Sal 1492, (A.D. 1570), six years after the battle of Talikota, and his descendants are traced as sovereigns of the principality of Bednur to the middle of the eighteenth century. Venkatadri one brother of Rama maintained himself at Belkonda and Chendragiri, whilst another brother Trimul, retained possession of Penakonda. A son of Rama Raja, with the aid of one of his uncles, recovered possession of Anaikundi and Vijayanagar on the direct line becoming extinct, Venkappa, a kinsman of the Chendragiri branch succeeded, the seventh from him, Timmapa was dispossessed by Tippu Sultan and became a pensioner of the British Government.

It would extend this sketch of the history of the South of India beyond the limits we have proposed, to enter into the family histories of the many petty chiefs who succeeded to the fragments of the Vijayanagar principality after its subversion, and of most of whom, ample notices are to be found in the Mackenzie Collections. The family of most celebrity, and the only one now retaining any importance, that of the Hindu Rajas of Mysore, has found a historian, and the rest are scarcely of sufficient political importance to deserve one. A reason which will probably be thought satisfactory has also been assigned for not making any use of the Mohammedan and Mahratta collections in the present outline, and to this may be added the want of space necessarily attending the summary form of an introduction. The same cause precludes any advantage being taken of the materials which exist for illustrating the manners and institutions of the various tribes of the Dekhin, and which are fully delineated in the documents specified in the ensuing pages. If opportunity should hereafter occur, and the requisite authority be obtained, these subjects as well as a fuller account of the political revolutions of the Peninsula may be reduced at some future period to a shape fitted for public perusal.

SANSKRIT BOOKS.

VEDAS.

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

The Rig or Rich is usually considered as the first of the four Vedas, and is so named from its consisting chiefly of hymns or laudatory prayers, (from Rich, to laud or praise) The collection of the hymns of this Veda is called its Sanhitá, and the Sanhitá is subdivided into eight Ashtakas, or ten Mandalas, or sixty-four Adhyayas, and contains rather more than 1,000 Suktas or Hymns, or 10,000 Richas or Stanzas This manuscript contains the Sanhitá incomplete, or complete Ashtakas, 1st, 2nd and 5th, the first four, and 7th and 8th Adhyáyas of the fourth Ashtaka, first six Adhyáyas of the 6th Ashtaka, and the first four Adhydyas of the eighth Ashtaka The Nandinagari character differs very little from the Devanagari

2—The Rig Veda

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

This contains four Sections of the third Book, or Ashtaka

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

The 6th Book or Ashtaka

4—Suktas

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

Miscellaneous Hymns belonging to the Rig Veda

5—Santi Pralaranam by Baudhāyana

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

A collection of verses, &c., extracted from the Rig Veda, and supposed to be efficacious in averting or removing calamity, disease, &c. The collection is attributed to the sage Baudhāyana.

6—The Anukramanikā, &c.

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

A portion of the index of the Rig Veda, with other tracts

7—Fragments

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

Various portions of the Rig Veda mostly defective

Palm leaves—Telugu Character

Rules for the different ceremonies and sacrifices of the Hindus, according to the ritual of the Rig Veda, by Aśvalāyana, a Rishi, in twelve chapters

9—Yajur Veda

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

The second sacred collection of the Hindus, relating chiefly to oblations and sacrifices, as the name implies, being derived from Yaj to worship. It is divided into two principal portions, the White Yajush or Vājasaneyi, and the Black or Taittiriya. This manuscript contains the following portions of the Sanhita of the latter:

Kanda or book the first, 8 Prasnas or Chapters

Ditto second, 6 ditto

Ditto third, 6 ditto

10—Yajur Veda

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

A portion of the Sanhita

Kanda or Book first, 7 Prasnas or Chapters

Ditto sixth, 6 ditto

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

A portion of the Sanhita arranged in a peculiar manner, or Pada

of Kánda or book 4th, two Prasnas

Ditto 5th, four ditto

Palm leaves—Telugu Character

A collection of the precepts and prayers of the Sanhita of the Taittiriya portion of the second Veda containing—the first, second, third and fourth Kandas or Books, two Prasnas of the fifth, seven of the sixth, and the seventh or last entire

PURANAS

a Paper—Devanagari Character

b Palm leaves—Telugu Character

The manuscript a comprises three different portions of this work.

1 A portion of the Tatola Jharda, containing the episode of the seizure of the sacrificial horse fabricated by Rama, by Viramari, a follower of Sita, and his discomfiture and death in consequence, with the interview between Sita and Rama, and the restoration of the horse to life by the combined favour of the two deities

2 A portion of the Uttara Khanda, the conversation between Dilipa and Vasishtha, and subsequently between Sua and Pariati, upon the efficacy of ablution and religious rites in the month of Mâgh. This section includes an enumeration of the Puranas, substituting the Vishnu for the Vayu, it also classes the Puranas, thus —

The Matsya, Kûrma, Lingga, Sua, Skanda, and Agni Puranas, are of the Tama Guna, the quality of darkness or ignorance

The Vishnu, Narediya, Bhagarat, Garura Padma, and Varaha belong to the Satwika quality

The Brahmunda, Bhatishya, Markandeya, Vamana, and Brahmâ, are of the Rajas, or quality of passion

3 Pulastya's conference with Brahhma relating to places of pilgrimage, &c being part of the first section or Srishti Khanda.

Manuscript b contains the greater portion of the Uttara Khanda or last portion, commencing with the 29th Chapter and ending with the 50th. It is little else than a manual of different Vratas or religious rites to be observed on various days of the fortnight, or in different months, as narrated in conversations between the Pandavas and Nareda, Sua and Pariati and others.

2 — Agni Purana

Palm leaves—Telugu Character

The Purana, is named from Garura, as one of the rewards of his devotion, whilst yet a Bird, to Vishnu the substance was communicated by Vishnu to Rudra, and overheard by Brahma, by whom it was revealed to Vyasa it is a Vaishnava Purana, but abounds with Tantrika rites and formulas it contains also an astronomical and medical portion the latter of some length, but no history nor genealogy Manuscript a is incomplete

5—Brahmaranarita Purana

- Palm leaves—Telugu Character

This Purana is so named from its containing an account of the worldly manifestations of the Supreme spirit or Brahma, hero identified with Krishna. It is narrated by Sutu, to the Rishis, extends to 18,000 stanzas, and consists of four portions The Brahma Khanda describing the creation and the nature of the deity The Prakriti Khanda treating of the various forms of the female personifications of passive matter The Ganesa Khanda describing the birth and adventures of Ganesa, and the Krishna Janma Khanda relating the birth and acts of Krishna, and his mistress Rādhā the manuscript is incomplete beginning with the 1st and ending with the 40th Chapter

6—Langa Purana

- a Palm leaves—Telugu Character
- b Palm leaves—Grandham Character

A Purana of the Saiva class it is supposed to be narrated to Nārada and the Rishis at the Naimisvara forest by Suta, who heard it from Vyasa. It consists of 11,000 verses, in two books The first gives an account of the origin of the Langa and various forms of Siva, the usual Pauranic description of the universe, and a few genealogical events from Priyatirala to Krishna The destruction of Tripura and other demons by Mahadeva, or the members of his family and instructions for the performance of different ceremonies in honour of Mahadeva. The latter subject is continued through the second book, illustrated by different legendary tales. The first book consists of 105 sections, the second of 48. In some copies the division is different, as in the present in which the second book contains 55 sections. Manuscript a. is part of the second portion of the Linga Purana, from the fourth to the fifty-fifth and last chapter. Manuscript b. contains the last section of the first portion, and the last portion entire.

7.—Märkandeya Purána

Palm leaves—Telugu Character

The first portion of the Märkandeya Purána, consisting of seventy-three sections. Thus Purána is related by four birds of marvellous origin to Jaimini, on his being referred to them by the sage Märkandeya. It commences with some account of Krishna and his usual companions, of whom his brother Baladeva is said to have been Suta the usual narrator of the *Purána*s. A variety of ordinary legends, chiefly of a Vaishnava character follow, with an account of the creation of the universe, as communicated by Märkandeya to Krostuki, and a description of the different Manvantaras with legends of the events which severally occurred, or are to occur, in those periods all of a mythological or sacerdotal character. The Chandi Path, or Durga Mahatmya, in which the victories of Durgá over different Asuras are recorded, and which is a work of great repute in almost all parts of India, is a portion of this Purána. It is introduced as the history of the Muni of the eighth period, or Savarni the son of the sun, who in the second or Swarochisha Manvantara was a king named Suratha, to whom the exploits of Durga were then related, in consequence of hearing which, and his propitiation of the goddess, he became a Muni in a subsequent birth. The Märkandeya Purána is said to contain 9000, Stanzas.

8.—Kurma Purana

- a. Paper—Devanágari Character
- b. Palm leaves—Telugu Character
- c. Palm leaves—Telugu Character

This Purána although named after one of the avatars of Vishnu, the tortoise, is considered as one of those especially belonging to the Saiva sects. It recommends the worship of Mahádeva as Rudra or Nílalohita. It contains like the rest, an enumeration of all the eighteen Puráṇas. The list given in this work is the following, the Brahmá, Padma, Siva, Bhágavat Bhavishya, Náradíya, Márlandeya, Agni, Brahmarairarita, Linga, Varáha, Skanda, Vámana, Kúrma, Matsya, Garúra, Váyu and Brahmánda Puráṇas. The Manuscript a. contains but 37 sections; the complete work is in two parts, section first containing 55, and section second 47 portions. Manuscripts b. and c. are entire.

Palm leaves—Telugu Character.

- a. First and Second Books
- b. Third Book.
- c. Fourth and Fifth Books
- d. Sixth Book.
- e. Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth Books.
- f. Tenth Book.
- g. Eleventh Book.
- h. Twelfth Book.
- i. Eleventh and Twelfth Books.

This Puráṇa, is the most celebrated and one of the most modern of the number; it is not the less valuable as it is much more full than any of the rest. It also contains much that has been drawn from other sources, which though somewhat disfigured, is consequently preserved.

The first book or Skanda comprises in 19 chapters, the opening, the encounter of Súta and Saunaka, when the former repeats what he related to the Rishis, the supremacy of Vishnu and faith in him, his Avatars, the history of Náreda, the account of Parikshit after the disappearance of the Pandus and Krishna, and of this king being cursed by a Rishi, and bitten by a venomous snake.

In the second Book Súla, to prepare Parikshit for death, relates to him the Bhágarat, the substance of which was originally communicated by Brahmá to Náreda, in four verses: the creation of the world, the 24 Avatars of Hari, the excellence of Náráyana and end of the Brahmakalpa: 10 chapters.

Book 3rd, 36 Chapters The several creations and destructions, the submersion of the Vedas, and their recovery by the Boar incarnation, also the Kapila Avatar the narration here proceeds in a conversation between Vidura and Maitreya

Book 4th, 31 Chapters, contains the genealogy of the Manu Swayambhuva's progeny, the quarrel between Daksha and Mahadeva and the elevation of Dhruva, to the dignity of the Pole Star, the history of Vena and Prithu, and the story of Prachetas

Book 5th, 26 Chapters Of Priyavrata and his sons, of his grandson Nalhi, of Rishabha and Bharata Description of Jambudisipa, of the other Dwipas, situation of the sun and planets, &c

Book 6th, 19 Chapters The histories of Ajamila, Viswarupa, Vrtrásura, of the family of the sun and origin of the Maruts

Book 7th, 15 Chapters History of Hiranyakashipu and Praháda of Tripurasura, and duties of a Brahmachari

Book 8th, 24 Chapters Of the Menus subsequent to Swayambhuva, of the sacrifice of Bali and Dwarf Avatar, of the Matsya Avatar

Book 9th, 24 Chapters Of the Vanasikala Manvantara, the sons of Ishwaku and descendants of the Menu, and the genealogies of kings to the birth of Krishna

Book 10th In two parts Part 1st, 49 Chapters the adventures of Krishna until his departure from Vrindavan Part 2nd the adventures of Krishna and his posterity

Book 11th, 31 Chapters Of faith in Krishna and his worship, of his death, and the destruction of Dvaraka and the Yadava race.

Book 12th, 13 Chapters Of the kings subsequent to Parikshit, vices of the Kali age, death of Parikshit, description of the Vedas and Puranas, meditation of Markandeya and praises of the Bhagavat Purana

10 —The Matsya Purana Palm leaves—Telugu Character

This Purana is related by Suta to the Rishis in reply to their enquiry why Vishnu assumed the form of a fish, and it commences with the story of Vairavatā Menu, and the deluge, as translated by Sir William Jones from the Bhagavat. The Menu asks the Fish the story of the creation of the universe, &c and his replies constitute the supposed original of this Purana, which contains the history of the different Mankantars, some genealogical and legendary accounts of the Kings of the Solar and Lunar Races to the time of Krishna, directions for observing different Vratas, geographical description of the universe, various wars between the Gods and Demons, and especially the destruction of Taraka, Hiranyakasipu and Andhaka, the excellence of Kasi, and a number of other Tirthas. Some chapters then follow on Polity, Punishment, Purification, and Sacrifice, and the work concludes with a short prophetic notice of the Kali age, the Mlechcha princes, who are to rule in it, and the efficacy of gifts. The work comprises 264 sections, of which this copy contains but sixty two.

11.—Varaha Purana

Palm leaves—Grandham Character

The Varala Purana is communicated in the form of a dialogue between Vishnu, as the Varaha, or Boar Avatar, and the earth to whom the deity relates the creation of the universe, the origin of the Rishis and their descendants, the mode of observing a number of Vratas, or religious obligations, the division of the universe, the destruction of Mahishasura by Durga, and the efficacy of gifts. The different rites to be performed, holy places to be visited, and amongst these the supremacy of Mathura. The work sometimes appears as divided into three books, of which the first contains 107 sections, the second 60, and the third or Mathura Mahatmya 64.

12.—Viswakarma Purana

a Paper—Telugu Character
b Palm leaves—Karnata Character

A compilation of formulæ and legends relating to Viswakarma and the castes of artificers, attributed idly to Viswakarma. The first is rather a Telugu than Sanscrit work, the Sanscrit passages from the Velas and Puranas, serving as a text for a fuller explanation in the Telugu language. The second is a different work, agreeing only in name and subject.

13.—Vrihat Naradiya Purána

Paper—Devanágari Character

The Vrihat Náradíya, or great Náradíya is so named to discriminate it from the Náreda or Náradíya Purana, or perhaps from the latter, which is an Upapurana unless however the same with the latter it cannot be properly included in either class. Although said to contain 25,000 stanzas, it is rarely if ever met with of that extent, and appears to be complete in 38 sections, containing about 3,500 stanzas. It is a Vaishnava work, supposed to be repeated by Súta to the Rishis, having been originally communicated by Brahma to Náreda, and by Náreda to Sanatkumara. There is little in this Purana conformable to the ordinary contents of such works, and such legends as are found are mere vehicles for panegyrics upon Vishnu and recommendations of implicit devotion to that Divinity.

14.—Sri Bhagavat Purana

Paper—Devanagari Character

A Purana of importance in the literary history of these works, as it is distinct from the popular work of the same name, supposed by some to be a later composition it is named from Bhagavat or Durgá, whence it is identified with the Devi Bhagavat an Upapurana, but perhaps erroneously, as it is narrated by Súta like the rest and is termed a Mahapurana we have in this, the following enumeration of the Puranas:

The Matsya ,	Stanzas	14,000
„ Markandeya ,	„	9,000
„ Bhavishya ,	„	14,500
„ Bhagavata ,	„	18,000
„ Brahma ,	„	10,000
„ Brahmanda ,	„	12,100
„ Brahmavarrilla ,	„	18,000
„ Vamana ,	„	10,000
„ Vayu ,	„	6,000
„ Vishnu ,	„	23,000

Tho Varaha,	Stanzas	24,000
" Agni	"	16,000
" Narada,	"	25,000
" Padma,	,	55,000
" Ianga	"	11,000
" Garura	"	49,000
" Kurma,	"	17,000
" Shanda,	,	81,000

The list of Upapuranas is the following

*Sanatumara Narasinha Naraditya Sua Durvasas Kapila
Usanas, Menu Varuna Kalika, Samba Nandi Saura Parasara
Aditya Maheswara Bhagavata and Vasishtha*

15—Bharishyollara Purana

Paper—Devanagari Characters

A Supplement to the prophetic Purana, supposed to be revealed by Krishna to Yudhishthira. The subjects of the work are the visit of Vyasa to Yudhishthira the creation of the world, the origin of Maya the impurities of human nature, sins and their removal by various observances. The Manuscript is complete, containing 243 pages.

16—Kalika Purana

Paper—Devanagari Character

This Purana is communicated by Markandeya to the Rishis, in explanation of the union of Kali or Purtasi with Sia. It is a voluminous work, in 98 or 100 Chapters, and consists of legends relating to the different manifestations of Diti, as Yoganidra or Sati, with the legend of Daksha's sacrifice, as Uma, or Kali, or Girija or Pariati, or Bladrakali, Kumālīya, or Kamesicari, &c. The work contains nothing of ordinary Pauranic matters, as the genealogies of the Menus or kings, or the disposition of the universe, but in their stead has a number of legends peculiar to itself, as the story of Arundhati, of the River Chandrabheda, and of Naraka, the son of the Earth, the birth of Bharrata and Velala, and the origin of the Brahmaputra river, with the circumstances that gave sanctity to many parts of Kumarupa or Assam. It contains also instructions for the performance of various acts of worship and devotion, conformably to the system of the Tantras, to which class of works it is closely allied. This copy is far from complete, extending to but one third of the work.

17 — Mudgala Purana

Paper—Devanāgarī parts

This Purana is attributed as usual to Sūta, the pupil of Vyāsa who repeats to the sages in Narmisharanya, what had been originally communicated to Daksha by the Rishi Mudgala, whence the name of the Purana. It is avowedly subsequent to the other Puranas, which the introduction states had been previously revealed to the Munis and had left them undetermined which deity or faith to prefer they therefore propose their doubts to Sūta, and to remove them he repeats this work, the object of which is to identify all the Gods with Ganapati or Ganesa in his different forms of Vakratunda, Eladanta, Mahodara and Gajananā the work is the text book of the Ganapatya Sect.

MAHATMYAS □

The Puranas contain short notices of the principal Tirthas or places of peculiar sanctity, and occasionally give detailed accounts of those of more than usual holiness, as Benares, Gaya, Mntbura, and others. In imitation of this example, and with the interested purpose of accrediting different temples, Legends have been very extensively fabricated, relating to the circumstances under which each acquired its sacred character, and illustrating the advantages of worshipping at its shrine. This has been especially the case in the South of India, where every pagoda has its Sīhala or Local Purāna, or Mahatmya Legendary account of its Sanctity or Greatness. These are invariably stated to be extracts or sections from different Purānas, in which however they will be sought in vain, never having formed a part of the original works. In some instances indeed they exceed in bulk the size of the work from which they are professedly extracted. Although referred very indiscriminately to different Purānas, the far larger portion are said to belong to the Skanda Purāna, a preference easily accounted for, as that Purāna no longer exists in an entire form. It is in fact made up of detached sections, of uncertain denomination and extent, and therefore readily admits of any additions.

1 — Agnisvara Mahatmya

The Muni being thus born, received from Vishnu the fibres of the stem of the lotus that grew from his navel, and being supplied with a loom and other materials by the Demon Maya, he fabricated dresses for all the gods, the spirits of heaven and hell, and the inhabitants of the earth. By the latter he was made king of Amodapattan: from the former he received inestimable gifts, and two wives, one the daughter of Sesha the great Serpent, the other the daughter of Surya or the Sun.

Deranga had three sons by the daughter of Surya and one by the daughter of Sesha; the latter conquered Surashtra, the former succeeded their father at Amodapur, when they were attacked by a number of combined princes, overthrown and reduced to a miserable condition, in which they were glad to maintain themselves by the art of weaving, which they had learned from their father, and thus gave rise to the caste of weavers. This reverse of fortune originated in an imprecation denounced by the nymph Kembha on Deranga for being cold to her advances, in punishment of which she declared he should be reduced to a degraded condition. The favour of Sadasiva averted the curse from Dantanga but it took effect on his posterity. The Legend is said to be an extract from the Brahmanda Purana.

6 — Madhwacharya Vijaya

Palm leaves—Nandinagari Character

The Triumphs of Madhwa, the founder of a sect of Vaishnavas in the 13th century. He was born in Tuluva in A. D. 1199, and is supposed to have been an incarnation of Sesha. The chief temples of this sect are on the Canara Coast that established by the founder is at Udupi. This account of Madhu's success in refuting other sects is by Nayan, Pundit, the son of Trivikrami.

7 — Mayuraterma Cheritra

Paper—Devanagari Character

A legendary account of Mayuraterma, and other sovereigns of the Kadamba race, who reigned on the Canara Coast. The founder of the Kadamba family, who reigned at Jayanti or Banavasi, was born of a drop of the perspiration of Siva, which fell upon a Kadamba tree. He had three eyes, and from this circumstance, and the place of his birth, was named Trinetra Kadamba. After him, the princes in regular succession were Madhukeshwar, Mallinath and Chandraterma. The last had two sons, one called also Chandraterma the other Purandara. The former of these had two wives, one of whom when pregnant, he left in a temple at Vallabhapur, where she was delivered of the subject of this legend, who was named Mayura or Silki (peacock) terma, from his eating whilst an infant the head of a peacock, to which form a worshipper of Siva had transmigrated with the boon that whoever ate the head should become a king. Chandraterma having died in retirement, and Purandara being childless, Mayuraterma became king of Banavasi. He here obtained 'the sword of sharpness, the shoes of swiftness and garment of invisibility,' and the exploits he performed with the aid of these, constitutes the bulk of the tract. It is also recorded that he was the first of his race who brought Brahmins from the north to the western Coast, and established them at

Banavassi He was succeeded by his Son, another Trinetra Kadamba, by whom colonies of the Brahmans introduced by his father, were distributed in Hann and Tulua, and especially at the shrine of Niva at Gokarna, which he rescued from a Chandala prince

This work places the Kadamba dynasty after the common Pauranic dynasties of the Kali age. In other tracts current in the Dekhin, the Kadamba is inserted in the midst of them, or anterior to the Maanas and Yavanas, whose residence is transferred from Kilakila in the Puranas, to Anagundi, in the local traditions (See Buchanan's Mysore, 3, 111) This is egregious blundering or worse, and is intended to place the origin of the Kadambas, nearly 1500 years before the Christian era. Inscriptions of the family are found however as late as the 12th century after Christ, and it seems likely that the tradition current in some parts of the south, that Mayuravarma lived about 1000 years ago, or in the 8th or 9th century is not far from the truth

Palm leaves—Telugu Character

A Poetical work containing stanzas on various subjects by Pattu bhatta. The collection is of a very miscellaneous description, and comprises stanzas on moral and social duties, rules for particular ceremonies, and personal conduct, sketches of character, and descriptions of persons and places, in a brief, flowery, and obscure style. The 77th Chapter contains short accounts of celebrated Princes from Vikramaditya to Sinha Bhupah or Sarvajna Sinha Nayudu a petty prince originally of Kanakagiri, who extended his power over part of the Rajamahendri district and made Pithapur or Peddapur his Capital. The list includes some of the Chola and Pandyan Princes, Vishnu Verddhana of Rajamahendri, Madhava Verma of Anumakonda, Vellala Raya, of Dhola'samudra Hammira prince of Chitore, Alla ud din of Delhi, Ahmed Shah of Calburga, Rama deva of Deragiri, Pratapa Rûrda of Varankal, Erungala of Curgode, several of the Vijayapura princes, some of the Reddywar family of Condavir, and the author's patron. Each has one or two verses, as of the latter, the author says,

"The Bees (Shatpadas or Six footed) that visited the tree of heaven, returned with the same number of feet with which they went, but all those who came on two feet to Sinha Bhupa, shall return with six —(i.e. on elephants or horses)

The king Sinha Bhupa is attended by dancing girls, whose beauty is as splendid as gems, by sons of a disposition soothing as sandal, and by sovereigns of exalted characters"

The rest is apparently much in the same puerile style

The author was a Brahman of the Vadhula tribe, an inhabitant of the endowed village of Kulamramipuri, about 50 miles from Masulipatam the date of the work is Saka 1338 or A.D. 1416

17—Sitatalwa Retnalara

Palm leaves—Telugu Character

JAIN LITERATURE.1—*Adi Purána

- a Sanscrit, Hala Karnáta Character, Palm leaves
- b Do incomplete, 25 Sections
- c Do do, the last portion

The first Purána, or more correctly the first part of a collective body of legends, to which the Jainas have applied the term Purána. The compilation is ascribed to Jinasena Achárya, who is said to have lived in the reign of Vikramáditya, but who was probably much later. In the Purána however, the interlocutors are Srenika the king, and Gautama the disciple of Mahávira, who relates the formation of the present world, and the birth and actions of Vrishabha, the first Tirthankara or Pontiff, and Bharata the Chakravarti or universal Emperor, until the death of emancipation of both According to this authority, Vrishabha was first born, as Mahabala Chakravarti, being instructed in the Jain doctrines, he was next born in the second heaven as Lalitanya deva. He was next born as Vajrapangha, son of Vajrabhū, king of Utpala lata, a city on the Sitoda, one of the rivers of Mahameru. Having in this existence given food to a Jain mendicant, he was born as a teacher of that faith named Arya. From thence he returned to the second heaven, as Suayamprabha deva, and was again born a prince, the son of the Raja of Sasini mahanagar, by the name of Sveda. He again became a divinity as Achyutendra, presiding over the 16th Svarga or heaven. He was then born as Vajrasabha, son of Vajrasena, king of Pundarikini nagar, having obtained great purity, he was born as Sarrarhasiddhi Deva in a part of the upper world above the 16th heaven, and only 12 Yojans from the site of Moksha or final liberation. His next birth was as Vrishabha, the Tirthankara, the son of Nubha, by Meru devi, king and queen of Sahela nagar. His incarnation was announced by the fall, morning and evening for six months, of three hundred and fifty millions of precious stones. The goddesses Sri, Kri, Dhreti, Kirtti, Budhi and Lalsimi were sent by Devendra to wait on Meru Devi, during her pregnancy, and feed her with the fruit of the Kalpa, or all bestowing tree of heaven, and at his birth, Devendra and all the inhabitants of every division of the universe came to render homage. Devendra bathed the child with the contents of the Sea of milk, and gave him the name of Vrishabha. The saint had two wives, and a hundred children, for whose instruction, he invented all the arts and sciences. Thus, he taught dramatic poetry to his son Bharata, amatory poetry to his son Bahubali, grammar to his daughter Brahmi and arithmetic to his daughter Sundari, after this he withdrew to a life of abstract purity, which elevated him to the rank of a Jina or Tirthankara, and finally closed his existence in any Chapter. The work comprises various doctrinal sections, as well as numerous legends, wholly peculiar to the sect. It is divided into 47 Books.

2—Uttara Purana

Sanskrit—Hala Karnata Character, Palm leaves.

This is a continuation of the preceding, containing the narratives of the twenty three Tirthankaras, down to Mahavira, and of the Chakravartis Vasudevas, &c, emperors and kings, to Srenika, king of Magadha. This part of the work includes some traditions, common to Pauranic fiction, as those of Parasurama, Ramachandra, the Pandava, and Kaurava Princes, and Krishna the outlines of these stories are much the same as usual, but there are important variations in the details. Krishna is styled a Trikhandadhipati, or Lord of three portions of the world, and he is the disciple of the Tirthankara Nemināth. The work consists of 76 sections.

3 —Chamunda Raya Purana

- a Carnata language and Character, Palm leaves
- b Do do

A collection of works, entitled Puranas, giving an account of the sixty three celebrated personages of the Jainas, or the twenty four Tirthankaras, twelve Chakravartis, nine Vasudevas, nine Suklabalas, and nine Vishnudwipas or foes of Vishnu most of these are familiar to Hindu mythology, and are specified in the vocabulary of Hemachandra, whence they have been particularised by Mr Colebrooke, (As Res IX). This collection is attributed to Chamunda Raya, the minister of Rachamalla, King of Madura in the Dekhan, to whom the foundation of the Jain Establishment at Belligola, is ascribed, as detailed by Colonel Mackenzie and Dr Buchanan, in the ninth volume of the Asiatic Researches. Chamunda Raya, is said to have lived in the year 600 of the Kali age, by which is to be understood the period subsequent to the death of the last Tirthankara, or Verddhamana Srami, variously computed as occurring 500 or 477 years anterior to the era of Vikramaditya, which would place this personage either 136 years before the Christian era or 77 years after it a date altogether inadmissible although supported by an inscription. The Jain religion, appears to have grown out of the downfall of that of the Buddhas about the eighth or ninth century. The following translations from the 11th section may be taken as specimens of the legendary literature of this sect.

"The Fourteenth or Ananta Tirthakara Purana"

Padmaratha the Arusu of Arishatpura of Airavatu Kshetra, in the Mudana Mandira, (or Eastern Meru), in the Data Kishanda Dwipa receiving religious instructions from Svayambhuprabha Jina, he became disgusted with the world, and transferring the Kingdom to his son Ghana rotha, he adopted a penitential life, read thro' the eleven Angas, and contemplated the sixteen Shavanas or meditations, he acquired the quality fitting him for becoming a Tirthalar pursuing his religious penitence, he quitted his body, and was born in the Achyuta Kalpa in the Pushpottara Vimana as Achyutendra, with a life of twenty two Sagaras, of the stature of three cubits, of subdued appetites, perfectly contented with his fate, with a knowledge penetrating as far as to the seventh lower world, he was enjoying the happiness of that world.

Afterwards Jayasydma Devi, the consort of Sinhasena Maharaja of the Kasyapa Gotra, of the lineage of Ikshvaku, the ruler of Ayodhyapuram in the Bharata Kshetra of Jambu Dwipa, on the 1st day of the month Kartika under the Star Revati, about break of day, saw the sixteen Dreams, and also that of the Elephant entering in at her mouth, which she mentioned to her consort, who was in Aradhyanya, and getting the interpretations of them from him, she was happy, and Saudhermendra performing the happy ceremony of descending from Heaven on Earth, Achyutendra became impregnated in the womb of the Queen. At that time on the last Palla of ten Sahasras of the term of Vimala Kirttakar, when virtue had faded one third, he was born on the 12th of the dark half of the month Jyeshtha, under the Star, Revati, in the Pushpa Yuga, and now Dhermendra performing the happy worship of being born in the world, and as the new born infant was born with Ananta Gnyana or illimitable wisdom, he called him Ananta Tirthalar, and returned to his residence his life was to continue for three millions of years, his stature 100 cubits, and his color golden. His childhood comprised a period of seven hundred and fifty thousand years his Reiga continued for fifteen hundred thousand, after which on a certain day seeing a Meteor fall, and considering that this life would be dissolved in the same manner, he became disgusted with the world, and Lekantika Utra gave him religious instruction, on which he transferred his kingdom to his Son Aranyakya, getting into the conveyance called Sagara latta he went to the Sreyethal i lana, performing six fastings in company with 1000 Princes he adopted a penitential life on the 12th of the dark half of the month Jyeshtha in the evening under the Star Revati, on which he acquired the fourth degree of Knowledge, and on the next day went to Ayodhyapuram to beg, and Vishwaka Nriya, of the colour of gold granted alms, on which the five wonders were exhibited and after 12 years had expired, in dumb contemplation he obtained the Aeralayanya under an Asicaththa tree in the abovementioned garden, on the last day of the dark half of the month Chaitra, on the evening under the Star Revati, Saudherma Indra, performed the happy ceremony of becoming, a Aeralayanya, and giving him the 1008 virtuous names he returned.

He had 52 Ganadharas from Jayadháma downwards

1000 Puriadharas

39,000 Sikshakaras

4032 Aradhyanyants

5000 Kevalis

With all these, inculcating religious morals in the world for 12 years less than 7 hundred and 50 thousand years, he, who coming company with his son, on the first Hastra, said

... and after performing two samskara Katyana Puja and dancing with happiness, he returned to his dwelling

The Story of Suprabha the Baladeva and Purushottama the Táru-déra, the descendants of Srimad Ananta Tirthakar

Sushena, the king of Padmapura, in the Bharata Kshetra, in Jambu Dwipa, had 500 Consorts the State Queen was called Priyánanda Dev, with whom he enjoyed every felicity One day Chandrabbhushana, the Adhipati of Malaya Des, coming to this city from motives of friendship, saw the Queen, and fell deeply in love with her, and made use of every strata gem and carried her away with him The king (Sushena) became very much grieved at this misfortune, and said, I am really unfortunate, and have not performed any virtuous action He then forsook the world, and after remaining some time thus, he went one day to Sreyámsa Ganadhar, and obtained from him the state of an Ascetic, and performed the Penance of Simha vici'rita, and wishing as the accomplishment of his penance, that he might be re born in his next birth, with so much beauty that he might be admired by all who saw him, and that there should be none to oppose his authority remaining for one month in this state and with this wish he quitted his body, and was born in the Saharrára Kalpam as a God (Deva) and enjoyed every felicity there for 18 Sagaras of years.

Afterwards Maha Bala, the Arasu of Anandapura in the Eastern Hemisphere of Jambu Dwipa, becoming disgusted with the world went to Prajapála Jaina and obtained the rules of Asceticism from him, and performed the Penance of Simha vicirita, and in the perfect state of a Sanyasi quitting his earthly frame he was born in the Saharara Kalpa, the pleasure and happiness of which world he enjoyed for 18 Sagaras of years.

Soma Prabha Raja, having descended from the Mahendra Kalpa, ruled over Dvarasatipatana, situated in the Bharata Kshetra in Jambu Dvipa, with a life of 42,000 years His size was 30 yards length, his State Queen was called Jayarati, who on a certain night dreamt an auspicious dream on the Bhadrapada Nal shatra, Maha Bala Cherra was born to her by the name of Suprabha, and to another of his Consorts named Sita, Susena Cherra was born by the name of Purnashotama they were both surnamed, Baladeva and Vāsudeva the former was of a white color, and the latter of a blue color, they were each of the height of fifty yards, their lives were, to last for five hundred thousand years and they were ruling over the kingdom of their father

In course of time Madhu Kaitabha, the king of Varanasi Patana in the Kasi Desa, sent word to them to become tributary to him, but they being unwilling to pay tribute, drove away the Ambassadors whose Sovereign on hearing of the indignity they had suffered, assembled his army and came to give them battle on meeting he flung his Chakra at Purnashotama, which so far from hitting him, came and stood near him, Purnashotama then picking up the Chakra in his turn, flung it at Madhu Kaitabha, who was slain by it after which he became Adhipati of three Khandas, and ruling over the Kingdom for some time, Purnashotama on his dissolution, leaving his body, his Soul went to Hell, but Suprabha after the death of his brother being much grieved, went to Somaprabha Kerali, and received initiation from him, and acquiring the state of a Kerali, he obtained Beatitude Madhu Kaitabha, also after his death went to hell

Karnata language and Character, Palm leaves, six copies

Legendary history of Jinadatta Raya, who according to the testimony of inscriptions was king of Humbuja, in the Bednur country, in the beginning of the ninth century by Brammaya kari. Whatever might be expected from the preceding Cheritras, it might have been thought that this would have afforded something like historical interest. It is however equally puerile with the rest. Although there can be no doubt that some of the personages, who are the subjects of these Jain legends, had a real existence, the circumstances ascribed to them are entirely the fancy of a late period, and relate little else than their birth, marriage, elevation to the throne, some imaginary feat of arms, their becoming the disciples of some of the Tirthakaros, their abandoning their power for a life of sanctity and their final emancipation. Thus, Jinadatta is described as the son of the Raja Sahalara, who marrying a new wife, conceives an aversion to his son, who becomes a voluntary exile during his wanderings he founds the city of Paumbuja or Humbuja, and marries the nymph Padmarati. He afterwards becomes king of his native city, and protects the Jain faith for a certain period, till his wife who was a Nagalanya, or maiden of the serpent race, returns to Patala, on which the king adopts the life of an ascetic, and after a period of abstract devotion, ascends to Heaven.

The persecution of the Buddhas is here attributed to Jnyána Samandhar. In 56 Chapters, or 4000 Verses, by Ohakkaliyar

a. Palm leaves—b Paper.

An account of an act of devotion of one of the Chola Princes, of great celebrity in the Peninsula, Teruranda or Teruganda or Terurarunda Chola, who commanded his son to be put to death for driving over and killing a calf accidentally in the street of Teruravalur, near the shrine of a famous temple of Sīra, as Tiyaga Raya Sūmī. The boy having been accordingly slain, was restored to life by Sīra, as a mark of his sense of the father's devotion.

Palm leaves.

A Legendary account of the city of Kāñchi or Conjeeveram, the foundation of which is attributed to Kulottunga Chola, the father of Adonda Tondira. It contains some celebrated shrines of the Sīra faith, in the temples of Sīra as Ekāmreśvara, and of Durgā as Kāmikshi which were repaired, if not erected by Sanhara Achārya. This account is said to be a translation by the poet Kamban from the Sanscrit work on the same subject. This work, or the Sanscrit original, is very absurdly termed by Dr. Heyne, "the best, if not, the only geographical account of ancient Hindustan."

a. Palm leaves—b do.

Account of a sacred shrine of Sīra at Terunamale or Trinomallee as Arunāchalesvara or Tejalinga, being dedicated to the emblem of that deity, as representing the element of fire. According to the legend it was on this spot that Sīra appeared as a fiery linga to Brahma and Vishnu, and desired them to seek his base, and summit; which they attempted in vain; in commemoration of which the Gods requested Sīra to remain in a reduced form as a linga here, and erected the temple. The work also contains the Pauranic accounts of Daksha's sacrifice, the birth of Pariati, her marriage to Sīra, her destruction of Mahishasura, and her becoming half Sīra's body or Arddhanariswari at the Aruna mountain; also the liberation of different persons from penalties, and imprecations, by their worshipping at this shrine.

The Temple was repaired by Vajrankusa king of Madura The hill is termed Aruna or red, from the redness of the fiery Linga which originally appeared here, or from the red blossoms of the Palas tree, a forest of which trees grew over the mountain

19 — Indralila Pariata Mahatmya

Palm leaves

Legend of a double shrine of Vishnu and Siva, on a hill near Vallima nagar or Vellum in Tanjore, erected by Indra in expiation of the curse he incurred from Gautama, who resided originally on this spot, for the deception practised by the deity on the wife of the sage The town was afterwards founded, it is said by Kala Kantha Chela, and named after his mother Vallima
Translated by Muragappa

20 — Sivandhi Sthala Purana

a Palm leaves—b Paper do

A Legendary account of the celebrated temple at Trichanapalli, in 12 sections, as supposed to be related by Gautama to Matanga and other sages The rock is said to have been a splinter of Mahameru, blown by the Deity of the wind from the peak of that mountain It was afterwards the residence of Trisira, one of Rajana's Generals, whence its name Trisira male or Trisirapalli corrupted into Trichanopoly Rama in his conquest of the Dekhin took it, and he worshipped at the shrine of Siva as Trisirapallinath, an image set up the Rakshasa It was next celebrated as the residence of Sarama Muni, who decorating his garden with Sivandhi plants, brought from Patala, the place was known as Sivandhi parvata Sarvadityachola having come from the north of the Kaveri hither, fossaded along the Southern bank of that river, the city of Warur. One of his successors having forcibly taken from the garden of Sarama muni, some of those flowers which he cultivated for the purpose of offering to Sua, the Muni pronounced an imprecation on him, in consequence of which Warur was buried beneath a shower of dust. The Queen alone escaped, and in her flight was delivered of a male child after some interval, the chiefs of the Chola kingdom proceeding to elect a king, determined by advice of the Muni to crown whomsoever the late monarch's elephant should pitch upon. Being turned loose for that purpose, the elephant discovered and brought to Trisira male, the child of his former master, who accordingly became the Chola king, the whole being the work of the favour of the Deity worshipped on this mountain.

21 — Avaryar kovil Mahatmya Palm leaves

Legendary account of a temple at Avaryar kovil near Chidambaram, said to have been founded by Manikya Vasaka, the minister of Arimerdana king of Madura. The work also contains the story of Manikya Vasaka, the marvels wrought in whose favour by Sua are narrated by Sonnerat in his account of the Hindu festivals. It may be here observed, that notwithstanding Sonnerat's work contains many inaccuracies, and is disfigured by the use of provincialisms in the terms of the Hindu Mythology and religion, it continues to be the only authority worthy to be consulted on these subjects, as observable in the south of India.

22 — Vedapuri Sthala Purana Palm leaves

Account of a temple of Siva at Vedapuri called also Rudrapuri, Brahmapura or Trivatur near Chilambaram, where Siva is said to have appeared in the disguise of a Brahman, and taught the Vedas to the Rishis, or rather the Agamas and mantras or mystical portion, which it is said he translated into Tamil, and then disappeared, by entering into a Linga at this place, in consequence of which he has been since worshipped here as Vedapurisvara. The Legend comprises the usual stories of the marriage of Siva and Parvati, and the birth of Kartkeya and Ganesa, and illustrations of the efficacy of the shrine as shewn in the books obtained there by Brahma Chandra, Rama, Nareda, and others, also an account of the defeat of the Bauddhas, by Jnyana Samandhar Translated by Appana Sundara Manikya Vasaka

Local History and Biography

Paper

This and the works ensuing profess to record the history of the Princes of Chola, an important division of the Peninsula from which the Eastern Coast appears to derive its appellation, Coromandel Chola, or Chora mandal. It seems to have been known to the ancients as the Regio Soree and R. Sorefanum. According to local designations, the Chola country is bounded on the east by the Sea on the south by the Vellur River, by the Kutaleri on the west, and Yanadu or Pennar on the north. This would include the whole of the country known as the Carnatic below the Ghats, and excludes the more southern countries which are ordinarily supposed to be signified by Chola or Tanjore. It appears, however, that the limits of the kingdom varied at different periods, and in the time of Ptolemy, Arcot was the capital—at a later date Warur near Trichinopoly, next Kumbhakona, and finally Tanjore, was the residence of the Chola Princes.

The accounts of the Chola kings are very numerous, very confused, and very contradictory. The work here adverted to professes to be translated from the Bhavishyottara Purana, of which however it never formed a portion, by order of one of the Mahratta Princes of Tanjore, Sarabhaji. It gives an account of 16 kings, or Kulottunga, Deva chola, Sarisekhara, Sudalinga, Vira, Kerilala, Bhima, Rajarajendra, Viramurtanda, Kirtiverdhana, Vijaya, Kanaka, Sundara, Kalakala, Kalyana, Bhadra. Several of these are of great celebrity, and their names occur in numerous inscriptions in Colonel Mackenzie's collection, in which however the only dates given are those of the years of their reigns. Authorities are much at variance, as to the times at which they lived, and Kulottunga the first of the above series, is placed in the beginning of the Kali age, in the beginning of the sixth century, in the beginning and in the end of the eighth, and even in the ninth. If any trust is to be placed in the above list of Princes he may have reigned in the eighth century. Rajendra the patron of Kamban, and seventh from Kulottunga, reigning in A D 836, see page, 163. At the same time Mr. Ellis (Mirror Right) observes, that Vira Chola, the fifth prince from Rajendra, reigned about A D 918, and yet Vira in the above list precedes Rajendra. Some accounts however make Kulottunga, the Patron of Kamban and Vira is the fifth of the dynasty, reckoning from Kulottunga who was contemporary with the Poet, may have reigned about the end of the ninth century. It is not impossible that he was the same with that Rajendra, who patronised Kamban, for Kulottunga, means "the exalter of his race," and Rajendra, is only "Prince of Princess" as Titles, these were no doubt applied to different individuals, and we have a Vishnu Verdhan Kulottunga Chola, as late as the end of the 11th century hence arises much of the confusion which pervades all the accounts of the Chola kings. It is not unlikely however, that the prince more especially known as Kulottunga Chola, reigned at the end of the 9th century, or even later, for Kerilala the sixth of the list, is made in various traditional accounts, the persecutor of Ramanuja, and dying in consequence, in the early part of that reformer's career, which appears to have been about the beginning of the 12th century. It must be observed, however, that some lists interpose eight, some thirteen, and some sixteen Princes, between Kulottunga and Kerilala, and in one list, Kerilala is placed seventeen generations before Kulottunga, making an extreme variation of thirty three generations, which it will require more ingenuity than can be here pretended to, to reconcile On the whole, however, the weight of testimony places that Prince, who is best known as Kulottunga Chola, about the end of the ninth, and beginning of the tenth century

This work is more of a legendary than a historical character, and is intended to record the devotion of various Chola Princes to Sua, as shewn in the consecration of different Langas. Kulottunga is said to have erected a Temple to Tungeswara, whence his capital was called Tungapur or Tanjore. Sasisekhara erected a causeway or bridge over the Kaveri river. Sua Linga having killed a calf by accident, was put to death by his father, but restored to life by Sua. Kerikala brought the Vrihadisvara Linga from the Nermada, and built a temple for it, by which act of piety he was cured of the leprosy. Rajarajendra subdued various countries and erected numerous temples. Viramartanda propitiated Konkanesa. Kirtti Verddhana obtained progeny by worshipping Kartileya. Kanaka prevailed upon Eranda Mun to fill up a gulph, through which the water of the Kaveri disappeared. Sundara expiated the crime of accidentally killing a Brahman by veneration to Madhyarjuna. Kalakala was raised to the heaven of Sua, by Bhaktitushteswara, or the Lord pleased with faith, and Bhadra, obtained the like end by devotion to the same deity. The last section gives some account of the different baly places of the Sua faith in the country along the Kaveri, or immediately to the south. The work is also styled the Vrihadisvara Mahatmya.

2 — Chola Purana Pattayam

a Paper—b Palm leaves

A history of some of the Chola kings, according to the Kaletu, or records professedly derived from inscriptions, of Kanchi

According to this authority, the first Chola, Chera, and Pandya Princes, or Virachola, Bala Chera and Vajranga Pandya, were born by command of Sua for the destruction of Salitahana, who encouraged the Baudhas, and persecuted the Brahmins. After clearing the site of Kanchi, which had become a wilderness, and restoring the ancient Temples of Ekamreswara and Kamdhishi, they proceeded against Sáliváhana, who they insisted should leave his capital, Trichinapali, and return to his former metropolis, Bhoja Rayapur in Ayodhya or Onda!! As he refused, they attacked Trichinapali, took it, and put Sáliváhana and all the Bauddhas, except a few who fled beyond sea to the eastward, to the sword. As Sáliváhana was a Brahman, the Rajas to expiate the sin of slaying him, built an infinite number of temples to Siva and his bride. These transactions are placed in the Kali year 1443, or 1659 before Christ, and 1737 before Sáliváhana reigned, agreeably to the era, which dates from his reign or A. D. 78. After Virachola, it is said, twenty-five Princes reigned to Uttama Chola, the twenty-sixth, whose capital was Warur, and who deviating from the faith of his predecessors, had his Capital submerged by a shower of dust, the same story being told of him as is narrated in the Sivandhi Purána. The wife of Uttama, then pregnant escaped, and was delivered of a son with whom she lived twelve years in obscurity. At the end of that time the nobles of the Chola kingdom agreed to leave the election of a Prince to the choice of the late Raja's elephant, who after some search discovered the son of Uttama, amongst a number of boys, raised him on his trunk, and carried him to Tiruralur, to the Temple of Tiyaga Ráya, where he was recognised as sovereign, and raised to the throne by the name of Kerikála Chola. This is said to have happened in the year of Kali, 3567 or A. D. 466. This part of the story is told also of the son of Sarráditya Chola, in the Sivandhi Purána, and of Mayúravermá in the Mayúra Chéritra. Kerikála is said to have put his son to death for driving over a calf in the streets of Teruralur, being here identified with Terutarunda Chola. For this he was punished with madness, to cure him of which Kámákshi assumed the form of a priestess, and directed him to build and endow 360 Sirdhayas or Temples of Siva as the Linga. Similar endowments were granted by the Chera and Pándya Rájas, the particularisation of the chief of which forms the remaining, and much the largest portion of this work.

3.—Choladesa Púrrila Chéritra.

Paper.

A treatise on the ancient history of the Chola kings written in answer to Major Mackenzie's enquiries, by Vedhanayaka, a native Christian in his employ. This tract is written in a spirit unfriendly to the usual pretensions to high antiquity, and with some critical acumen, as may be judged from the following, which is given in the writer's own words, "Upon enquiring from well informed natives and men of letters, I find their replies very contradictory. Some say sixty four Chola Princes have governed the country, some say sixteen, and some extend the line to the incredible number of 84,000. The account I have lately transmitted specifies only sixteen, whose joint reigns are made to amount to 1172 years. The hook alluded to, I take it, contains not above one part in four of truth, and the other three parts are at variance with each other. The most accurate statement appears to be that of forty-four Princes, who reigned 2136 years. Of these, the last, Kulottunga gave his only daughter in marriage to Varaguna, the forty eighth Pandyan Prince, who thence succeeded to the sovereignty over Chola and Tonda, as well as Pandyas. Eleven Princes of his family reigned 570 years, making altogether 2706 years." He also maintains that Kulottunga, was the last, not the first of the Cholas, and makes him contemporary with the Poet Kamban. He notices however the different system which makes him the first of sixteen Princes, whose reigns are said to extend from the year of Kali 3349 to 4508 or A.D. 248 to A.D. 1407. The last Prince was named Pattira Chola. These Princes built or repaired the temples of Sriranga, Jambukeswara, Terumalei, Tungeswar, Vrihadiswar, Someswara, Rameswara, and many others. The author admits that he is not able to give a particular account of the forty-four Cholas.

In this work, also, the author denies that Agastya invented the Tamil language, and asserts that his medical works are written in a poor and low style—very inferior to that of Kamban. The grammatical work in 80,000 Sutras, or aphorisms, ascribed to him is pretended to be lost, and the only work of the kind known is the supposed abridgment of it by Tolgappa. Another Grammar is said to originate with the work of Agastya, that of Manikyavasaka. The principal classics of the ancient Tamul were Samanal, that is, Jains, or Buddhas, most probably the latter.

The comparatively modern date of the Chola Princes is inferred, with much reason, by the writer from the perfect state of the buildings ascribed to them, and the freshness and frequency of the traditions relating to them, which are current in all parts of the Peninsula.

4 — Cholamandala, Tondamandala, Pandymandala Rajahal Palm leaves

An account of the Princes who governed the countries of Chola, Tonda, and Pandya. According to this tract, the whole of these three countries were comprised in the Dandaka forest, the habitation of foul fiends, and pious ascetics only. After the extirpation of the former, Rama, to expiate the sin of slaying Ravana, a Brahman, erected the temple of Rameswara to which, numbers coming from upper Hindustan in pilgrimage, settled in this part of India, and first cleared, and cultivated the country. Amongst these was Mathura ndyaka Pandya, a man of the agricultural tribe from the north of India, who colonized the country along the Vyga river, and founded the city of Madura. From him forty-seven Princes descended who reigned in succession for a period of 2137 years. In like manner, the country along the Cavery was first cleared, and occupied by a colonist from Ayodhya, or Oude, named Tayaman Nalei Chola, who founded a city at Trisirapuri or Trichinopoly. The forty fourth Prince from him was Kulottunga Chola, who had a son by a dancing girl, or as he gave out by a Nagalandy, a nymph of Patala. In consequence of his illegitimacy, the chief people opposed his being appointed as Yuta Raja or young King, and on this account his father gave him a tract of newly cleared ground from the Penner river to Kalahastri, constituting the Tonda Mandala, the capital of which was Kanchi. The following account of Tonda Mandalam, and its limits is taken from Mr Elhs's tract on Mirasi Rights, a work previously referred to, and almost the only contribution by European Scholars to the ancient history of the Deccan, upon which any reliance can be placed.

Tonda or with the addition of mandalam, a province, country, Tonda mandalam, of which Canjipuram (Conjeveram) was the ancient capital takes its designation from a shrub of the same name with which it abounds.

The extent and boundaries of the country thus settled, the number of the settlers and its variation in population and prosperity in after times are to be traced, not by vague tradition only, as is too commonly conceived to be the case with respect to the remains of Indian history, but in writings of different periods, as substantially authentic, probably, though intermixed with undisguised fable, as the records of most other countries.

The two following memorial verses state the boundaries of Tondi mudi-lam the first is ascribed to Auvaiyar, a Tamil poetess of high renown.

To the west the Pavazha mala, Vengad am to the north,

The straight shore of the surrounding ocean to the east, and high in renown

The Pinager to the south, in extent twenty cedams,

Know these to be the boundaries of the excellent Tondi Nadu

The Pavazha mala, or coral mountains, are the line of the eastern Ghats, Vengadam is one of the names of the sacred hill of Tirupati, Pinager (Pinacă) is the Sanscrit name of two rivers which both rise in the mountains of Nandidurg, the northern passing by Penaconda and through the district of Nelliur, the southern disengaging near Cuddalur, the latter is here meant. Measuring a straight line from the extremity of the Pulicat lake, where Srihan Cötter, the most northern of the Tonda maudis villages is bounded by the Swerna much hi river to the mouth of the Pinager, the distance will be found to be almost exactly twenty cedams, or reckoning the cadam at eight miles, one hundred and forty miles. The boundaries here stated embrace only the country, below the Ghats, forming a considerable portion of the extent called by the Mohammedans, and after them by Europeans, commonly, but very erroneously, Carnatic-pyenghat

The Sheyaru to the south, the sacred Vengadam to the north,

The inexhaustible ocean, O ye who resemble fauns' to the east,

The mountains of the bull to the west, of Tonder nadu

They agree that this is the extent

Sheyaru* is a Tamil name of the river before called Pinager, the mountains of the bull, Idabagun, are the range of hills on the southern extremity of which stands the fortress of Nandidurg. The boundaries here indicated extend, therefore, much farther to the westward than those stated in the preceding verse, and the whole province may be naturally

* There are two rivers called Sheyaru, one taking its rise below the Ghats, joins the Palli at Tiru maccudal, a little to the east of Canjeroram, the other, the Enidu Sheyaru the Sheyaru of Enidu or Kha-vidu, the ancient name of the country to the south and west of upper Tonder is the river here meant and is the same as the southern Pinader or Pen nei.

divided into upper and lower Tondai, the latter being as already stated, the former, constituting the north eastern districts of the country now under the dominion of the Raja of Maisur, comprehends the Pergannahs of Coär, Bara Balapur and part of Penaconda and of the Subah of Sirs, or Carnatic bāli ghit Bijapur according to the modern Mogul subdivision of the country

Of the following extracts, the first is from a well known work, the two next are also, ascribed, to Auveyhr, and the two last belong to the great body of traditional stanzas current in the Tamil countries. The list of Cōt tamā and Nādus have been obtained from persons attached to the Matam of the Nyana praca Pandarain of Cīnjpurum, to which establishment fees are payable throughout the province of Tondamindalam*. I must here observe that the Tamil St'hala Puranas, after passing the fables of mythological periods with which they usually commence, and gaining the bounds of rational chronology, contain much of what may be considered as the real history of the country, though still obscured occasionally by allegory and distorted by extravagance

FROM THE TIRUCAZHICUVA PĀRA'VAM

To the northward of the river Pennē where the bees sip the honey of the fresh flowers,

To the southward of Cālatti (Calatri) which resounds with the roaring of startled lions,

To the westward of the cool shores of the ocean, and to the eastward of the coral mountains,

I have thus generally described the extent of the prosperous country of Tondiram

Tondiren, the chief among the leaders of the demon bands of the three eyed deity, having governed it,

This country became Ton'dira nadū, when it was defended by Dan dīvender,

It became accordingly Dan'daea nadū, and when Shozher of the family of the sun,

Who was Ton'derman adorned by garlands of flowers extended his protection to it, it became Ton'dei nadū

The chief Towns of this country are the crude juice of this sugar cane.

Cachchipuram (Cangiteram) and its vicinity are like a cake of unrefined sugar obtained by boiling this juice,

A STANZA

It (Ton'de:val'a), contains twenty four Cot tam, seventy nine Nad'u, and one thousand nine hundred Nat tam (townships) beautified by the leaves of the palm the families (gotrams) of ancient descent are twelve thousand, but it is impossible to declare the numbers of the Velalai in the country

According to our authority, Tonda, as well as Chola came into the possession of the Pandya princes, by the marriage of Kulottunga's legitimate daughter with Varaguna Pandya, and remained subject to them 570 years

The work contains also some account of the people of Marava, who it is said were originally a Colony of Fishermen from Ceylon, settled at Rameswara, and on the opposite coast, by Rdma to guard the temple They were made slaves by the new Colonists, and long continued to be subject to the Pandya Princes at length becoming numerous, they rose against their masters, and established themselves under their own Princes, the Setupatis, or Lords of the straits, the Chandra or Sander bands, apparently of Marco Polo For eleven generations the Setupatis were Lords paramount, even over Madura, and the Pandya Princes were reduced to the condition of feudatories, until the whole of the kingdom fell under the Marava power for three reigns, when they were driven to the south of the Caveri again by the Kurumba Prince of Alakapuri, and finally Madura and Tanjore, were taken from them by the officers of the Vijayanagar Kings The former continued under the Nayals of Madura, and the latter was occupied by the Mahrattas, until both came under subjection to European power

5—Kalingallu Bharini

a Paper—b Palm leaves

A professedly poetical account of the subjugation of Kalinga by Kulottunga Chola but the work consists chiefly of the praises of Ganesa and Durga, and a description of poetical or rhetorical ornaments. Some panegyrical notice of Kerikala, Vira and Kullottunga Chola occurs but nothing that can be regarded as history. The latter is made to recover Kalinga from a Moham medan Prince.

A Poetical account of the actions of Vikrama Chola, Kulottunga Chola, and Rajendra Chola, especially of their founding, and endowing Sava temples, by Uttaga Kulen

7—Pandya Rajakal

a Paper—b Palm leaves

A history of the Pandyan Kings, or Sovereigns of Madura in thirteen Books chiefly of a legendary, and sectarian character. It begins with Kulottunga, in the year of Kali one thousand, and records anecdotes of the following Princes, Anantaguna, Kāla bhūshana, Rājendra Pandya, Rājescara, Gambhīra, Vansapadi paka, Puruhutajit, Pāndya Vamsapatlaka, Sundareswara, Pada sekha, Varagunā, Rajendra, Suguna, Ohitraratha, Chitra bhushana, Chitradhwaja, Chitravarma, Chitrasena, Ohitravikrama, Udanta, Rāja Churamani, Rāja Sañdula, Kulottunga, Yodhana pravira, Rāja Kunjara, Rājā Bhayanlara Ugrasena, Mahasena, Satrungaya, Bhimaratha, Bhimaparakrama, Pītāpa Martanda, Vikrama Kunjaka, Yuddha Kotahala, Atulavikrama, Atula Kirtti, Kirttivibhushana, Vamsasekhara and Vamsachuramani, or thirty nine of the seventy four Princes, which tradition usually ascribes to the Pandya Dynasty. With the exception of the first three, of Varaguna, and the two last, the notice of these Princes is restricted to the simple enumeration of their names, and the stories found in the accounts of the others, are most commonly miraculous legends illustrating the power of the tutelary deities of the Pandyan Kingdom, Pārvati and Siva, combined as Minakshi.

Sundareswara The last five chapters are devoted to marvellous anecdotes of the College of Madura founded by Vamsa Sekhara for the cultivation of Tamul the first professors of which forty eight in number, it is said, were incarnations of the forty eight letters, of the Sanscrit alphabet and Sundareswara himself was the 49th. The latter presented the College with a diamond bench or desk, which would give place to no heterodox or inferior productions. The professors becoming arrogant, Sita appeared as Terupurantaka Kariswar, or according to some accounts, Terualmar, the celebrated moral poet, and produced a work which being laid on the desk with the Books of the forty eight professors thrust every one of them off, and occupied the whole in solitary dignity. The chief teachers of the Madura College were Narakira, Bana, and Kapila, to whose joint labours this work is inscribed.

8 — Tondamana Katha

An account of the country of Tonda in a hundred stanzas by Padikasi

10 — Kongadasa Rajahat

Palm leaves

An account of the Princes of the country known as Konga or Chera, one of the three principal divisions, with Chola and Pandya, of the eastern half of the southern portion of the Peninsula. It corresponds nearly with the modern districts of Salem and Coimbatore, with addition of parts of Tinnevelly and Tirancore. The boundaries according to the Tamul authorities are the Palni river on the north, Tercasi in Tinnevelly on the east, Malabar on the west, and the Sea on the south.

According to this work, the series of Konga or Chera Princes, amounted to twenty six, from Viraraja Chakravarti to Raja

Malladeva, in the time of whose descendants the kingdom was subdued by the Ghola Raja, in the year of Saluahan 816 or A.D. 894. The Princes here enumerated are Vira Raya, Gorinda Raya, Krishna Raya, Kalivallabha, Govinda the 2nd, Chaturbhija, Kumaradeva, Trivikrama Deva, Kongani Verma, Madhara Verma, Hari Verma, Vishnugopa, Krishna Verma, Dindikara, Durvaniti, Pushkara Trivikrama, Bhuvikrama, Kongani Mahadhiraya, Govinda 3rd, Snaqa, Prithvi Kongani Mahadhiraya Raja, Malla Deva, Ganda Deva, Satyavakya Deva, Gunottama Deva. From the Tanjore Sovereigns, Chera passed under the dominion of the Belal Rajas of Marsur, and finally under that of the Princes of Vijayanagar, of whom some account is also given in this work.

16 — Vader Sihala Purana

a Palm leaves—b do—c do—d Paper

Account of the life of Manikya Vasaka, Prime minister of Arimerddana or of Vamsa Sekhara, King of Madura, and celebrated for his devotedness to Siva. Having been sent on a mission to buy horses, he encountered Siva as a Pandaram, or Sava teacher, by the way, and in consequence of his lessons, distributed the money he was intrusted with to his mendicant followers, and an adjacent temple of that divinity. The Raja hearing of what was taking place, sent to command his return to Madura, with which, by the advice of the seeming Pandaram, he complied, informing the king he had bought the horses, which would arrive at a lucky hour; at first the king believed him, but upon further information, doubting his veracity, subjected him to severe tortures, until Siva changing a number of jackals into horses, and himself assuming the appearance of the dealer, arrived at Madura, and delivered them to the king. Being conducted to the stables, the jackals at night resumed their proper shapes, killed the real horses, and broke loose and ravaged the country. Manikya Vasaka was in consequence again imprisoned, and tortured, when Siva caused the Vygi to overflow its banks, and deluged the country, until his worshipper was released — other marvels are narrated of Manikya Vasaka, who finally left the Raja's service with honour, and adopted a religious life, in which character he composed the Terrimargam a set of verses in four books in praise of Siva, and other similar works, also a grammar of the Tomul language—After visiting the principal temples of Siva in the Dekhin, he settled at Chilambaram, where he was visited by a delegation of Bauddha priests from Ceylon, whom he disputed with and overcame. He also cured the daughter of the Raja of Ceylon of dumbness, on which she repeated the twenty verses in praise of Siva which are annexed to the Terrimargam. The Bauddhas were converted by these marvels

Manikya Vasaka was finally absorbed into the Lunga at Oridam baram, in the presence of all the people

a Palm leaves—b do—c do

An account of Virappa one of the subordinate chiefs of the Madura Kingdom under the Nayaks, Virappa, is said to have been the son of Tulasi Maha Raja, but the astrologers announcing that he would cause the ruin of his family, his father ordered him to be exposed in the forests. He was there found by a man of the Chandala or Pariar caste, and brought up by him to the period of adolescence, when with his father, he was employed in the service of one of the Poligars of Madura, Bommayya Nayak. Here he engrossed the affection of the Poligar's daughter, and raised an insurrection against his master, in which Bommayya Nayak was killed, and Virappa married the daughter. Virappa then took service with Cholanath Nayak of Tanjore, by whom he was sent with an army to clear Madura of banditti. After his return, whilst visiting a hermit by name, he is taken up for a thief, and has his hands and legs cut off. a Palm leaves—b do

Story of the Rajah of Alakapur, and his four ministers, who being falsely accused of violating the sanctity of the inner apartments, vindicate their innocence, and disarm the king's wrath by narrating a number of stories. The following incidents are illustrative of the oriental origin of part of Zadig.

"In the reign of Alakendra Raja King of Alala Puri, it happened that four persons of respectability were travelling on the high road when they met with a merchant who had lost one of his camels. Entering into conversation with him, one of the travellers enquired if the camel was not lame in one of its legs, another asked if it was not blind of the right eye, the third asked if the tail was not unusually short, and the fourth demanded if it was not subject to the colic. They were answered in the affirmative by the merchant, who was satisfied they must have seen the animal, and eagerly demanded where they had met it. They replied they had seen traces of the camel, but not the camel itself which being inconsistent with the minute acquaintance they seemed to possess, the merchant accused them of being thieves, and having stolen his beast, and immediately applied to the Raja for redress. The Raja on hearing the merchant's story was equally impressed with the belief, that the travellers must know what had become of the camel and sending for them, he threatened them with his extreme displeasure if they did not confess the truth. How could they know, he demanded, the camel was lame or blind, that the tail was long or short, or that it was subject to any malady unless they had it in their possession. On which they severally explained the reasons that had induced them to express their belief of these particulars.

The first observed, I noticed in the foot marks of the animal that one was deficient, and I concluded accordingly that he was lame in one of his legs. The second said, I noticed the leaves of the trees on the left side of the road had been snapped or torn off whilst those on the right side were untouched whence I concluded the animal was blind in his right eye. The third remarked I saw a number of drops of blood on the road, which I conjectured had flowed from the bites of gnats and flies and thence supposed the camel's tail was shorter than usual, in consequence of which he could not brush the insects away. The fourth said, I observed that whilst the fore feet of the camel were planted firmly in the ground, the hind ones appeared to have scarcely touched it, whence I guessed they were contracted by pain in the belly of the animal. The king when he heard their explanations was much struck by the sagacity of the parties, and giving the merchant a sum of money to console him for the loss of the camel, he made these four persons his principal ministers."

53 — Agastya Jnyana

Palm leaves

A collection of a hundred verses attributed to the Muni Agastya upon the means of obtaining divine wisdom In some of the verses, he impugns the authority of the Ramayana and Mahabharat, and in others is made to give a curious account of himself, as appears from the following translations of the passages by a Tamil Brahman in Col. McKenzie's employ

"In verses 10 to 13 Agastya asserts that the Ramayana and Mahabharat are not true records but were invented by Vyasa to enable the votaries of Siva to gain a substance

In the 74th and following verses we have a modification of the Pauranic story of his birth Agastya is made to say

' Herein I declare that I obtained the eminent name of Agastya because I was formerly a Sudra my preceptor was a Brahman who resided to the South of Mahameru.

Before receiving his instructions I purified my animal frame of all imperfections by abstract devotion I forsook the world, and lived in caves and rocks when my holy preceptor appeared and said Come, I admit you as my disciple I assented and followed him He lighted a sacrificial fire, and placed in it a jar into which he commanded me to leap I did so, and was consumed, and was born again in I issued from the jar which was then changed into the form of a woman

Verily that jar was a form of Maleswara and the Brahman, of Maladeva who were my parents They brought me up and trained me in all learning and finally Siva conferred upon me immortality

Accounts of his subsequent actions occur in the 3rd to the 35th verse in which he says that by command of Siva he repaired to the Dekhan to illuminate the darkness of the people, and that he invented eighteen languages including the Dhen Tamul—the old or poetical Tamil After this he continues 'I was ordered by Siva to compose various Sastras—and accordingly I wrote 100,000 stanzas on Rasayana (Alchemy) 200,000 on Medicine and 100,000 on divine wisdom The first I abridged in 1,200 stanzas the last in 100 and those on Medicine I distributed in different works

He specifies a number of persons as his disciples, the chief of whom are his Son Satyamuni, and his pupil Sundara.

Agastya is said to have taken up his residence on Podiamala, at the source of the Tamraparni river, who is described mythologically as his daughter by adoption, given to him by Siva.

The following list of works ascribed to Agastya is given, but they are generally supposed to have perished with a few exceptions.

66 — Tiruttalluier Koral

Palm leaves

A Series of stanzas, of a moral character, on various conditions of humao life. This work is of great celebrity in the south of India, as one of the earliest, and best compositions in the high or poetical Tamul. The real history of the author, the divine Valluier, seems to be little known, and legend has been substituted for Biography. According to the tradition he was one of the seven children of the Brahmu Perali by Adhi, a Pariar female, and like the rest was exposed as soon as born. He was found and brooght up by the Pariars of Mailapur. When arrived at man's estate, he visited Madura in the roign of Vamsasekhara, and overcame the professors of the Tamal College in disputation, in consequence of which he remained attached to the establishment, notwithstanding his inferior birth. The Koral was translated by the late Mr. Ellis, who added to the translation a valuable commentary, illustrating the customs and laws, the literature, and religion of the south of India, as well as a grammatical analysis of the text, whch likewise accompanied the translation of the work. In this state, 304 pages were printed at Madras, and the following specimens of it may not be here out of place —

CHAPTER IV.

On the Power of Virtue.

I

What more doth profit man than virtue doth,
By which felicity is given, and whence Eternal bliss ensues?*

II

No greater gain than virtue canst thou know,
Than virtue to forget no greater loss

* The passages of the original work and the citations in the Comment are all printed in Mr. Ellis's publication in the original Tamul

III

That which in spotless purity preserves
The mind in real virtue; all besides
Is evanescent sound

IV.

Refer not virtue to another day,
Receive her now and at thy dying hour
She'll prove thy never-dying friend

V.

Pleasure from virtue springs, from all but this
No real pleasure e'er ensues, nor praise.

VI

Know that is virtue which each ought to do,
What each should shun is vice

COMMENT ON THE LAST VERSE

"That is virtue which each ought to do." This simple definition is both more intelligible and more correct than definitions usually are. It is not exceeded in either respect by the definition of the same thing in the following verse, which is said to belong to the Bhāratam, though I have not been able to find it therein, and quote it, therefore, from the Āśvaram, the essence of morality, a compilation from various works. Though distinct in their literal purport, both are essentially the same, and must be admitted by all sects to be axioms in morality.

I will declare in half a Stanza that which has been the theme of millions
TO DO GOOD TO OTHERS BELONGS TO VIRTUE TO DO EVIL TO OTHERS, TO VICE

It is necessary, however, to explain with accuracy the intention of the author, that his expressions should be more minutely examined. The precise meaning of this couplet turns on the sense of the word Paladu which signifies both that which is natural and that which is apportioned, being derived from the root pal nature, also, a share or allotment, the first sentence, therefore, may be literally rendered, either cuibus re that which it is natural for each to do, or that which is allotted for each to do. Considered with respect to the destined effects of former deeds, these two meanings are equivalent, for that which is thus allotted to a being by destiny constitutes its natural disposition, considered, however, with respect to the two particulars, which, according to the author, are included under the general idea of virtue, the former signification applies to the preferences given spontaneously by the mind to natural right, and the consequent exercise of benevolence and charity, and, under the latter, to the preference given from reflection to positive right, and the consequent obedience to the precepts of the law, both significations are expressed by the English auxiliary ought. This distinction is observed and respected by the commentator, as he has not ventured to change the term in his paraphrase, only substituting the abstract noun for the conjugated form.

The doctrine of the author, as here explained, and, as generally inculcated in the chapter, respecting the origination of moral bias, and the inclination towards the good and the evil arising from the fatal influence described under the term mostly rendered destiny, coincides exactly with none of the various systems maintained by European writers, though there are many points in which all resemble it. On the one hand it differs, widely, from the opinions of those who conceive man to be born as a mere animal without natural propensities, and, indifferent alike to good or evil, to be directed towards them solely by education, or association and habit, for, though authority and precept are allowed their due share in influencing the will in the choice of either, all power and, consequently, all determination is attributed to nature, or fate, or destiny, or pradhana.

It differs considerably from the notions we usually attach to the terms fate and predestination, for, though the election of the will, and the feelings of nature, are all under the direction of an inscrutable destiny, as this takes its origin and character from the uncontrolled acts of the individual it governs, it is not incompatible with the active exertion of free will, in all things not within its immediate scope and tendency. The term fate, therefore, as used in Europe, and vidhi, as used in India, though both signifying an over ruling and inevitable necessity, conveys to the mind of the Indian, an idea so distinct in the concrete from that which the European conceives of it, that their original identity is nearly lost. The notion conveyed by the word predestination, or the determination of the eternal salvation or perdition of souls by divine decree, so familiar to the mind of an European, is not readily comprehended by an Indian, and I have found it difficult therefore, to render it intelligible to many who had long been accustomed to abstract reasoning, and to whom the abstrusest points of their own philosophy presented no difficulties, there is in fact no term in Tamil or Sanscrit by which it can be correctly translated, though of course its meaning may be expressed by a periphrasis or compound.

Though in the preceding verse the motives of moral action are in their effect designedly confounded, so that its actuating cause appears to be individual gratification, the doctrine I have attempted to explain, is in reality, also, very different from that of some eminent writers, who make self interest the sole motive of moral conduct, for, as already explained, it implies the existence of two separate causes, namely, the intuitive perception and preference of that which is beneficial, and obedience to authority.

from rational conviction These though speculatively, perhaps, they may be referred to a common origin, are really distinct in their operation, for man, as he actually exists is equally the creature of nature and habit, which in him are so confounded that it is impossible, morally and physically, to distinguish the effects of one from those of the other Menn, therefore, is practically right in subdividing the second of these causes as he does in the following verse, the 12th of his Second Chapter (Dwitiye'd-hayah), at the commencement of which he distinctly assigns the love of self, or hope, of benefit, as the primary motive of all virtuous and religious action

The Scripture, the revealed codes, approved custom, and that which is gratifying to his own self,

These four modes are declared by the learned to constitute the regular body of the law

Still more adverse to this doctrine are the notions conveyed by the expression moral sense and moral sentiments, words with which certain writers have amused themselves and their readers To maintain the existence of a sense or sensible faculty, for which there is no correspondent sensitive organ, would disconcert the gravity of an Indian philosopher "Is not the knowledge of external objects" he would probably ask, "suggested to the mind by the impulse of those objects on the senses, and, though the operation of the senses is secret, are not the organs of each apparent? where then lies the physical organ of morality? If it be difficult, nay perhaps impossible to explain how the minute atoms exhaling from the essential oils of a flower, by operating on the olfactory nerves, which constitute the organ of smell, excite in the mind the idea of perfume, wilt thou undertake to show how the abstract being morality, by operating on the organ thou hast imagined and called the moral sense, can excite the idea of virtue" Were this notion indeed admitted as correct, how could the variety of moral institutions exist which prevail among mankind, all tending towards the same object, and in fact effecting by various means the object towards which they tend? If, as fancied by these visionaries there could exist a moral sense or instinct like other senses and instincts, its operation must be invariable, all mankind would form the same undeviating notion of wright and wrong as they do of black and white, and moral action would universally be governed by rules as immutable as those that guide the bee in every region of the earth in the construction of its comb or the swallow in the building of its nest But it is not so, for though, as all mankind have the same general wants and are actuated, therefore, by the same general motives in the exercise of choice, they must in many cases necessarily prefer the same objects yet it does not follow that in all cases they should prefer the same, and still less that they should endeavour to obtain them by the same means, or observe the same rules in the enjoyment of them Thus though female purity, according to the notion entertained of it by the European, may to him appear an object of undoubted preference and the preservation of it, secured by the maxims of morality and the precepts of religion, may be productive to him of gratification and happiness it by no means follows that the miseries resulting from immorality must be the portion of the community in which a notion of it entirely dissimilar is adopted, as in the province of Malayalam where among the superior castes of Sudras all women, with certain restrictions as to tribes are common to all men, and where this state of things is equally productive of public order and private happiness, as the stricter institutions of Europe

In all arguments relative to the powers and operation of mind, whether considered abstractedly, or in connection with its material means, the endeavour to trace them to any unmixed and wholly simple principle is unsafe in speculation, if not unfounded in nature, and, consequently unsound in philosophy This delusive spirit of generalization, which has given ' local habitation and a name' to so many insubstantial theories has influenced the reasoning of men on morality in the east as well as the west, all Indian sects agree in referring the election and practice of virtue in part to positive precept, but some, assign the origin of both to precept only, and admit no morality but what is expressly ordained, not however by human authority, as the sceptical writers of Europe maintain, but by the revealed law of God Mixed motives, in cases even where they are apparently the most simple, it is probable, always govern the decisions of the will, and the alchymy of the mind, therefore, which endeavours to reduce all its phenomena to an empirical simplicity, is as unnatural a chimera as the alchymy of matter, the elements of the former being no more homogeneous than those of the latter

The following verses have been selected for the further elucidation of the subject of this Chapter, for the future, similar illustrations will be added without formal notice, unless more particular explanation should be necessary than can be given in a note

PAZHA MOZHI

Those men who have long neglected virtuous acts let them practise them even for a short space by means of the wealth they possess, for know, O thou whose breasts are firm and waist taper¹ that the virtue of benevolence acts when relations act not

When born in a human form, difficult of attainment, practise virtue to the utmost of thy power; for inevitable pain, uniting with fearful disease, old age and death, approacheth to destroy thee

If when virtue is practised it be rightly considered, and the nature of it fully comprehended, it will assist in the attainment of eternal felicity, wealth if practised will increase, but by the practice of vices acts the opposite (sin) will be destroyed.

With the wealth thou enjoyest, and without offending others, perform the acts of benevolence on which thou hast resolved, completely, it is as dangerous to neglect to reap that which thou hast planted, as to sustain the loss which will result from breaking off in the midst and leaving them imperfect.

As a mother compels a froward child that refuseth the breast to receive the milk, so do thou by severely, regardful of eternity only excite the sacred flame in the minds of those devoid of virtue.

Can they, who reflect on the transitory existence of their parents account the wealth of this world real wealth? be charitable as befitting thy condition, for none can block up the way of a rolling mountain (i.e. cannot stay the inevitable approach of death).

Those who without reflection have neglected the righteous deeds which before dying, they ought to have performed, and, be thinking themselves of their future road only when warned by sickness then endeavour to perform them, will be as much at a loss as if seeking in vain for a stone when they see a dog, (about to attack them).

As it confers renown in this world, and in the other, felicity, to those who constantly practise the virtue of benevolence, the two roads branching from the same point, and each leading to happiness.

PRABHULVGA LILA

The sages say, that, as milk, which from its excellence ought to be preserved in a golden vase, is lost by pouring it into a furrow of the earth, so the advantages of the human form are lost to him, who, after wandering from body to body hath with difficulty acquired it if he do not aspire to be relieved from the affliction of various births and attain, by its means, to unchargeable eternity by the practice of every kind of virtue however arduous.

The keeper of the refreshing flower-garden said—"There is none more subject to delusion than he, who, being endowed with a body, perishable as lightning by which an imperishable body, may be obtained and he may attain to everlasting felicity fearing to mortify that body, negligeth the practice of righteous acts from loss of it and, indulging in luxury, liveth in vain.

CHINTAMEVI

E'en when you proceed to a village where none but your own connections reside, you are careful, as if you were at enmity with them, not to set your foot without the door, unless you are provided with provisions for the journey, when death bears you away, and you are alone in a dreadful road, you will have made no provision for the journey ye who are solicitous only for the well-being of the body.

As when the stalk of a water lily is broken the fibrous threads within it are yet unbroken, thus, though thy old body be destroyed, thy sins will follow thee and, surrounding thy indestructible soul will plunge it into the lowest and most dreadful hell and burn it in flames of unquenchable fire with torment unutterable.

If men of virtuous minds are charitable to all beings their former acts shall inseparably accompany the soul like the shadow of a bird flying in the air, without even one being forgotten and shall liberally afford whatever they desire like the Oow (Camadhdéus), which yieldeth all that is required.

I have both neglected to pay due honors to the sages who have studied the ancient scriptures and to guests whom I ought to have received hospitably, not reflecting, that, besides the effects of my righteous and unrighteous deeds nothing will follow me and that nothing else is really mine, for will either the house I inhabit, or the wives I have wedded, or the children I have begotten, or the body I animate accompany me? When dead I shall plunge into a dreadful hell and in after births be afflicted by poverty and distress.

Without great care and fatigue of body wealth cannot be acquired, without the wealth aforesaid these good acts, whence merit proceedeth, cannot be performed, and unless such acts are performed, righteousness cannot exist if righteousness exist not happiness cannot be obtained, consequently without the assiduous practice of virtue there can be no happiness with all thy power therefore follow righteousness.

BARADAM

From righteousness proceedeth victory, and unrighteousness destroyeth the strength of the body, those, who have overleaped the bounds of science have unanimously declared this to be their effect and their words we perceive are exemplified in thee, O Prince, (Derma-rájén) for returning from exile thou reignest O thou who hast no equal! over crowned Kings.

STANZAS BY SIDAMBALA PANDARAM

As there is nothing more profitable than virtue, the practice of it must not be neglected, for from the neglect of it proceedeth in this world infamy misfortune and death, and inevitable misery will follow hereafter.

If one neither permitteth his mind to be defiled by the wicked deeds which originate from the propensity to evil, by which all souls existent in the earth surrounded by the dark ocean are afflicted, nor by outrageous anger, destructive of respect, nor by any other stain, the sages have decided that this is real virtue, to those who regard any virtue more contracted than this, ostentation only will be attributed, for in it there is no purity.

To those who deeming this body as unstable as a bubble in the water, do not defer to a future time the practice of virtue but perform it with delight while yet firm in health virtue shall assist them in the hour of death and accompany them when they depart.

Though born in the greatest tribe they are mean if they are not exemplary in the practice of virtue, and they are equal to the greatest, of whatever tribe they are, who by the practice of virtue divest themselves of their natural meanness, these by their deeds will rise to renown and heaven, those sink to infamy and hell.

By beneficence only the Gods attained to all good, by the contrary wealth and pleasure perish, of the two species domestic virtue produceth wealth and pleasure, and religious virtue, final beatitude far exceeding both—is there any thing that exceedeth this?

A STANZA

Devotion performed without knowledge is not devotion, a virtuous act void of reason and reflection is not virtue, therefore, devotion performed without the clearness of knowledge is like washing in unclean water, and virtue not guided by well measured reason is a jewel with a flaw, thus say, the wise of old whose devotion consisted in silent contemplation, and they have established it as an important rule to be known by all.

A STANZA

The lustre of the eye, as instantaneously as a flash of lightning, darts its sparkling beauty and is gone—the most requisite qualification think not to be beauty, shining qualities are not requisite, good qualities are.

The proud vainly think within themselves that strict and equal virtue is theirs alone and is found no where else,

But say not that virtue rests only with yourselves, nor believe that it is the peculiar attribute of any, for she walks with an equal pace among us all.

It is the coparcenary possession of all within the bounds of the earth, that pearl of the clearest and most beautiful water, and the exactest shape, that high-priced pearl is virtue.

COUPLETS

From knowledge proceedeth goodness from goodness knowledge, thus kind produceth kind.

As the diamond polisheth the diamond so do the unblemished virtuous promote goodness so others.

If evil be done that good may ensue that good is not stable, good is maintained by goodness.

If thou have the fortitude to stop in the path of vice and to forsake it, know this to be the greatest virtue of thy nature.

Although men, addicted to the ways of this world, follow various institutions instead virtue only is the virtue that exalteth to the stars.

1 — Tolghappiyum

Palm leaves

A Grammar of the Tamil Language by Tolghappya who is said to have been an incarnation of Vishnu, and the pupil of Agastya, whose large Grammar, consisting of 80,000 rules, he abridged, reducing the number to 8,000. According to some traditions, this Grammar is an amplification of a similar work, ascribed to Vira Pandya Raja of Madura. It is written in an abstruse and difficult style. The following short account of it is from the "Babington's translation of Beschi's Grammar of the Shen or High Tamil." One ancient work written by a person called Tolcappianur (ancient author) is still to be met with, but from its conciseness it is so obscure and unintelligible, that a devotee named Paranandi was induced to write on the same subject.

2 — Nannul

A portion of an intended work on Tamil Grammar by an ascetic Paranandi. Beschi observes, his work is denominated Nannul, a term that corresponds exactly to the French Belles Lettres, and the Latin Literæ humanae. The work was to consist of five parts, treating of letters, words, composition, versification and embellishment, but the two first were the only parts completed.

3 — Tonnal Vilal hunam

Palm leaves

A Grammar of the High Tamil Dialect by Vira Mahamuni or Father Beschi. The following account of this celebrated Missionary is taken from Mr. Babington's Gooroo Paramarthian.

The few following particulars of one whose fame is so well established in the South of India may not be unacceptable to those whose views are directed to that country. They are taken from a Tamil MS. in my possession.

Virammooni or the great Champion Devotee as Beschi is surnamed by the Tamuls was a native of Italy, and one of the religious order of Jesuits. Having been appointed by the Pope to the East India Mission, he arrived in 1700, at the city of Goa on the Western coast. He thence proceeded to Avoor, in the district of Trichinopoly, where he studied the Tamul language in both its dialects as well as the Sanskrit and Teloogoo, and with a view to public employment, which it was ever the Jesuit policy to seek in order to promote their religious views, he made himself master of the Hindostanee and Persian. It is probable that he held political offices in the earlier part of his life for we can hardly suppose him to have risen at once to the appointment of Divan which he held under the celebrated Chunda Saheb during his rule as Nabob of Trichinopoly, especially as Chunda Saheb did not assume the government of that place until the death of the Raja which happened in the year 1736.

From the moment of his arrival in India he in conformity with Hindoo custom abandoned the use of animal food and employed Brahmans to prepare his meals. He adopted the habit of a religious devotee and on his visitations to his flock assumed all the pomp and pageantry with which Hindoo Goornos usually travel. He founded a church at Konangooppam Ariyan or, in the district of Baroor, and my MS notices particularly a picture of the Madonna and the child Jesus which he caused to be painted at Manilla and set up in that church. It was in honour of this Madonna of her husband Joseph and the Lord Jesus that he composed the Sacred Poem called Iembavani which, vying in length with the Iihad itself, is by far the most celebrated and most voluminous of his works. It contains 3815 tetrasticks each of which is furnished with a prose interpretation, and, to judge from the only Padalam or Canto which I have had an opportunity of reading where the murder of the innocents is described, its merits are not overrated. Viramamoons also founded a church at Tirookavaloor, a name which he gave to the town of Vadoogapet in the district of Ariyaloor, and on the Madonna there he composed three Poems Tirookavaloor Kalambagam Anneyajoongal Andadi and Adeikala Malei—The following are the most important of the remaining works of this author, which with exceptions that will be noticed are extant only in MS.

Kittri Ammal Ammanai, a poem Vediya-rojookkam a work in prose where as the name implies, the duties of one who has devoted his life to religion are laid down. Veda Vilakkam also in prose, which, from the title (the light of the gospel) I presume to contain some doctrinal exposition of the Roman Catholic Faith. A Dictionary, Tamul and French, another Tamul and Portuguese, a third Tamul and Latin Sadoor Agharidi, or the four Dictionaries, a Tamul work relating to the higher dialect. Of philological works he has furnished Tonnool Vilakkam, a tamul Grammar of the higher dialect, written in Latin. Of this I made a Translation in 1814, which having become the property of the Madras Government is now, as I learn under course of publication at their College Press. The Clavis Humaniorum Tamulic Idiomatis, a second Grammatical Treatise in Latin, relating to the higher dialect. A Latin Grammar of the common dialect, which has been published at the College Press at Madras, and of which a faulty and vulgar translation has long been before the public.

Such were the literary labours of Beschi, and he was distinguished as much for his piety and benevolence as for his learning. To the conversion of idolators his principal efforts were of course directed, and they are said to have been uncommonly successful. Perfect master of Hindoo science, opinions and prejudices he was eminently qualified to expose the fallacies of their doctrine, and the absurdities of their religious practices, and, accordingly, he is much extolled for the triumphs which he obtained, in those controversial disputations which are so frequent among the learned in India, and for the almost uncanny skill which he displayed, in solving various enigmatical questions which his adversaries propounded for his embarrassment.

It remains a subject of regret that talents so rare should have been devoted to the promotion of a religion scarcely less replete with error, than that which it supplanted; but we may draw this practical conclusion from Beschi's success, that a thorough acquaintance with Hindoo learning and a ready compliance in matters of indifference with Hindoo customs are powerful human means, to which the Jesuits owed much of their success, and which should not as is too much the case, be despised by those who undertake the task of conversion in a better cause. Viramamoon continued to hold the office of Divin in Trichinopoly until the year 1740 when that city being besieged by the Mahratta army, under Motary Rao, and Chunda Sahib being taken prisoner he contrived to effect his escape, and fled to the city of Gyal Patman then belonging to the Dutch. He there remained in the service of the church, until 1743, when he was carried off by an illness, the particulars of which are not stated. His name is still remembered in Gyal Patman and Masses continue to be offered up for the salvation of his soul in that city and its neighbourhood.

A translation of the first or introductory section of the Mahabharat, giving an account of the origin and contents of the poem, and of the birth and early actions of the Pandava Princes translated from the Sanscrit, by Nannak or Nannyapa Bhatt into Telugu verse. This writer, according to a passage in the introduction of the translation, quoted by Mr Campbell in the preface of his Telugu Grammar, lived in the reign of Vishnuverddhana, of the Chalukya dynasty, King of Rajamahendri or Rajmundry. In three of the above copies, however, the verses which precede the extract given by Mr Campbell, mention the name of the Prince to be Rajanarendra, the Son of Vimaladitya, and Vishnuverddhana is therefore only an epithet or a title. Mr Campbell also observes, that if the assertion of Colonel Wilkes, on the authority of the MacKenzie Manuscripts, that the Chalukya dynasty preceded the Kadamba, which reigned at Banavasi in the second century, be admitted, the work of Nannia Bhatt may boast of great antiquity, but there is nothing in the Mackenzie collection that supports Colonel Wilkes's assertion. Chalukya Kings are found in various inscriptions dated as late as the 11th and 12th centuries, and several of them bear also the title of Vishnuverddhana. Numerous inscriptions occur in the Rajamundry district of these Princes, and especially of one named Vira or Vijaya Rajendra, who is designated as Kulottunga Chola and Saptama Vishnuverddhana, or the seventh Vishnuverddhana, whose grants bear date from Saka 1032, to 1044, or from A.D. 1110 to 1122. We have, however, information still more precise as to the individual who was the patron of Nannia, and three different inscriptions in the Temple of Srikurma Swami in Jagan-nath, record donations made by Rajanarendra son of Vimaladitya raja of Rajamundry. These inscriptions are dated Saka 1190, or A.D. 1273. Nannia Bhatt, therefore, flourished at the close of the 13th century, shortly anterior to which period it appears that the Telugu language was first cultivated. The oldest works extant, according to Mr. Campbell, dating about the end of the 12th century, and being separated by the interval that witnessed the fall of the ancient Government of Teligana, and the establishment of that of Vijayanagara, or about a century and a half, form the era of nearly all the Telugu works, now current in the country.

Nannaya Bhatt was a Brahman of the Mudgala tribe, and sect of Apastamba, and well skilled in Sanscrit literature. He seems to have been the first writer of eminence, who bestowed pains upon his native tongue. He wrote a grammar of it in Sanscrit, in the usual style of Sutras, or concise and obscure aphorisms. His translation of the Malabharat extended according to some accounts, to little more than the two first books, but from the expressions of his continuator Tiklana Somayaji, it should seem he translated three books. The third book or Vana Parva is not in this collection. According to the legend, his work was suspended by the undesigned imprecation of Brihisicar, a son of Siva by the widow of a Brahman, who had uttered a curse upon his father that he would never attain to a boon

On enquiring what Nannaya was engaged in, he was told he was in the Aranya or Forests section, to which he replied, alluding to the extent of the whole task, the translator would never get out of the wood, and accordingly a part of the Vana or Forest Parva was the limit of Nannaya's labours.

2.—Sabha Parva.

Palm leaves

The second book of the Mahâbhârat, containing an account of the palace constructed for Yudhishtîra by Maya—The institution of the Rajasuya or sacrifice of kings—The subjugation of different parts of the world by the four junior Pândava Princes—The loss of all his possessions by Yudhishtîra at play to Duryodhana, and consequent departure of the Princes into exile.

3.—Virâta Parva.

Palm leaves.

The fourth book of the Mahâbhârat, giving an account of the events that occurred to the Pandavas whilst residing as household servants with Virâta Raja, and their rescuing his cattle when carried off by the Kuru Princes.

The Vana Parva or third section was translated, it is usually said, in part, by Nannia and completed by a Brahman named Irupragada. In the introductory lines of this work, the three first books are attributed to Nanniah. The third Parva is not in the collection.

The translator of this is Tikkana Somayâji, a Brahman of Nellore, of the tribe of Gautama, and sect of Apastamba, the son, or according to some accounts, the grandson, of Bhâskara Mantri, who accompanied Mamma Kesara when appointed by Pratâpa Rudra to the Government of Nellore. The same Prince, it is said, anxious to have the work of Nannaya completed, circulated two stanzas for the learned men of his country to translate, and gave the preference to Tikkana's version. He was accordingly directed to continue the work, and retired to Nellore, where the Patron of his family, Siddharaja, built a dwelling for him near the Temple of Ranganâth Swâmi, by whose aid, and that of Vyâsa himself, he finished his task in three years: he then presented the work to Pratâpa Rudra who made him handsome presents, and returned to Nellore where Siddharaja gave him a village. In this he resided till his death, the date of which he is said to have recorded himself in the following verse Ambara ravi sasi salabdhambulu jana kala yukt, aswija masam ambaramaniprabhanibham bagu Tikkā yayyu Bramham pondenu, "Tikkā as resplendant as the sun, was united with Brahma in the month of Aswin in the Saka year 1210 or A.D. 1288. This would make him cotemporary with Nannaya Bhatta Pratapa Rudra however was either the last king or last hut one of Warankal which was taken in 1323 by the Mohammedans. He himself was taken and carried prisoner to Delhi early in the 14th century. His grants also in the Guntur district bear the date of Saka 1241 or A.D. 1319, and Tikkana Somayaji, if cotemporary with him flourished about thirty or forty years after Nanna a period when the continuation of the work, left unfinished by that translator, would be likely to be an undertaking of much interest. Tikkana Somayaji had two cousins employed in the service of Siddharaja, one of whom also named Tikkana or Tikkana Mantri was the Raja's minister. The writer says in the introduction to this work he was induced to undertake it by the recommendation of his father, who appeared to him in a vision.

15 —Panduranga Mahatmya

a Palm leaves—b do incomplete

Legendary account of a shrine of Vishnu as Panduranga, the pale complexioned deity, who sanctified by his presence in this form, the place where Pundarika a Muni, performed his devotions. The place is now known as Panderpur a town on the left bank of the Bima or Bhimarathi river, and celebrated in recent times as the scene of the murder of the Guikwa's Agent by the Ex Peshwa. The deity now worshipped is a piece of stone supposed to have fallen from heaven, and thence denominated Vittal Swami or Vittoba it is considered as an emblem of Vishnu

The proofs of the efficacy of this shrine are in the usual absurd

strain Thus a snake is said to have obtained final salvation from inhaling the odour of the flowers which had fallen at the feet of the image of Vishnu, which it had approached in chase of a mouse The narrative is told by Suta to the Rishis and is said to be taken from the Skanda Purana The local or Sthala Mahatmya being translated by Tanala Ramalinga son of Krishna Rama It is dedicated to the minister of a petty Raja named Padarayama, and dated in the reign of Krishna Raya

16 — Bhama Khanda

Paper

Legendary account of the shrine of Bhimeswara one of the twelve principal Lingas, described in the Puranas and one of the three supposed to have contributed to the etymology of Trilinga, Telinga or Telingana, the boundaries of which were marked by three Lingas, one at Srisaila on the Krishna, one at Kalesvara on the Godavari, and the third at Dracharam in the Rajamundry district, where the temple is still an object of veneration The legend is said to be a translation from a similar section of the Skanda Purana It is the work of Srinath son of Marya and grandson of Kamalanatha It is dedicated to Bendapudi Mantri or minister of Anantama Reddi, and Virabhadra Reddi, two of the Reddi or Reddiwar dynasty of Princes who upon the subversion of Warankal by the Mohammedans, rose from the rank of landholders and farmers, to be the Rajas of Kondavir which station they held for about a century from the end of the 14th to the end of the 15th century A temple of Sita as Amaresvara on the banks of the Krishna was built by one of this race, Alla ramanu Reddi in A D 1361, as appears from an inscription found there According to most traditions the dynasty was subverted by Langula Gajapati, sovereign of Orissa, but this is impossible, as he reigned a century earlier or about A D 1236 A verse in the Amuktā Mala calls Krishna Raya of Vijayanagar the conqueror of Virabhadra and captor of Kondavir which is no doubt correct

18 — Venkateswara Mâhatmya

Palm leaves

Legendary account of the celebrated shrine of Vishnu at the Tripeti hills, 80 miles N W from Madras According to the legend this was originally part of, or mythologically the son of, Meru, named Venkatachala or the Venkata mountain. Sesha the great serpent and Vayu the god of wind, disputing pre eminence, tried their strength upon this mountain, when Vayu blew it to the Dekhin along with Sesha who had coiled himself round it to keep it firm. After the recovery of the Vedas by Vishnu as Varaha, he found Sesha engaged in devotion on the mountain, and at his request consented to reside there, bringing the mount of pleasure, or Krîdchala and different sacred reservoirs from his own heaven or Vaikuntha— hence different holy spots at this place are termed Seshachala, Krirachala, Varaha tirtha, Swami Pushkarini, &c. Afterwards, at the request of the gods, who complained of the fatigue of seeking him in all parts of the universe, Mahavishnu consented to remain here with Lakshmi, or as Sri-nîvas the abode of Sri or Sri Swami the Lord of Sri. Amongst the first pilgrims, was Dasaratha who obtained eons, Rama and his brothers by worshipping here, and Krttikeya who expiated the sin of killing Taraka. The first temples were built by Tondaman Chakravarti in the beginning of the Kali age, and the annual ceremonies were then instituted. Vishnu having sent his Sword and Discus to assist his brother in law Vasu whose sister, an incarnation of Lakshmi, the daughter of Ankusa Raja, he had fallen in love with and married, he became con founded with Siva, until the time of Ramanuja when the temple at Tripeti was once more made a Vaishnava shrine by that reformer. In order to effect this he is said to have agreed with the Sarras to leave in the temple, a Conch and Discus, and a Trident and small Drum—then temple was closed for a night and on being re opened it was found that the image had assumed the two former, or the insignia of Vishnu. The Vaishnavas appropriation of this temple is therefore modern, and the different shrines are of no great antiquity. The great temple was built by a Yadava prince, about A.D. 1048, and the later Chola princes, and the sovereigns of Vijayanagar are recorded as the chief benefactors of this place, constructing an infinite number of temples, pavilions, shrines, Choultries, and reservoirs on the hills in the vicinity, which are objects of great veneration, and a very numerous pilgrimage. Vishnu is worshipped here under five forms—Sri Venkatachala Pati which is the principal, Mala yapa or Utsavabari the image produced at the annual ceremonies Srinivas a figure recumbent. Kolaru bari an image in the Naga pavilion who is supposed to preside over daily occurrences and Venkata Torarao an image that is brought forth once a year on the Kausiki dwadasi. Besides the daily ceremonials there are numerous occasional observances held during the year but the resort of pilgrims is most numerous, at the period of the Durga Puja or about October—a tax is levied on the pilgrims which yields above a lack of Rupees a year. Access to the principal Pagoda has never been permitted to Europeans. The legend is by Venkatarya, son of Krishna Raya, a Brahman of the Bharadwaja tribe.

19.—Jagannath Mahatmya Paper

Legendary account of the celebrated shrine of Jagannath in Orissa and its foundation by Indradymna, by desire of the deity Nilamadhava who appeared to him in a dream, and directed him to construct the three images of Jagannath, Balabhadra, and Subhadra out of the trunk of a Ber tree floated to the sea side—Viswakarma having been employed to make the images, undertook the task, on condition of not being interrupted. The king's impatience inducing him to break in upon the artist's labours. Viswakarma abandoned his work, and left the images unfinished. This gave the king great uneasiness but he was consoled by a voice from heaven to tell him the intention of the deity had been fulfilled and that the images thus incomplete were to be consecrated which was accordingly effected. The work also contains a description of the various holy places in the vicinity, the different ceremonials observed, and the merits of performing pilgrimage to the shrines. By Venkatarya.

Paper

Legendary account of a temple of Vishnu at Srikakolam or Chitalale on the Krishna river, said to be translated from the local Purana, a section of the Brahmanda Purana. The place was originally consecrated by the devotions of Brahma, at whose request Vishnu consented to be always present the town was afterwards built by Sumati, Emperor of India. The reservoir was dug by him and filled with the aid of the Discus of Vishnu, whence it was named the Chakra Tirtha. At a subsequent period, it is described as the scene of a dispute between the Brahmans and Jains, which was decided by the Raja's putting a snake privately into a covered pot, and desiring them to say what it contained. The Jains replied, a snake, the Brahmans, a Chakra, an umbrella, to which the snake put in by the Raja, was found, on opening the pot, to be transformed the place was thence called Ahichhatra, from Chakra as before and Ahi a snake—Sudalshina, the sovereign of this place, invited the Brahmans of Kasi to reside there, who upon a famine occurring at that city, repaired to Ahichhatra. At a later period Vishnu as Sriwallabha appeared in a dream to the adopted son of Ananga Bhima king of Orissa in the end of the 12th century, and told him to find his image under the root of a certain plant, and erect a temple to him at Kakola Ksetra, which he did accordingly, and to him therefore the origin of the present temple may be referred. The form of Vishnu now worshipped at Srikakola, is the Anila Madhusudana, a celebrated King of ancient Telingana or Andhra Linga, the King being identified with the deity Madhusudana.

31 —Alware Katha

Paper

An account of the twelve Alwars, the personified weapons, ornaments and companions of Vishnu, most of whom were born as teachers of the Vaishnava religion according to the system of Ramanuja long anterior to that reformer, but comprehending him and one of his successors—the dates are in general evidently fabulous, but some of the individuals may have had a real existence

1 Poya Alicdr an incarnation of Vishnu's shell, was born from a lotus in the reservoir of a temple at Kanchi towards the close of the Dicapar age He lived three thousand years, and propitiated Vishnu by his devotion, and a cento of verses in his praise, whence he was honoured by a visit from him, and was united with him at Terukatalur

2 Pudhata Aluar was the personified mace, born at the same period as the preceding, in Tondamandala, he composed a hundred verses in Tamil derived from the Vedas

3 Peya Alvar was also born an incarnation of Nandaka at the same period, at Mailapur on the sea shore, and was the author likewise of a hundred Tamil verses in honour of Vishnu.

4 Terumar Peya Alvar was the personified Discus, who was incarnate in the Kali year 3600 at Tirumushli in Tondamandal, and composed verses in praise of Vishnu and the shrines at which that deity was worshipped.

5 Nam Alvar born at Terukarur on the Tamra parni river, was an incarnation of Viswakarma in the first year of the era of Yudhishthir. He was the author of several hymns in honour of Vishnu.

6 Kulutelkara Alvar an impersonation of the Kauistubh gem was born in Kerala or Malabar in the Kali age—he wrote both Sanskrit and Tamil poems in honour of Vishnu.

7 Periya Alvar was an incarnation of Garura, born in the Pandya country some time in the Kali age—he wrote a short tract on the actions of Krishna.

8 Terupana Alvar was an incarnation of the Srirangam pot—and was born near Sriranga in the year of Salihahana 122, he wrote verses in praise of Tirumale.

9 Terumangar Alvar was the personified Seru-—cow of Vishnu, born near the mouth of the Caren in the year of Salihahana 217. He was a great thief, but not the less a saint, as he appropriated the booty to the service of the deity, and especially to the construction of the seven walls of the temple at Srirangam.

10 Tondama Alvar was the incarnation of Vishnu's garland and was born in the Salihahana year 145, near the Caren. He led a life of celibacy devoting himself especially to cultivating flowers and preparing garlands for the deity Sriranga Nayak.

11 Ambaramanar Alvar, who was an incarnation of Vishnu's slippers, was born at Sri periyar in the year of Salihahana 931, or A.D. 1000, and attached himself especially to the court of Varada raja at Kanchi—he received the stamp of his deity from the hands of Periya Nambi a worshipper of Vishnu—Srirangam. Periya Nambi accompanied the Alvars and instructed him in the essential dogmas of the Faith.

conferred upon him the title of Ramānuja, and directed him to disseminate the lessons he had learned. His other names are Lilavibhuto, Lal sh nana muni, Wodiyar, Ambaramanar, Setlagopa, Subhashyakara, Yatindra, Kulatilal a and Yatisarvabhauma

The twelfth and last Alwar was Kurath Alwar, the cousin of the preceding. Images of these Saints are generally kept in the Vaishnava temples in the Dehkhin.

Paper, incomplete

Legendary account of Bāsaveswara or Basava or Basuapa an incarnation of the bull of Siva, Nandi, who descended to earth to restore the religion of Siva, and who as a real character appears to have been the founder or promoter of the Lingayat religion in the Dehkhin in the eleventh century, and minister of Bijala or Vijala Raya king of Kaljan. The work contains chiefly marvellous stories of Basava and some of his disciples, and their contests with the Jains, of whom the Raja was the protector, in consequence of which the Jangamas compassed his death. The principal works on the history of Basava occur in the Hala Karnata language.

36—Panditarādhyā Cheritra

a Paper, imperfect—b do do

A large collection of marvellous stories relating to different Aradhyas or Saints and Teachers of the Lingayat sect, interspersed with a description of the efficacy of the Symbols of Siva, and a variety of Pauranic and other legends, illustrative of the Supremacy of the deity as a Linga. The collection when entire is said to comprise 2000 tales, in five sections, but both these copies are mere fragments. The stories are taken it is asserted from the Basava Purana, and translated by Somanath Aradhyā of Palkuri, son of Vira Pochesvara, by the order of his Guru Mallikarjuna Panditarādhyā, the work is dedicated to Surana Amatyā. The following is one of the stories —

Surasāni the widow of a man of the hunter tribe, who was a devout worshipper of Siva made after her husband's decease the Jangam priests the chief objects of her devotion, entertaining them in her house, to the great scandal of her neighbours. The Brahmins of the Agraharam complained to the Raja, that the widow was accustomed to eat intoxicating drugs, smear her body with ashes, wash the feet of the Jangamas, and treat them, the Brahmins, with contumely and abuse. The Raja being much incensed proceeded with the Brahmins to the house of Surasāni, but sought for her and her usual guests in vain not a soul was to be found. After his departure, a Chandala fowler of black complexion, robust make, and dwarfish stature having a flat nose and curly hair, smeared with holy ashes carrying a rosary of Budralakshmi beads and wearing a Linga round his neck, passed by the residences of the Brahmins, making a great noise, and pretending to sell fruit, abusing the Brahmins, and reverencing the Jangamas. On arriving at the door of Surasāni she welcomed him to her abode, washed his feet gave him food and an apartment to repose in. As the neighbours now thought they had caught her in the fact, having watched the man into the house they beset the dwelling, and brought stakes and ropes to secure him — Surasāni, hearing the clamour said ‘What would you the disciples of Siva come to the houses of his followers, in the dwelling of the worshipper of Maheśvara, Maheśvara abides where the Lingam is revered, there is the Lingam—why do you reproach the worshippers of the destroyer of the sacrifice why do you insult and not follow the example. I tell you he that is in my house, you cannot discover the Lord of the world is in my house, you cannot see him the Supreme God is in my apartments—how should sinners such as you behol^l Him How can you gaze upon the three-eyed god So saying she opened the door The Brahmins rushed in and sought in every place for the Jangama but could not find him and they were much astonished and ashamed being satisfied that the supposed Chandda must have been Siva himself.

Krishna Raya Cheritra

a. Palm leaves. b Paper

A poetical account of the reign of Krishna Raya, the second, or according to some accounts, the illegitimate son of Narasinha or Narasa Deva Raya, and 17th prince of the Narapati Kings of Vijayanagar, which state, it is generally asserted, was founded in the commencement of the 14th century by Harihara and Bulka Raya, and speedily attained a degree of solidity and power which enabled it to extend its sway over the provinces south of the Tombuddra, as far as to Cape Comorin, and to make head for about two centuries against the Mohammedan principalities of the Dekhn until they combined to effect its downfall This took place in 1564 at the battle of Tellicolla when Rama Raja was defeated and slain in an engagement with the united armies of Vijayapur, Ahmedabad, Golconda and Beder. The princes of Vijayanagar thence ceased to exercise a paramount authority over the states of the Dekhn, although individuals of the family continued to hold portions of the empire at Pennakonda, Chandragiri and Vellur to a recent period

The power and reputation of the princes of Vijayanagar, and the comparatively modern periods at which they flourished, have rendered their history familiar in the Dekhn, and numerous accounts of them are contained in the papers of this collection From these, several notices were derived by Col Wilkes, and published in the introductory chapters of his History of Mysore, and Col Mackenzie himself published an account of the princes of Vijayanagar in the Asiatic Annual Register for 1804. In general, however, the original records are little more than Chronological lists, one of which has been published in the introduction to Mr Campbell's Telugu Grammar, no doubtly from this source. These lists vary, not very widely perhaps for Indian history, but still more considerably, both as to persons and dates than might have been expected, from the facilities afforded to accuracy in both respects. The usual enumeration of princes from Bukka to the third Sriyanga is 27 princes, but a list at Permutur gives 31. The date most commonly assigned for the foundation of Vijayanagar is A.D. 1336 and that of the prince last named A.D. 1616 but the Permutur list makes the first date A.D. 1215 and places Sriyanga ten years later—we have also the dates 1313, and 1314, assigned for the commencement of the dynasty,—and these are the most usual, although there is reason to think that even 1336 is rather too early.

Considerable variety also prevails in the local accounts with respect to the origin of this dynasty. As noticed by Col Wilkes, one account describes the founders Bukka and Harihara as Officers of the Raja of Warangal, who founded an independent principality after the subversion of that state by the arms of Ala ad din—another tradition makes them Hindu Officers in the service of the Mohammedan prince, who gave them the site of Anagundi or Vijayanagar in Jagir. The more usual tradition ascribes the construction of the city to Vidyáranya or Madhava, the famous commentator on the Vedas, and a man of great learning, who, it is said was enabled to build the city by the treasure with which Bhutanesticari, a form of Durga whom he had propitiated by his devotions, enriched him. He reigned, it is asserted, twenty five years and then gave the city to Bukka, the son of a Cowherd, who had fed him with milk when he led the life of an ascetic. It is very unnecessary, however, to pay regard to any of these traditions for Madhava leaves no doubt of his own character, and that of Bukka, in various passages of his works. He calls himself, and is termed by his brother, also a writer of eminence, the minister of

Sangama, the son of Kampa a powerful prince whose rule extended to the Soathern, Eastern and Western Seas Bukka and Harihara are named by Madhava as the sons of Sangama, and an inscription published in the Asiatic Researches, (vol ix) verifies the relation It is clear therefore that Bukka and Harihara were descended from a line of Princes, insignificant very probably as to their territorial possessions, notwithstanding Madhava's hyperbolical description of their power, and to a certain extent perhaps dependant on the paramount Rajas of Waranhal or Telingana, the annihilation of whose supremacy elevated these petty chiefs into the founders of an imperial dynasty The Mohammedan historians of the South of India, speak of the Princes of Bynagar or Vijayanagar as possessed of power long anterior to the Mohammedan invasions of Southern India, and Ferishta asserts that the Government of the country had been exercised by the ancestors of Krishna Raya of Bynagar for seven centuries For all historical purposes, however, the origin of this state as a substantial principality, may be admitted to have occurred at the period specified, although by no means in the manner described in the tradition

From an examination of the inscriptions in the Mackenzie Collection several exceptions are suggested to this chronological arrangement—Grants of but fifteen princes are found, and one of those is not in the above list—of these, two are cotemporary with others, reducing the list to thirteen, amongst whom 256 years are divided, leaving only about 46 unaccounted for, which we cannot suppose to be divisible among 14 kings. It is very probable, therefore, that several of the names in the above list are gratuitous interpositions, and it is also clear, as in the case of Virupaksha, that some of them are misplaced. The names and dates of the inscriptions are the following —

1 Bukka Raya	A.D.	1370 to 1375
2 Harihara	"	1385 to 1429
3 Deva Raya	"	1426 to 1458
4 Mallikarjuna	"	1451 to 1465
5 Virupaksha	"	1473 to 1479
6 Narasimha	"	1487 to 1508
7 Krishna	"	1508 to 1530
8 Achyuta	"	1530 to 1542
9 Sadasiva	"	1542 to 1570
10 Trimala	"	1568 to 1571
11 Sriranga	"	1574 to 1584
12 Venkatapal	"	1587 to 1608
13 Virarama	"	1622 to 1626

We have between the first and second princes a blank of ten years, between the fourth and fifth, eight years, between the fifth and sixth, eight years, between the tenth and eleventh, three years, and the same between the eleventh and twelfth and between the two last an interval of fourteen, which need not be wondered at, as the reduced state of the family must have made their grants less regular and frequent. It is also to be observed that in some instances we have contemporaneous dates, or the grants of one prince beginning before those of his predecessor terminate. This may be owing to inaccuracy in the record, or to the practice of Hindu princes associating the heir presumptive in the government, so that two princes reign at the same time. Another source of confusion arises from the assumption of regal powers by the Minister, whilst leaving to the rightful sovereign the title of Raja, and some independent authority in unimportant matters, in which case, grants by the real and by the titular monarch will run parallel thus amongst the inscriptions a number occur in the name of Imadi Praurha Deva Raya dating from 1450 to 1466—being nearly the same extent as the grants of Mallikarjuna from 1451 to 1465 and these names therefore apply either to one person, to two contemporary princes, or to a reigning Minister and pageant prince. The latter we know to be the case in another instance, or Rama Raya whose grants are very numerous, and date from 1547 to 1562. Those of Sadasiva are also very numerous, and extend from 1542 to 1570, but this prince we learn from both Hindu and Mohammedan authorities was a cypher and Rama Raya, the Minister, exercised the functions of king.

According to some of the traditions, the first princes of the family were from Telingana, but others bring them from Tulura, which seems most probable, as they were possessed at an early period of their intercourse with the Mohammedans, of sea ports on the Western Coast. In the latter part of the century, the line was changed, a whom the Hindu records describe by Ferista ns. possessed himself of the Narasimha of Telur arasinha, is des of the had nagar His illegitimate son, Krishna Raya appears to have been the most distinguished of the whole series of Vijayanagar princes, and although his name is not mentioned by Ferishta, it is admitted that in 1520 or in his reign, the Mussulmans sustained a severe defeat from the armies of Vijayanagar, and that subsequently a good understanding prevailed between that Court and the Bijapur monarchy for a considerable period. According to the authority which has given rise to these observations, Krishna Raya was the son of Narasa or Narasinha by Nigamba a friend or attendant of the queen, and was actually an incarnation of Krishna the deity. His step mother Tippamka jealous of his superiority as a boy over her son Viranarasinha, prevailed on her husband to order Krishna Dera to be put to death. The officer to whom this duty was entrusted being reluctant to fulfil it, applied to the Prime Minister, who undertook to secrete the prince till he could be produced with safety, and the king was told that his commands had been obeyed. In his last illness, the king was much afflicted for the death of his son on which the Minister produced the prince, and Krishna Dera was declared his heir and successor. The Minister delayed proclaiming him till he had secured the concurrence of the Palligars, which was obtained it is said through supernatural aid, an absurd tale being introduced for this purpose. Viranarasinha, it is added, died of vexation on his brother's being acknowledged Raja. The contests of Krishna Raya with the Mohammedan prince of Bijapur have been already adverted to, and he is here said to have waged successful war against the Mohammedan sovereign of Golconda.

According to this work, Krishna Raya reduced Masur, and the country along the Cavery to his authority—defeated the Mohammedan Armies of Bijapur and Golconda—captured the Ports of Udayagiri, Kondavir, and Kondapalli, and invaded Orissa, the Gajapati Prince of which country was compelled to do him homage. He married the daughter of the Raja of Orissa, and return to Vijayanagar, with which the narrative concludes. The work is by Dhurjati son of Arugandi Karipati and was composed by order of the ruler of Arrid in the Ceded Districts.

Krishna Raya was a great patron of literature both Sanscrit and Telugu, and the principal works in the latter date from his reign. Of the learned men of his court, eight are distinguished as the eight Dig gayas or Elephants who uphold the world of letters. The names of the whole have not been ascertained, but the following five were of the number, Apyaya Dil chit, Allasani Peddana, Venlata pala, Bhattu murtti, Pingalo Suranarya. The first is a Sanscrit writer, the last are eminent as Telugu authors.

2.—Rama Raja Cheritro

a Palm leaves—b Paper

An account of the genealogy of Rama Raja the son in law of Krishna Raya, and Minister of Sadasiva, the last prince of Vijayanagar, with a description of the hostilities carried on by him and his sons Siranga Raya, and Venlatapati Raya against the Mohammedan princes of the Dekhin. Composed by Vengaya son of Surappa by command of Rama Raja. This work of course does not contain the particulars of Rama Raja's fatal conflict with the Mohammedan princes, originating immediately in the insult offered to the envoy of Ibrahim Adil Shah. This is not specified by Terishita, but the Hindu records state that on going to an audience of the Raja, the envoy passed on his way some swine intended to be given to menials of the court. As he expressed his abhorrence of these unclean animals to the Raja, the latter treated his aversion with ridicule, and asked him how he could hold them as unclean, when he fed upon fowls, who picked up grains from the ordure of swine, and took an opportunity of shewing him the fact. The insult roused Ibrahim Adil Shah to arms and he was readily joined by the other Mohammedan princes who were eager to revenge indignities offered to Mosques and the faithful, by the Hindus, when acting as allies with one or other of them in their wars amongst themselves. Rama Raja met them with great spirit, and a sanguinary action took place at Talikota on the banks of the Krishna. The contest was long doubtful, but the Raja was accidentally made prisoner, and instantly beheaded. His army then dispersed and immense slaughter took place in the pursuit. The confederates advanced to Vijayanagar, which was taken, and plundered, and the country laid utterly waste. The power of the state fell never to rise again. Different members of the family settled in Pennajonda, Chandragiri, Vellore and some returned to Anagondi on the N E quarter of Vijayanagar the latter branch after being expelled by Tippu became dependant on the English Government as petty Landholders. On the downfall of Vijayanagar the Governors to Gingee, Trichanapalli, Mysore and other places to the south became at the same time independent, and continued so with various changes of fortune till they were comprised within the pale of British dominion or control.

This work is also entitled the Narapatijiayam or Rama Vijayam and is nothing more than a detailed and encyclopedic genealogy. The descent of the Raja is traced to Brahma through the lunar race to Nanda one of the seven Liugs of the Andhra dominions—the ninth from him it is said was Chaulukya Bhupila in whose race many kings governed the earth, to Vijala king of Kalyan. The genealogy is then uninterrupted although not always very distinct the direct line appears to be as follows—

4.—Pratapa Cheritra

Paper

An account of Pratapa Rudra the last of the Kakateya kings of Telingana of any power. According to this account the family descended from Arjuna thus,

Parikshit

Janamejaya

Satanya

Kshemaka

Somendra

Somanripa

Uttunga Bhuja who first removed to the Dekhin, and was succeeded by Nanda, who founded Nandagiri

His grandson Somadeva was defeated and killed by the Ballahadu of Cuttack, the Balhara probably of the Arab Geographers.—His wife being pregnant, fled and found refuge in the house of a Brahman named Madhavasarma at Anumakonda or Hanumadgiri. The boy was named Madhava verma, who, when he grew up, raised a formidable army, chiefly through the favour of Padmashri a form of Durga, and with it reduced Anumakonda and the country between the Godavari and Krishna to subjection. He is considered, and perhaps with reason, as the founder of the family—his reign, and those of his descendants are thus enumerated.

Madhava verma reigned	160 years
Padmasena	74
Vennama	73
Terula	73
Kurundi	76
Pendikonda	25
Bhuranika malla	78
Tribhurani'a malla	76
Kalatipralaya	70
Rudra madlara	73
Mal adera	20
Ganapatidera	75
Rudradevi	29
Annamaleia	12
Pralaya Rudra	76
making altogether 1000 years

Of these princes Kalatipralaya is said to have removed the capital from Anuradapura to Warankal in Sal 990, or A.D. 1068. Inscriptions however in the time of Ganapatidera occur dated A.D. 1231 whilst Warankal was taken and plundered in 1323, in the time of a son of Praldpa Rudra who held a short sovereignty over the remains of the city, after its first capture by the Mohammedans. If we reckon from the last, as the best authenticated period, we may place the commencement of the dynasty with Mal adera verma something less than three centuries earlier, or in the end of the 11th or beginning of the 12th century of the Christian era. Although Warankal ceased to be the capital of a state of any note after its spoliation by the Mohammedans, it continued to be the residence of princes of some power, between whom and the Mohammedan princes, and the Rajas of Vijayanagar, frequent intercourse was maintained both of peace and war. Its final downfall appears to have been owing to the extension of the power of the Gajapati princes of Orissa, as much as to the ascendancy of the Mohammedan arms. By Virana son of Mallapa Raja, a Brahman of the Atreya family who resided at Charuvapalli in the Pulkonda district—the work comprises the legendary history of Anumalonda or Hanumadgiri.

5—Jangama Kalagnyana
a Paper—b Palm leaves

An account of the princes of various countries in the south of India, subsequently to the reign of Vijala Raya at Kalyana, especially of the Velala kings, and of the Vijayanagar dynasty to the defeat and death of Rama Raya, given in a prophetic strain by Sarvajna, a Jangama priest and his son Virupana. The prophecy extends to a future period when Vijayabhanandana or Viravarasanta and Chenna Basavanna are to meet at Sri Saila—the latter is to become the Minister of the former, who is to reign over the whole earth, and the joint efforts of the two will render the Jangama the universal faith. Sarvajna is said to have been the son of a Brahman by a woman of the Potter tribe, and to have taught the Jangama doctrines from the age of ten until he was re-united with Sita.

6—Katama Raja Cheritra
a Palm leaves—b Paper

A long account, in which fact and fiction are curiously blended, of a petty war between two chiefs who rose to independence after the downfall of the state of Warankal, in the 14th century. Manava Siddha or Siddha Raja the prince of Nellore was one of the parties, and the other was Katama Raja, the ruler of Yeragada, assisted by Padma Nayak of Palnad. The dispute originated in the herds of Katama trespassing on the pastures of Siddha Raja, a force under Tikkana Mantri, the cousin of Tikkana Samayogi the poet, was sent to drive them out, but was repelled by the herdsmen supported by troops Tikkana being received with great coldness by his parents and his wife on his return home, vowed to redeem his credit or perish—he was accordingly killed in the next encounter. The people of Katama being hard pressed in a subsequent engagement, invoked the aid of the cows, who accordingly attacked and put the enemy to the rout. Siddhi raja was then obliged to come in person to the field of battle, where in a personal conflict with Katama he was killed, and Katama died of his wounds. This seems to have terminated a contest of a very sanguinary description, and each party withdrew to their own boundaries. The death of Siddhi raja led to the subversion of the short-lived principality of Nellore, and the territory was soon afterwards included in the possessions of the Reddavar family of Condair.

7—Palnad Vira Cheritra

Paper

Account of a seven years war, from 1080 to 1087, carried on by Brahma Naidu and twelve other landholders and graziers, against two towns, Guyerla and Macherla, in the Palnad country, and which originated in a dispute at a cock-fight.

8—Nara Chola Cheritra

Paper

An account of nine of the most distinguished of the Chola princes, or Keralala, Vikrama, Uttunga, Aditara, Varadherma, Satyendra, Manujendra, Vira and Uttama, confined however to fabulous narratives of the faith of these princes in the Vira Saiva or Jangama religion as related by Panditaradhyya, a Jangam professor, to Bhairavendra, Raja of Sorakpur in Mysur, a great patron of the sect. The work is interspersed with marvellous tales of the actions of different priests or saints of the sect, and is translated from the Karnata. By Silumanupa Selli, a descendant of Sankara Das one of the disciples of Chen Bascsuver—one of the founders of the Jangama form of Saiva worship in the Eleventh century.

9—Nandala Krishnama Vamsatali

Genealogical account of Nandala Krishnama of Nandal—the son of Nrisinharaja, the son of Narayan, the son of Nrisinha, who first settled at Nandal—the son of Srinjaraya, the son of Aruiti Bukha Raya, a prince of the lunar race This genealogy is extracted from the introduction to the Kala, purnodaya dedicated by the author Pingala Surana to Krishnama Raya

a Paper—b do

Genealogical account of the Valuguti family of Rajas or Zemindars in possession of Venkatagiri. The founder of the family is said to have been Ohavi Reddi who discovered a hidden treasure, of which he became duly possessed by offering, with his own consent, his servant to Bhairava or Vetāla, whence he was termed Patalmari Vetala Rao. His son Prasadita Naidu was chiefly instrumental in raising Pratapa Rudra to the throne of Warangal. After the overthrow of that prince, the members of this family extended their authority over a number of districts along the Krishna River. Two of them, brothers, Anupota Naidu and Madan Naidu are said to have defeated and taken a hundred and one Rajas, fifty-one of whom they ground in oil mills, and fifty they offered in sacrifice to Kali and other Sava deities. Another great conqueror was Lingam Naidu who slew Anuvama Reddi, and had his figure and those of other Rajas sculptured on his spitting pot. A second Anupota subdued Kodavur and Rajamahendri and established himself there and at Chinapatam. The family seem to have been then ennobled to the Vijayanagar dynasty, and several members of it, as Padalondapa Naidu and his brother Gene Naidu—with the two sons of the latter Nayappa, and Timma distinguished themselves against the Mohammedans in the reigns of Krishna Deva, Achyuta Raya, and Rama Raja. Yacham Naidu who reigned about 1600 is also said to have been a great conqueror, defeating Makaraja and Derpalpura Naidu—capturing Chenji or Gingi and Palemkota and extending his arms to the south as far as Madura. His grandson however appears as the fendor of the Kutteb Shahi king of Golconda, holding venkatagiri by his permission as Nanlar or alimentary estate. Benjar Yachem his Great grandson was put to death by Zulfikar Khan the General of Aurungzeb about A. D 1696 but the zemindari was granted after an interval to his son. The direct line terminated with the 37th descent in 1776 but was continued by adoption. The following appears to be the series of succession, omitting the collateral branches. The statement is not always very distinct.

1 Pdtalmári Vetal	23 Kumára Timma Naidu.
2 Damanaidu	24 Padakonda Naidu
3 Vanamnaidu	25 Padakonda Naidu 2nd.
4 Yeradakshanaidu	26 Chennappa Naidu
5 Sinha manaidu	27 Venkatádri Naidu who possessed Venkatagiri , and gave it that name, as it was a hill dedicated to Káli or Kali málé—The village is situated a kos from Venkátachala .
6 Madan	28 Ráyápá
7 Vedagiri Naidu	29 Pennakondapa Naidu
8 Kumár madan	30 Yachama

a Palm leaves—b do

An account of some of the first Nayaks of Madura. Soon after the establishment of the Vijayanagar Dynasty, their authority was extended over nearly the whole of the countries to the south, leaving them in general under the management of their princes as feudatories paying tribute. In the reign of Krishna Raya two of these, the princes of Chola and Pandya, or Tanjore and Madura being at war, Nagama Nayak, a Telugu officer of the Raya was sent to the support of the Pandyan prince. After subduing the Chola Raja, Nagama imprisoned his Ally, and assumed the sovereignty, in consequence of which a force was sent against him under his son Viswanath Nayak who defeated his father, and sent him prisoner to Vijayanagar. The father was forgiven in consideration of the loyalty of the son, and the latter, on the death of the Madura prince which happened shortly afterwards, was made Governor of Madura. He took advantage of the hostilities between the Rajas of Vijayanagar, and their Mohammedan neighbours, to convert his government into an independency and was succeeded in it by his descendants. The dynasty extended to 14 princes, commencing about 1530, and continuing till the middle of the last century, when Chandasahib got possession of Trichinapali. The following appears to be the most accurate enumeration of these princes, some of whom have left remarkable traces of their reigns at Madura and Trichinapali, and others were well known to the Christian Missionaries.

1	Viswanāth —about	1530
2	Krishnapa
3	Virapa
4	Visicapa
5	Kumāra Krishnapa
6	Kasturi Ranjopa
7	Mutu Khishnappa
8	Virapa died	1623
9	Terumala or Trimal	1663
10	Mutu Virapa —
11	Chola nāth died	1687
12	Krishna Mutu Virapa	1695
13	Vijaya ranga ; part of the time under the regency of his mother Mangamāl ; died 1731
14	Vijaya Kumāra ; under the regency of his adoptive mother Mindakshi , in whose time the Mohammedan prince seized the fort—the Princess poisoned herself—the adoptive son and his father survived these disturbances, and became dependants on the Paligar of Rāmnāl , or the Nawabs of the Carnatic, until the whole came under British authority.

Palm leaves.

An account of the actions of Raghunāth, a Paligar of the Tinnevelly country who conquered different districts from the Setupati or Māraca prince, and from the Mohammedan governor of Trichinapali.

According to this tract he was descended from the deity Indra, who had by a mortal nymph several sons—Terumala Raya of the Ahila tribe descended from one of these became a prince of great power, and is regarded as the first of the dynasty, the line of which is the following:—

1	Terumala Raya	6	Narasa Sauri
2	Panchādhyā	7	Pāchanaropāla
3	Tondala	8	Nāmanā
4	Naranacholādhipa	9	Pachamahiru
5	Terumala Nispalachandra	10	Kinkinipatti

- 11 Tonaka Nipati
12 Tirumala Bhupa

- 13 Padmápta
14 Raghunath

The last was an officer in the service of Vijaya Raghava Raja of Tanjore, and subdued various districts to the South, which he appears to have erected into an independent principality. His son was Tirumala Raya, his son was Sri Vijaya Raghunath who it is said conquered Chanda Khan, and took up his residence in the Tondaman country.

22.—Maharaj Bomaraj Vamsavali a. Paper—b. do

Genealogy and historical account of the Maharajear prioces who ruled at Karvelinagar, or the Zemindars of Narayantaram or Naranur not far to the south of the Tripathi hills. The family is deduced from a Chola king termed Dhamanyaya Chola through Tondaman Chakravarti, in whose race Narayan Ray was born, who founded the city of Narayantaram or Kalyana Patan from its being on the Kalyan, or what is now termed the Narayantaram river. The line then proceeds through 87 descents to Maka Ray, whose nephew it is asserted was an Ally or feudatory of Krishna Raya of Vijaynagar. The descent is continued through fifteen other names, to Kareti Ray, Raja of Karvelinagar in the Zilla of Chitor, with whom the work concludes, and by whose desire it was completed by different poets of his court. It is more a panegyrical than historical account of the family, and is copiously intermingled with praises of the deity Venkatachala Swami.

23 —Kanyaka Cheritra

Paper

Traditional account of the voluntary exile or death of the Vaisyas of Penakonda in consequence of Vishnu verddhana Raja's demanding the daughter of Kusuma setti in marriage, and on the merchant's refusal, attempting to carry her off by force. In consequence, one hundred families it is said migrated to the west, eighty to the east, two hundred to Goa, and one hundred and thirty to the north, whilst Kusumetti, his daughter, and one hundred and two families burnt themselves. Vishnu verddhana in consequence of the imprecation pronounced by the Virgin died—his head bursting in two. His son Rajaraya Narendra appeased the surviving Vaisyas, and induced them to remain at Penakonda, making Virupaksha, the son of Kusumasetti, chief over eighteen towns.—By Guruvaya

54 — Sarangdhara Cheritra

Palm leaves

Story in verso of Sarangdhara son of Rajamahendra king of Rajamahendri whose step mother Chitrangi falls in love with him He rejects her advances, on which she accuses him to the king of attempting to violate her, and the King orders him to have his feet cut off, and to be exposed in the forest to wild beasts There, a voice from heaven, proclaims that the Prince in his former life was Jayanta, minister of Dharala Chandra, who being envious of Sumantra one of his colleagues, contrived to hide the slippers of Sumantra under the bed of the Queen

The king finding them and ascertaining whose they were, commanded Sumanta to be exposed to wild beasts after having his legs and hands cut off in retribution of which Jayanta, now Sarangdhara, suffers the like mutilation. He acknowledges the justice of the sentence, and his wounds are healed by a Yogi. A voice from heaven apprises the king of the innocence of his son, and he takes Sarangdhara back and puts Chitrang to death. Sarangdhara adopts a religious life. The same story occurs in Tamul, see page 218. By Chamakuri Venkapatlu son of Chamakuri Lakshmana Kavi.

66—Vikramarka Cheritra

a Palm leaves—b do—c paper

An account of the celebrated prince Vikramárla or Vilrama ditya and his brothers, according to this legend Vikramarka on his travels propitiates Kali under a fig tree near Ujayan and she confers upon him a life and reign of 1000 years. Prasena king of Ujayan, dying without heirs, Vikramárla is elected monarch after reigning many years he visits Indra, and upon his return observes evil omens, the cause of which is explained by Bhartrihari to be the birth of his brother's destroyer. The king sends his familiar to search for this person, and the Vetala discovers him in Sálvahana just born of a virgin six months old, at Pratishthana—Vikramarka sets out to kill him but is encountered and slain by Sálvahana. Vikramarka is succeeded by his son to whom Bhoja succeeds

The work contains also the story of Bhartrihari who detects the infidelity of his wife by the receipt of a fruit which he had given her, and which she presented to her gallant, the gallant to a female slave—the slave to a common woman, and the last again to the king. Bhartrihari in consequence retired to an ascetic life. By Kondaya Kari son of Chittiya Timmia and grandson of Mallikarjuna inhabitant of the Ceded districts
Ms. c is by Ielaya

Although denominated the Vikrama Chariṭra, these works are nothing more than the collection of tales narrated to Bhoja by the animated statues which supported a throne formerly belonging to Vikramaditya, and subsequently found by Bhoja. On his attempting to ascend it, the statues, which were so many Apasarases or nymphs of heaven, consigned for a given period to do penance in this form, denied his pretensions, as being infinitely inferior to their former master, in disinterestedness, courage and liberality. Each image tells an anecdote of Vikramaditya in support of the assertion, and the work is thence known as the Sinhasana Dicṭṭanāta, or Thirty-two (tales) of the throne, such being the number of its supporters.

The original collection is unquestionably Sanscrit, but versions exist in every cultivated dialect. Such as occur in this collection agree tolerably well with each other in the purport of the stories, although admitting occasional additions and embellishments. Such is the case with the Telugu and Marhatta versions, and to these may be added the Bengali as printed in Calcutta. The Hindi translation, published likewise in Calcutta, differs in every respect from the original, the authenticity of which is nevertheless corroborated by the agreement of the other three, the Telugu, Bengali and Marhatta, with each other, and with the Sanscrit text. The Telugu differs chiefly from all the rest in the introductory portion. The original simply states that Bhartrihari was king of Ujain and that Vikramaditya his younger brother succeeded him, on his abandoning the world, in consequence of detecting his wife's infidelity by the well known circumstance of the fruit, which, given by him to the Queen, was presented by her to her paramour, and after a time came back again to the King. According to the Telugu version however Vikramaditya, was one of the four sons of Chandragupta a Brahman of Ujain—the others were Vararuchi, Bhatti and Bhartrihari—Vararuchi the elder was the son of a Brahman woman, and adopted a religious life—Bhartrihari the son of a Sudra woman obtained the throne of Ujain but resigned it for the reason above stated, when Vikramaditya succeeded—Bhatti was his minister. The Marhatta and Bengali follow the original Sanscrit. The Hindi makes Vilrama one of the six sons of Gandharb Sen Raja of Ambarati the others are Brahmant, Sanlha, Bhartrihari, Chandra and Dhanwantari Sankha becoming the minister of the Raja of Dhar the father of Bhoja, killed him, and was killed by his own brother, Vikrama, who thns became king of Dhar

A remarkable part of the story of Vikramaditya is his being killed by Salivahana of Pratishthana In the introduction to the Sanscrit work and the Bengali translation, this fact is merely announced In the 23rd story however, in both, Salivahana is said to be the son of a Brahman widow by a Naga kumara a serpent prince, whose aid gives animation to clay figures of men elephants and horees for his son's service in the engagement, from which however Vikrama by the aid of Vasuki retires unharmed The same story is told in the same manner and place in the Telugu version, but the introduction improves upon it, by stating that Vikramaditya solicited a boon from Mahadeo that he should never be slain, unless by the eon of an infant virgin, in tending thereby an impossibility Such however was Salivahana, being begotten by a Naga kumara on a female child one year old Salivahana, with the aid of his father and the animated toys defeats and kills Vikramaditya The Marhatta so far amends this story that it makes the virgin mother of Salivahana seven years of age Not a word of these incidents is found in the Hindi work, nor any mention of Salivahana at all Those peculiarities of the story, therefore, which shew the strongest traces of the appropriation of early Christian legends, are of local and probably recent origin, and after all present no very striking analogy

7.—Basava Purana

Paper

An account of the origin of the Langayet, Jangama or Vira Sava sect, characterised by wearing the emblem of Siva round their necks, or on their foreheads. According to the followers of this faith, which prevails very extensively in the Dekhin, Basava, Basava, Basavana, or Basavapa or Basavappa, different modes of writing his name, only restored this religion, and did not invent it. This person, it is said, was the son of Madiga Raya a Brahman, and Maderi written also Madala arasu and Mahamba, inhabitants of Hinguleswar Parati Agraharam on the west of Sri Srinivasa, and both, devout worshippers of Siva. In recompense of their piety, Nandi the bull of Siva was born on earth, as their son, becoming incarnate by command of Siva, on his learning from Nareda the decline of the Saiva faith, and prevalence of other less orthodox systems of religion. The child was denominated after the Baswa or Basava the hull of the deity. On his arriving at the age of investiture he refused to assume the thread ordinarily worn by Brahmins, or to acknowledge any Guru except Iswara or Sua. He then departed to the town of Kalyan, the capital of Bijala or Vijala Raya and obtained in marriage Gangamba the daughter of the Dandanayak, or minister of police. From thence he repaired to Sangameswara, where he received from Sangameswara Swami, initiation into the tenets of the Vira Saiva faith. He was invited back from this place to succeed his father in law upon his decease, in the office he had held.

After his return to Kalyan, his sister, who was one of his first disciples, was delivered of a son Chenna Basava, who is not unfrequently confounded with his uncle, and regarded perhaps more correctly, as the founder of the sect.

After recording these events, the work enumerates various marvellous actions, performed by Basava and several of his disciples such as converting grains of corn to pearls—discovering hidden treasures—feeding multitudes healing the sick, and restoring the dead to life. The following are some of the anecdotes narrated in the work.

Basava having made himself remarkable for the profuse honours he bestowed upon the Jangamas, helping himself from the Royal Treasury for that purpose, the other ministers reported his conduct to Bijala who called upon him to account for the money in his charge. Basava smiled, and giving the keys of the treasury to the king, requested him to examine it, which being done, the amount was found wholly undiminished. Bijala thereupon caused it to be proclaimed that whoever calumniated Basava should have his tongue cut out.

A Jangama who cohabited with a dancing girl, sent a slave for his allowance of rice to the house of Basava, where the messenger saw the wife of the latter, and on his return reported to the dancing girl the magnificence of her attire. The mistress of the Jangama was filled with a longing for a similar dress, and the Jangama having no other means of gratifying her, repaired to Basava to beg of him his wife's garment. Basava immediately stripped Gangamba his wife, and other dresses springing from her body, he gave them all to the Jangama.

A person of the name of Kanapa who regularly worshipped the image of Lakshmi imagining the eyes of the deity were affected, plucked out his own, and placed them in the sockets of the figure. Siva pleased with his devotion restored his worship per his eyes.

A devout Saiva named Mahadevaka Machaya who engaged to wash for all the Jangamas, having killed a child, the Raja ordered Basava to have him scourged and punished, but Basava declined undertaking the duty, as it would be unavailing to offer any harm to the worshippers of Siva. Bijala persisting, sent his servants to seize and tie him in the legs of an elephant, but Machaya caught the elephant by the trunk, and dashed him and his attendants to pieces. He then proceeded to attack the Raja, who being alarmed, applied to Basava and by his advice humbled himself before the offended Jangama. Basava also deprecated his wrath, and Machaya being appeased, forgave the King, and restored the elephant and the gaard to life.

A poor Jangam having solicited alms of Kinnaraya one of Basava's chief disciples, the latter touched the stones about them with his staff, and converting them into gold, told the Jangam to help himself.

Story of Sivala

Sivala Jangama who resided at Karki distributed food daily to one thousand Jangamas. Siva in order to try his faith went to his house disguised as an Asetic. As soon as Sivala saw him he fell at his feet and invited him to take some repast. Siva replied to him that he must have human flesh from some one of Sivala's family to which the latter agreed and carried him into his house. Having communicated the wish of the Jangam to his wife Ganguli they determined to sacrifice their son. In the mean time Siva proceeded to the son of Sivala named Chillata who was at school and told him that he would be killed by his parents for the food of a goblin and therefore he had better run away but the lad replied to him You are an Asetic why do you seek to alarm me my life is not dear to me, and I shall lose the benefits of this and the next world by disobeying the commands of my parents. Do not you know, that it is better that my flesh should be digested in the belly of a devotee, than that I should be separated from Siva by worldly cares. Do not dissuade me in this manner, but return to your abode." The Ascetic accordingly returned. The mother of the lad then brought him home, and bathed and adorned him, and prepared to kill him and told him that through their virtues, the Ascetic had asked them to offer their child, and that they had agreed to it. The lad replied that he was fortunate, and should thus obtain salvation. His mother counselled him then not to be afraid, but to repeat the prayer Nama svāya, and the parents then cut off his head, and dressed his flesh as nine sorts of curry, reserving only the head. On presenting the dishes to the Ascetic, he flew into a passion, because the head was not given, and being afraid of his curses, they produced it, when the Ascetic desired them to dress that also. This being effected he commanded them to partake of the meal along with him. Siridāla hesitated to eat of his child but the wife enforced his compliance, and they sat down on either hand of the Jangam. The pretended devotee then commanded them to send for their son to dinner, and being afraid to vow that they had killed him, they stated he would presently come from school. The Ascetic refused to eat without him, and desired them to call the boy, with which they were forced to comply—on doing so, the boy to their great astonishment came out from an adjoining room with three golden ears. Then Siva appeared in his own shape, and carried the parents and son and the ancestors of Siridāla to Kaslas.

Madivala Machāya's Restoring Bāsava, and Kinnaraya to life

Kinnarāya died and his soul united with the Jangam, worn round his neck. This circumstance being reported to Bāsava he immediately went to the deceased, and lamented as follows. How can I live without you, you are my heart, my soul, most excellent among the Jangams, how can I stay behind you we all came to the earth together and it is not proper for you to depart before me who will protect me now, you are gone. So on his account he died, himself, and was united with the spirit of the Jangam. The Jangamas who were with Bāsava, then went to Madivala Machāya and informed him of the death of Kinnarāya, on which he repaired to the spot, and thus addressed the corpse of Bāsava—you are the creator of the souls of the Jangamas, their preserver and destroyer you have associated with them, and aided them, rise, rise, you have offered up your body to keep your promise, and as a mark of friendship and affection, but is it proper to keep your faith to Kinnaraya, and break it to the Jangams? They will die on your account. How can they exist after you are dead—you should have restored his life, not died yourself. Siva will be ill pleased by such an act. Siva has taken the life of Kinnaraya into his essence, but why should you have unnecessarily perished? Why do you ignorantly resign your life when Siva has been pleased to take him away, as you have promised Kinnaraya that you would accompany him, you have done so, but now you must fulfil your pledge to the Jangamas, you are their life and must revive for them

To Kinnaraya, he observed—It is well for you to relinquish your life, before you have accomplished the objects enjoined by Siva, and at the same time take away the existence of Basara it is decorous for you to have departed without the knowledge of the Siva—Ganas your souls cannot unite with each other, but ought to be absorbed into Siva you must therefore bring back Basara, and be content to exist here as long as he tarryes upon earth—on the conclusion of these harangues Kinnaraya rose to life as if awaking from sleep, and Basara was immediately restored to life They both fell at the feet of Machaya and the other Jangamas and the Siva Ganas were extremely pleased, and astonished at the power of Machaya, and they praised him, and said, he is verily an incarnation of Siva Bhadra So they returned to their respective dwellings

The work is also in many places addressed to the Jainas, in the shape of a dialogue between some of the Jangama Saints and the members of that faith, in which the former narrate to the latter instances of the superiority of the Sava religion, and the falsehood of the Jain faith, which appears to have been that of Bijala Raya and the great part of the population of Kalayana. In order to convert them Ekanta Ramaya one of Basara's disciples, cut off his own head in their presence, and then marched five days in solemn procession through and round the city, and on the fifth day replaced his head upon his shoulders The Jain Pagodas were thereupon it is said destroyed by the Jangamas. It does not appear however that the King was made a convert, or that he approved of the principles and conduct of his minister He seems on the contrary to have incurred his death by attempting to repress the extension of the Virasava belief. Different authorities, although they disagree as to the manner in which Bijala was destroyed concur in stating the fact the following account of the transaction is from the present work

" In the city of Kalayana were two devout worshippers of Siva named Allaya and Madhuraya They fixed their faith firmly on the divinity they adored, and assiduously revered their spiritual preceptor, attending upon Basara wheresoever he went The king Bijala well knew their merits, but closed his eyes to their superiority, and listening to the calumnious accusations of their enemies commanded the eyes of Allaya and Madhuvaya to be plucked out. The disciples of Basava, as well as himself, were highly indignant at the cruel treatment of these holy men, and leaving to Jagaddeva the task of putting Byala to death, and denouncing imprecations upon the city, they departed from Kalayana—Basa: a fixed his residence at Sangameswara

Machaya Bommidevaya, Kinnara, Kannatha, Bommadeva, Kakaya, Massanaya, Kolakila Bommadeva, Kesirajaya, Mathirajaya and others, announced to the people, that the fortunes of Byala had passed away, as indicated by portentous signs, and accordingly the crows crowed in the night, jackalls howled by day, the sun was eclipsed, storms of wind and rain came on, the earth shook, and darkness overspread the heavens. The inhabitants of Kalayana were filled with terror.

When Jagaddeva repaired home, his mother met him, and told him that when any injury had been done to a disciple of the Siva faith his fellow should avenge him or die. When Daksha treated Siva with contumely, Pariati threw herself into the flames, and so under the wrong offered to the Saints he should not sit down contented, and so saying she gave him his food at the door of his mansion. Thither also came Mallaya and Bommayya two others of the Saints, and they partook of Jagaddeva's meal. Then smearing their bodies with holy ashes, they took up the spear and sword and shield, and marched together against Byala. On their way a bull appeared, whom they knew to be a form of Basava, come to them aid, and the Bull went first, even to the court of the king, goring any one that came in their way, and opening a clear path for them. Thus they reached the court, and put Byala to death in the midst of all his courtiers, and then they danced, and proclaimed the cause why they had put the king to death. Jagaddeva on his way back, recalling the words of his mother, stabbed himself. Then arose dissension in the city, and the people fought amongst themselves, and horses with horses, and elephants with elephants until, agreeably to the curse denounced upon it by Basava and his disciples, Kalayana was utterly destroyed.

Basara continued to reside at Sangamesvara conversing with his disciples and communing with the divine Essence, and he ex postulated with Sita, saying "By thy command have I and thy attendant train come upon earth, and thou hast promised to recall us to thy presence when our task was accomplished." Then Sita with Pariati came forth from the Sangamesvara Langam, and were visible to Basara who fell on the ground before them. They raised him, and led him to the sanctuary, and all three disappeared, in the presence of the disciples, and they praised their master, and flowers fell from the sky and then the disciples spread themselves abroad, and made known the absorption of Basara into the emblem of Sita.

This account of Basara is by Bhima Kavi a similar compilation, if not the same, is sometimes attributed to Somana Aradhya a Jangama teacher.

Paper, incomplete

An account of Chenna Basara, an incarnation of the Pranava or mysterious syllable Om, begotten on Nagalambika the sister of Basara, herself an incarnation of Pariati, by the spirit of Sita. According to the legend, Byala calling in question the spiritual origin of Nagalambika's pregnancy, she was delivered in presence of his whole court of a child resplendent with all the attributes of Sita, and whose divine nature was consequently fully proved and acknowledged. The incarnation of the Pranava was for the purpose of instructing Basara, or the incarnate Nandi, in the tenets of the Virasava faith, the establishment of which is thus divided between the uncle and the nephew. Chenna Basara appears to have been more wholly a religious character, although the secular authority of Basara was most instrumental in the augmentation of the Jangama sect. The Dynasty is carried perhaps some thing too far back at the commencement, but the list probably is not very far from correct. The last prince was taken by the Mohammedans, and his capital destroyed in their first invasion of the Dekhin, about A D 1310 11.

This work next gives an account of the foundation of Vijayanagar, and the princes who ruled over it, with its subversion by the Mohammedans as well as their capture of Srirangapatam and Chandragiri.

The work also gives an account of the author's own death or absorption, and the share he took in the transactions consequent on Bijala's death, which are here described in a different manner from that noticed in other works. The following is the account

Siddha Ramaya Allama Prabhu Basava and others had acquired the knowledge of Shat Shala (the six sets of meditation by which Siva is manifested) from Chenna Basava and had departed all but the first who demanded of his teacher what would come to pass. Chenna Basava replied, You will depart your life at Bonala pura. Allama Prabhu after wandering over many regions, and visiting various shrines in the mountains of the north, as well as the South of India will come to Basava and be received by him with great veneration, which will displease many of Basava's disciples and they will depart. Allama Prabhu will then feed miraculously one hundred and ninety six thousand Jangamas and will then depart to Bravala where he will convert Gorakh and other sages and will he absorb

The original catalogue calls these works, the Yama Basava Purana, but each wants the beginning and end, and the name therefore cannot be verified. The first is a dialogue between Chenna Basava and Allama Prabhu on the principal events and doctrines of the Jangama faith. The second is a gross narrative of the origin and progress of the Jangama religion in the same strain as the other works of this class.

Discourse between Prabhudeva and Chenna Basava

Prabhudeva said I have come to know the Almighty from you, a knowledge I have acquired, but I still wish to hear the particulars of my birth from you. How else can I appreciate Sangana Basavana, as he is known to you. I have explained to the people the nature of both eternal and transitory things. I have ascertained God and abandoned the world. I have discriminated the acts of the body, and mind and holy wisdom, I have attained the limits of true wisdom and am worthy to hear the story of Basavana who is the disciple of Guhyeswar.

The junior minister, Chennah Basava being satisfied of his possessing true wisdom, thus replied When the world is blank and there is nothing

The extent of Jambudwipa which is below Mera is related likewise in the Purana.

Prabhudeva asked him, is there any other region. He replied, the circumference of the earth including the seven oceans and islands is three and seventy lacs and fifty thousand Yojans beyond this the mountain Rajatadri is ten crores of yojans, beyond it is darkness for five hundred crores of yojans the constellations planets and other celestial bodies are

An account of the origin and acts of Allama Prabhu a celebrated Jangama teacher, who appears to have been equally instrumental with Basava in establishing the faith the work gives also an account of the birth and actions of Basava, and of some of his chief disciples The following account of the birth of Allama Prabhu, is more particular than any contained in this work is taken from No XVII

Story of Allama Prabhu subduing Maya

On the mountain of Kailas, when Siva was sitting in his Court—Chandeswara stood up in his presence, and saluted him with a single hand Pārvati Devi observing it said to Siva “Oh Parameswara every one salutes us with both hands—what is the reason that this person salutes with but one Parameswara then became two fold, or half Siva and half Pārvati Chandeswara beholding it, remarked, although foul or fragrant odours may be wasted by the wind or the shadow of the sun reflected from a jar of water, yet are they not one existence—Maternity is the source of all confusion, you Parameswara are distinct from matter unproduced, inconceivable you are omnipotent through the three regions. So saying he turned to the right half, and saluted it alone. Parvati then being highly enraged, spoke thus Chandesha I am the material mask of the spirit How can you refuse to acknowledge me—you are under my command as long as you are enveloped with a body Is it proper to disregard me Chandesha said, though gold may be found in soil yet it is not united with it though the pearl is produced in the water yet it becomes not water, though the lotus float upon the pool yet it remains unmoved. In like manner I have a being free from matter so be quitte his mantle the material Devi and directed the god of wind to display his power, in doing which he hurled down eight lacs of mountains then Siva considering him as his principal disciple placed him on his knees and fed him with nectar Chandesvara then became Bhairavaswara with three legs at which the Ganas were surprized and called him Ganeshwar the exempted from matter Parvati beholding Siva said that she had conferred half of her body on him and Brahma and Vishnu and the rest were concentrated in her which then was greater Bhringiswara or Siva himself Siva replied to her, that she might send a part of her essence to the mortal world and he would send Bhringise there and she might then examine his spiritual truth. Parvati accordingly sent a spark of her essence to be borne as Maya on Mohinidevi the queen of the King of Banavasi named Mamalakaraya This Maya became a harlot and associated with the musician of the temple of Madhukeshwar at Banavasi The spirit of Bhringiswar or Ni maja Ganeshwar was born by Nivahanlila on Sijnanadevi at Karure and his parents gave him the name of Allama Prabhu and nourished him When he was grown up he said to his parents that he was born to them for their faith to Siva and wished to teach the prayers of Siva to the disciples in the different regions and he shewed them the mode of attaining liberation He went to Banavasi and subdued the musicians and Maya there and obtained the title of Nironjana, and wandered throughout different parts of the world and wrought many miracles for the disciples of Siva

An immense collection of legends, partly Pauranic, and partly of more modern invention, and local credit relating to the supremacy of Siva, and the marvellous actions of his most celebrated votaries. Of the former class are the burning of Kama, Siva's assuming the moon for his crest, his taking the ganges on his head, his residing at Kasi, and the subversion of Daksha's sacrifice, the history of the solar and lunar races is also given, and the overthrow of all the principal Asurs, as Ravana, Mahis hásura, Andhaka, Jalandhara, Raktaraja, Taraka, Triputra and others. In the second class, narratives of the devotion of various princes of the Chola and Pandya dynasties are given, as well as of Basava, and his disciples. The work is named after Bhairavendra, or Bhairavanka, of whose origin the following account is given

" Nareda having come one day to Siva at Kailas, reported that the worship of that deity had very generally declined, and men were immersed in iniquity. Siva looked round amongst his attendants, and selecting one of them, named Kalarahasra desired him to assume a mortal form, re establish the true faith upon earth, and annihilate the sects of unbelievers. Accordingly, Kalarahasra was born as the son of the king Sangama Raya, of his wife Harmavati in the town of Morpur in the Andhra country and was named Ehyravánka. He studied the sciences in his youth, and was married to Mahadevi. His favorite diversion was listening to the narratives of the Rámayana Bhágavat and Bharata, and his chief delight the company of the disciples of Siva. After a time, being warned by a vision, he distributed all his jewels and wealth to the pious, and proceeded with his wife to Sosali, and having wrought many miracles on the way, he was received there with great reverence by the prince, named Sambhu Raya, and after a while was united at that place with the deity Somesvara."

Formerly, when Siva was sitting in his Court on the Kailas mountain, Nandik being desirous of seeing the world of mortals requested his lord's permission to descend upon the earth. Having received the solicited indulgence he visited all the islands and continents and in the course of his travels came to the Milpa mountain. There he beheld a king named Anusuya engaged in a hunting party, but who sought an opportunity of paying his adorations to the type of Siva. Finding no Lingam to worship, and remarking Nandik as he addressed him and communicated his wants declaring if he could not procure a Lingam he would starve to death. Nandikesa compassionating his situation granted him his own Lingam, and repaired himself to Kailas where the warden refused to allow him to enter as he had lost his Lingam. Then Siva knowing what had occurred through his divine knowledge went to the gate, and rebuked the warden, saying that there was no difference between him and Nandi and being angry, with him cursed him to be born as Bijala the Chandalya king. Then the warden asked him when his curse should terminate to which the god replied when Siva Vadicala Malle Domma and Jagadlesha shall murder you then come back to Kailas.

25—Vijala Raya Cheritra
Paper

Account of Vijala or Bijala Raya who is said to have ruled at Kalyana pura in the eleventh century, and to have had as his minister Basava the founder of the Jangama faith. Vijala being a Jain persecuted the Jangamas, and attempted the destruction of Basava, who retaliated by seeking to comprise the death of the king

The following is the account here given of this transaction and its consequences

" Vijala Raya having marched against and subdued the Raja of Kolapur was on his return to his capital. Whilst reposing in his tent Basava sent to him a Jangama disguised as one of the Jain persuasion with a poisoned fruit. The seeming Jain presented the fruit, which the Raja had no sooner smelled than he dropped down senseless. His son Immadi Bijala and his attendants hastened to his assistance, but it was in vain. He revived however for a short period and being aware who had perpetrated the murder enjoined his son to put Basava to death. Immadi Bijala accordingly ordered Basava to be apprehended, and all the Jangamas wherever seized to be executed. Basava on hearing this threw himself into a well, by which he perished, and his wife Nilambā poisoned herself. After the resentment of Immadi Bijala was allayed Chenna Basava the sister's son of Basava presented his uncle's treasures to the Raya, in consequence of which he was admitted to favor and to a ministerial office at court

This account differs materially from preceding narratives—(see pages 313 and 316) By Dharani dharendra a Jain priest

Paper

An account of Ratana Siddha an incarnation of Siva as a Jangama priest, cotemporary with Bijala Raya of Kalyana. Having attended at the court in ragged attire, and been treated with contumely, Ratana converted the whole of Bijala's territory into a vast morass. Upon the king and queen humiliating themselves before him, he restored it to its original state. The name of this person Ratana Siddhesuara continues to be the designation of the hereditary Guru of the Kuruba tribes in Mysore (Buchanan I, 397)

27—Satadhikya Purana
Paper

An account of the birth of the son of Sumbhuhalla round whose neck Siva ties a Lingam the boy is in consequence expelled his caste by the Brahmins, and being brought before the king of Kalyana recites various Pauranic legends to establish the supremacy of Siva, a consequence of which the prince, here termed Vijangha Raya, becomes a convert to the Jangama religion. By Basaralinga

28—Sariajna Kalajnyanam
a Paper—b do—c do

A prophetic account of the eras of Vikrama and Salivahana, of the foundation of Anagundi and Srirangapatam, and the subjugation of both by the Mohammedans attributed to a celebrated Jangama priest entitled Sariajna or the omniscient

29—Siddha ramaya Kalajnyan
a Palm leaves—b do

Prophetic annunciation of the birth of Basara, and establishment of the Jangama religion—of the invasion of the south of India by the Mohammedans, and the reign of the Viyanagar dynasty. These details are carried further by a version of the Sarvajna Kalajnyan (see the last number) as a supplementary addition to the present work, in which the downfall of the Vijaya-nagar kings is foretold and the conquest of Anagundi and Sri-rangapatam interspersed with legendary anecdotes relating to Basava, Chenna Basava, Yamma Basava, Siddharamaya, Vira-varṣanta and other worthies of the Jangama sect. The joint composition is of considerable extent, occupying above 200 pages.

30.—Vidyāranya Kalajndra Paper

A prophetic account of the foundation of the city of Vijaya-nagar in the Sal year 1258, or A. D. 1335, and of the succession of its princes, attributed to Vidyāranya or Madhava Swami the minister of Harihara and Bulka the first princes of Vijayanagar. The work is accompanied by a commentary by Krishna Bharata and by some other specimens of prophetic foresight, ascribed to Sua Yogi and the Padma Purana, giving an account of the Kadamba dynasty of kings and other princes.

31.—Nagaya Cheritra Paper

Account of a celebrated Jangama priest who left his country to avoid the addresses of the Rāmī, who was enamoured of him. He went to Sringeri, where he tied a Linga to his foot, with which he returned to Vijayanagar. Prourha Raya ordered it to be taken off, on which Nagaya died, but revived on its being replaced. The Raya then gives him jewels which he throws into the river. Divers being ordered to recover them, find a large treasure in the river's bed. Nagaya thence goes to Kaldstri where he is received into a Linga, the usual consummation of Sāiva devotion.

32.—Nannaya Cheritra a Paper—b Palm leaves

An account of one of the disciples of Basava who receives a Lingam from that teacher, adopts an ascetic life, performs miracles and obtains emancipation, which circumstances are narrated by Basava for the edification of the inhabitants of Kalyana. By Rama Karī.

33.—Siddharamāya Cheritra.

Paper.

Story of a Jangama priest, an incarnation of one of Sīva's attendants who was punished by a mortal birth for stealing lotuses from his master's garden, and after a life of sanctity was restored to his former station.

1 —Kumara Rama Cheritra

a paper—b do—c do—d palm leaves—e do—f do—g do—h do

Account of Kumāra Rama, the son of Kampila Raya of Hosa durga near Vijayanagar By Nanganda Kavi The name and chief circumstances appear to be connected with the capture of Kampula in the Carnatic, by Mohammed the third, in 1338, as related by Terishka—Kampula is probably Komply on the Tam budra near ancient Vijayanagar The work is apparently that to which Major Wilkes alludes as a life of Kampula Raja in the Mackenzie Collection (Sontb of India, vol I p 11; note,) and as he seems to attach to it more importance than it deserves, the following summary of its contents may be of service —

" Singeri Nāyak a zemindar in the woody part of Karnātak, having been obliged to quit his home, in consequence of the increasing numbers of his family, repaired to the Court of Rāma Rāya the Raja of Devagiri and was entertained by him in his service He afterwards found a treasure and obtaining a grant of ground erected a dwelling on the spot After a while, he had a son, to whom he gave the name Kāmpila and married him to Hariyammā, daughter of Gujala Katt Nayak The Sultan of Delhi having marched against Rāma Rāya of Devagiri, defeated and taken him and laid waste his territory, Singeri Nāyak returned to his native country where he was well received by Malla Rāya, whom, on his dying without issue he succeeded, and considerably extended his territorial possessions He was succeeded by his son Kāmpila who was a still greater conqueror, and reduced all the petty Rajas of Karnātak to subjection Kāmpila had five wives—and sons by each by the eldest of them he had last of all, the especial hero of the narrative, Kumāra or Prince Rāma. Amongst the sovereigns who were the neighbours of Kāmpila the Raja of Guti was his rival, and demanded tribute of him which Kāmpila resenting, sent his son Rāma then only twelve years of age with an army against Guti Rāma defeated the Guti Raja, and took him prisoner, and brought him to his father, who liberated his captive on his consenting to become tributary to him Amongst the booty were ten horses which Rāma reserved to himself—his brothers asked him for them to which he replied, Why do you not gain similar prizes by your own prowess Thus taunt they reported to their mothers who thence became inimical to Rāma, and in order to accomplish his destruction incessantly urged the Raja to send him on perilous expeditions. Rāma at last vowed to conquer the seventy Rajas, or not to return, and with this view repaired to the Court of Pratápa Rudra at Warankal—where Linga Setti became attached to him and made him known to the Raja—at first, Ráma was well received but Pratápa Rudra becoming jealous of the encomiastic titles lavished upon Ráma for his heroism by the bards and heralds, desired him to forbear their being applied to him. Rama answered it was easy for him to acquire fresh honors, but he would not part with any that he had ever won—and the enmity of the Raya being thus incurred, Ráma accompanied by Linga Setti left Warankal. Pratápa Rudra detached a force to bring them back, but Ráma defeated it, and in a subsequent action with a larger army was not only victorious but took Bolla the favorite horse of the king and his son who commanded. Ráma then subdued the Reddis of Kondapilli and the Raja of Madugala and returned with augmented reputation to his father. On shewing his booty to the Court, he desired his brothers to ride the horse of Pratápa Rudra which they severally attempted in vain, when Rama sprang upon him and manured him with ease—and his brothers were much ashamed.

At this time the deity Konda Brahmaya directed Rama in a vision to institute the festival of the Sula or trident which he accordingly did with great splendour, erecting a trident of gold in honor of the god. All the Rajas and Chieftains of the south attended. The youngest wife of Kampila named Retnangi having ascended the terrace to see the great personages who were present, and who were individually described to her by her confidential attendant, Rágī was so much struck with the beauty of Ráma that she became passionately enamored of him, and impatiently waited an opportunity of an interview, which at last occurred by accident. Kampila being out hunting, Kumara Ráma was amusing himself at tennis, when his ball flew over upon the terrace of Retnangi's apartments. Not choosing to send a menial to recover it, the Prince went himself, when Retnangi saw him, and importuned him to gratify her desires. Finding him inexorable, her love was changed to hatred and she complained to Kampila on his return, that Rama had attempted to violate her person. Kampila in a rage ordered Rama to be put to death instantly with his four chief leaders Katana, Kalya Narasa Mammadi Sinha and Lengana Setti. The minister Bachapa however, secreted Rama and his friends in his palace and decapitating five ordinary criminals produced their heads to the Raja as those of his intended victims. Retnangi preserved that which was said to be the prince's at first out of revenge, but as her passion subsided as an act of love Kampila soon repented of his haste, and the death of Rama was the subject of universal sorrow. His wives refused to survive him, and declared their intention of burning themselves. A pile was accordingly prepared under the superintendence of Bachapa who contrived a subterraneous passage leading from the enclosure into which the women entered to the chamber where Rama was concealed, and with whom his faithful wives were then reunited.

When the king of Delhi was well assured of the death of Ráma he despatched to Gumatí an army of one hundred and ninety six thousand men under six Khans. Kampila on hearing of their approach, now more than ever regretted his son's death, but being encouraged by his minister, assembled a large force to oppose the Mohammedans. The armies met and fought a whole day without any decisive result—at night Bachapa told Kampila that he had engaged the services of a distinguished warrior, who was so like to the prince Rama that he would not know the difference, and having persuaded Rama to take the field, that hero mounted on his horse Bolla appeared on the second day's battle, and overthrew part of the hostile army, slaying and decapitating five of the Khans who commanded, and sending their heads to Kampila. On the third day, the sixth Khan was killed, and beheaded, and the invading army utterly defeated. Then Bachapa made Rama known to his father, and told the latter what he had done, at which Kampila was exceedingly rejoiced. Retnangi on hearing of Rama's reappearance banged herself, by which Kampila was satisfied of the innocence of his son.

When the broken remains of the army returned to Delhi the Sultan was highly incensed at the cowardice of the commanders, and raising a larger force, placed it under the orders of Matangi, a female warrior of a low tribe. On learning this new danger, Kampila retired with his family and treasure to Hosakota leaving to Ráma the defence of Gumatí—as soon as the enemy appeared at this place, Ráma marched to their encounter and drove them back four kos—but subsequently Matangi seduced the Telugu soldiers in Ráma's army, and they treacherously introduced the enemy into the fort during the night—when Rama was apprised of what had occurred, he sprang from bed, and hastened to the battle desiring his wives to prepare for their fate in case they should hear of his death. Proceeding to the scene of conflict he speedily plunged into the thickest of the fray, where encountering Matangi he seized her nose ring and shaking it told her, he disdained to take the life of a woman. His bravest soldiers surprised and overpowered by numbers fell fast around him and he was left alone. After maintaining the conflict for a long time, and killing vast numbers of his assailants, he was at last slain, and Matangi cut off his head, and carried it to Delhi. The Sultan placed the head, on the palace gate, where in the night it made so hideous an outcry that he was glad to get rid of it, and it was thrown into a ditch fourkos remote—there the cry was repeated, so that numbers died of the fright it occasioned. The Sultan ordered it to be carried to a still greater distance, but every attempt made by men and elephants to move it from the spot proved ineffectual. In this dilemma it was suggested that the bards of Rama should be employed to recite his praises, and messengers were sent to Kampila to solicit their assistance. Daivaya their chief was accordingly sent but his panegyrics at first were in vain—at last being so instructed in a vision he saluted Rama as the subduer of the Sultan of Delhi, the Supreme Sovereign of the world, on which he was able to lift the head with ease—heing permitted to take it away he carried it to Kampala who after weeping over it sent it to Kari ta be plunged to the holy waters of the Ganges."

2—Mysur Arasú Purabhyudaya

Paper

An account of the sovereigns of Mysur from Appana Timma Ray Wadeyar about the year, 1530, to Raya Karasa the second of that name, who died in 1713, with a list of the Dalavais or Governors of Sirangapatam and the territories conquered by the Mysore princes By Nagarada Pulaya The substance of this work, and different extracts from it are given in Major Wilkes's history of Mysur, and the following account of it is found in his Preface —

"A Persian manuscript, entitled an Historical Account of the ancient Rajas of Mysoor, was found in 1793 in the palace at Seringapatam, it purports to have been "translated in 1793, at the command of the Sultan, by Assud Auwar, and Ghulanm Hussein, with the assistance of Pootia Pundit, from two books in the Canara language 'this Persian manuscript was conveyed with other works to Calcutta, and I had not the opportunity of perusing it until the year 1807, when my friend Brigadier General Malcolm obtained a copy from Bengal A book in the Canara language, of which the contents were then unknown, was given in 1799 by Colonel W Kirkpatrick, one of the Commissioners for the affairs of Mysoor, to Major, now Lieutenant Colonel Colin Mackenzie, and has since been translated under his direction with scrupulous care It is the Canara manuscript from which the Persian translation was made, and is entitled "The Succession of the Kings of Mysoor, from ancient Times, as it is in the Canara Cuddullums, now written into a Book by command, by Nuggur Pootia Pundit It is divided into two parts, as noticed in the Persian translation the first contains the historical narrative, and the second, the series of territorial acquisitions In the first the dates are recorded in the year of the cycle only, and in the second they are reckoned by the number of years which had elapsed from the compilation of the work, or, in the language of the original manuscript years ago The apparent embarrassment of fixing the chronology was easily surmounted by Lieutenant Colonel Mackenzie By ascertaining a single date, all the rest were at once arranged, and the manuscript was proved beyond all controversy to have been written in the year 1712 13.

The circumstances which regard the discovery of this manuscript are well known On the death of Chiru Raja Wadeyar, the father of the present Raja in 1796, the family was transferred from the palace to the miserable hovel where they were found on the capture of Seringapatam in 1799 Among the plunder of every thing useful or apparently valuable which "

on that occasion carried off to the stores of the Sultaun, were accidentally thrown two Cudduttumis, which attracted his attention nearly two years afterwards when he ordered them to be examined and translated and two old Cudduttumis, which Lieutenant Colonel Mackenzie received along with the book in 1799 prove on examination, to be the actual originals from which it was copied and are probably the two books mentioned in the Persian translation. A short time before the real compilation of this document the Raj^a Chick Deo Raj who died in 1704, had directed an extensive collection to be made of historical materials, including all inscriptions then extant within his dominions which were added to a library already reported to be voluminous the abovementioned work is probably one of the memoirs prepared in conformity to his directions, but it appears to have been presented to his successor and is a brief but correct record of events up to the year 1712. It is however to be regretted that the author furnishes no incidents beyond a mere chronicle of events, after the occupation of Seringapatam by Raj Wodeyar in 1610, probably restrained by prudential motives in respect to living characters. The Sultan, in removing the Rajas family from the palace had intended to destroy the building altogether, and gave orders for that purpose which were afterwards changed. It was reported to him that several large apartments were full of books chiefly of palm leaf and Cudduttumis, and he was asked how they were to be disposed of 'I transfer them' said he 'to the royal stables as fuel to boil the cooltee' (grain on which horses are fed) and this was accordingly done. A small miscellaneous collection was preserved from this destruction by the pious artifice of a bramin, who begged the apartment might be respected as containing the penates of the family. This room was opened in the confusion of the 4th of May 1799 and a large portion of the contents fell into the hands of a British officer.

1—Somasekhara and Chitrasekhara Katha

a. palm leaves—b do—c do—d do—e do

The adventures of two princes, sons of Vajramukuta king of Retnapuri, comprising a number of amusing incidents, several of which are familiar in western story telling—as will appear from the following summary —

The king of Retnapuri, Vajramukuta had two sons by the favour of Siva Somasekhara and Chitrasekhara who in addition to the ordinary accomplishments of princes became expert jugglers and thieves Having heard of the beauty of Rupavati, the daughter of Vikrama king of Lalavati and being desirous of humiliating his pride the princes in opposition to the wishes of their father, proceeded to that capital, determined to secure the hand of Rupavati for one of them. Notwithstanding the city was guarded by ten thousand giants who had baffled and destroyed the emissaries employed by Indra to bring him a description of the charms of the princess, they effected their entrance. They next obtained admission into the palace, and in spite of every precaution plundered the king and queen and princess of their jewels, and stripped their majesties and all the maids of honor of their garments—leaving a written paper stating they would not cease from their depredations until the king consented to give his daughter in marriage to one of them, and threatening if he withheld his consent to carry off the princess. The king was compelled to yield, but coupled his consent with the condition that the pretender to his daughter's hand should kill a fierce Lion that guarded one of the gates of the palace. The princes attacked and slew the lion, who turned out to be a prince metamorphosed. They carried off part of the tail as a trophy. The washerman of the palace finding the head, produced it as evidence that he had killed the lion, and claimed the princess. Preparations were made for the wedding when the princes discovered themselves, and the washerman was put to death. The princess was married to the younger brother, Chitrashkara.

After a time, a bird-catcher brought a curious parrot from Cashmir which was purchased by the princes, and told them, that it alone had escaped the destruction of all living things at Hemavati, which were devoured by a giant in resentment of the king Suvrana's refusing to give him the hand of the princess Suvrana. The princess was kept captive by the giant.

On arriving at Hemavati, he made himself known to the princess, married her, slew the giant, and induced people to return to the country over which he ruled as king.

On one occasion Suvrana, having dropped her slipper in a reservoir, it was found by a fisherman of Kusumal-nari, who sold it to a shopkeeper, by whom it was presented to the king Ugrabhanu. The prince on seeing the beauty of the slipper, fell in love with the wearer, and offered large rewards to any person who should find and bring her to him. An old woman undertook the task, and succeeded in tracing the slipper to its owner, to whom she introduced herself, and made herself agreeable. Finding out that Chitrashkara owed his personal immunity from danger to a charmed ring, she contrived to steal it from him whilst asleep, defied the impression of Siri which it bore, and threw it into the fire, on which Chitrashkara became as dead.

Suvrana would have slain herself, but was prevented by the Crone who to console her, promised to get her another husband in Ugrabhanu and this proposal as holding out the prospect of revenge, was seemingly resented to by the widow. She set out for the capital of Ugrabahu shutting up her husband's corpse in a chamber, and leaving with it a written note to Chitrasekhara, informing him what had chanced, and whether she was gone and promising to wait a month for his arrival, at the end of which term she would put an end to her life.

The wife of Chitrasekhara at the time of her brother in law's decease was apprised of the event by the decay and death of the flower. As soon as this was known to her husband, he set off for Hemanati. On his way he met a monkey, who in his gambols plunged into a pool and came out a man, and a little further on leaped into another pool and issued a monkey as before. Some of the water productive of these changes was taken by Chitrasekhara and carried with him.

On arriving at the place where his dead brother lay, and reading the note which Suvranaðevi had left, Chitrasekhara searched for the charmed Ear ring, which he found defaced and injured, but not wholly destroyed on which account the body of Somasekhara had so long resisted decay. Chitrasekhara set himself to work to repair the ear ring and as soon as it was restored to its former condition Somasekhara revived. The brothers after communicating to each other, what had passed proceeded to Kusumakesari to release Suvranaðevi and punish Ugrabahu. For the readier accomplishment of these ends Chitrasekhara assumed the garb of a religious mendicant and changed his brother to a monkey with some of the water of the pool that produced this metamorphosis.

The Brothers thus disguised appeared before the king, to whom Chitrasekhara represented himself as a magician and at whose request he undertook to win the consent of Suvranaðevi to become his bride without delay. Having then made himself known to Suvranaðevi, and restored his brother to the human form, they devised the plan to be adopted, and Suvranaðevi gave a seeming assent to be married to Ugrabahu—a new mansion was prepared for the purpose, to which Ugrabahu repaired to be wedded by the supposed ascetic to the princess—but on his entering the private chamber Chitrasekhara sprinkled him with the magic water, and he was changed to a monkey. Chitrasekhara going forth, produced a written order from the king, that he should be his deputy for some months in the administration of the kingdom in which the officers of the Court acquiesced. The princes then wrote to their father in law Vishnava to come to their aid, with a sufficient force, with which he complied, and their authority was thus established over the kingdom of Ugrabahu, who in his form of a monkey was sold to a beggar, and compelled to perform tricks for his master's benefit. After settling their new acquisitions, Somasekhara and Chitrasekhara with their wives Suvranaðevi and Rupavati and the father of the latter, paid their own parents a visit much to their astonishment and delight. After a due period of power and prosperity the different princes were admitted to the heaven of Dha.

2—Karibhanta Katha

a paper—b palm leaves—c do—d do

Story of Karibhanta, son of Marabhupa king of Dhár, who was invited by Velala Raya to come and marry his daughter. On his way through the pass called Karibhanta Kamara, a bird with golden plumage led him to where he met Pundarikakshi, a maiden of the race of ogres, who had been promised a youthful and handsome husband by Pariati when about to destroy herself in despair at being forced by her mother to marry Bomma Rakshasa, her brother. The young couple repaired to Pundarikakshi's bower, where the Ogress her mother smelt a man, and thus discovered Karibhanta—a contest ensued, in which the human hero subdued both the old Ogress and her brother and was only prevented from killing them by the intercession of his bride. The parties were then seemingly reconciled and the mother presented her son-in-law with a handsome uncle. Pundarikakshi however suspecting mischief removed this secretly from her husband's leg, and fastened it in the night on that of her uncle. The Ogress, when she thought all were asleep, proceeded in the dark to stab Karibhanta as he slept, ascertaining his identity as she supposed by the uncle, in consequence of which she killed her brother instead. Pundarikakshi knowing that her mother's animosity would be now inflamed by revenge, prevailed on her husband to continue his journey, which he did and proceeded to Karur. When the Ogress discovered what she had done, she vowed to pursue Karibhanta through earth, heaven and hell, and disguising herself as a woman with a child at her back, she went to Karur, where in high market she beheld Karibhanta, and claimed him as her husband, accusing him of having abandoned her and her child. The matter was referred to arbitration. Karibhanta insisted that his life was in danger in the company of the Ogress, but the arbitrators, seven in number, thinking this only mockery, decided against him, and shut him up in a chamber with his wife, promising if any harm happened to him, they would give up their lives. In the morning Karibhanta was found dead, on hearing of which Pundarikakshi, the mother of Karibhanta, and his intended bride, the daughter of Velala Raya, all hastened to Karur to perish with the body a funeral pile was prepared accordingly in which the seven judges, Pundarilalshi and the mother of the hero, successively perished. When the princess was about to follow them, she repeated an invocation to Siva, who immediately appeared to her, and promised to grant her any boon she might solicit. She requested that her husband and the rest might be restored to life, which accordingly came to pass, and Karibhanta returned with his two brides, and his mother to his paternal kingdom, over which he reigned long and happily.

CANARA BOOKS.

The manuscripts of this language are written on Kadellum of which the following particular and accurate description is given by Col. Wilkes.

Cudduttum, currutum, or currut, a long slip of cotton cloth, from eight inches to a foot wide, and from twelve to eighteen feet long, skilfully covered on each side with a compost of puto and powdered charcoal. When erfectly dry, it is neatly folded up, without cutting, in leaves of equal imensions, to the two end folds are fixed ornamented plates of wood, painted and varnished, resembling the sides of a book, and the whole is put into a case of silk or cotton, or tied with a tape or ribbon, those in use with the lower classes are destitute of these ornaments, and are tied up by a common string the hook, of course opens at either side and if unfolded and drawn out, is still a long strip of the original length of the cloth. The writing is similar to that on a slate, and may be in like manner rubbed out and renewed. It is performed by a pencil of the balapum, or lapis clavis, and this mode of writing was not only in ancient use for records and public documents, but is still universally employed in Mysore by merchants and shopkeepers. I have even seen a bond, regularly witnessed entered on the udduttam of a merchant, produced and received in evidence.

This is the word lirret, translated (of course conjecturally) palm leaves in Mr Crisp's translation of Tippoo's regulations. The Sultan prohibited its use in recording the public accounts but although liable to be expunged and affording facility to fraudulent entries, it is a much more durable material and record than the best writing on the best paper, or any other substance used in India, copper and stone alone excepted. It is probable that this is the linen or cotton cloth described by Arrian from Nearchus, on which the Indians wrote — Vincent's Nearchus, p 15 Ar 717

MALAYALAM BOOKS

Kerala Utpatti

Palm leaves

A general account of the province of Kerala or Malabar, giving a description of its origin, and a summary history from the time of Parasu Rama by whom, it is supposed, the province was obtained from the sea, to the reign of the Cheruman Perumal who adopted the Mohammedan religion. The greater part of the work is however a statistical description of the divisions of the province, and the institutes that prevail amongst the Nairs. The composition is ascribed to Sankara achārya and the original of some portion of it may have been his work, but a great part is of a much more recent period as it notices even the coming of the Portuguese. Some use was made of the Kerala Utpatti by Mr Duncan in his account of Malabar (Asiatic Researches, Vol V, article 1) although he speaks of it as not a little confused and incoherent. Amongst Col Mackenzie's papers are two incomplete translations of it, from which it would seem probable that copies vary considerably, the translations offering many irreconcileable variations. The following specimens will convey a notion of this work

To thee Oh Ganapati!—to Saraswati!—to Krishna!—to Sri Parvati!— Sri Bhagavati!—to Sri Bhadrakali!—to Ayepen!—and to Arumukan! be prostration—and also to thee O Guru! be submission profound!—

1 Now I begin to declare the intention of this work

2 In the Krita, Treta Dwápara, and Kali, in all these Four Yugams were many Rajas who ruled the earth properly, with equity (or with a regard to justice and to the public good)

3 Afterwards wicked Rajas arose in the Kshetriya Tribe, and in order to destroy them Sri Parashu Ráma was incarnated

4 Wherefore Parashu Ráma in ancient times in twenty one different battles destroyed the crowned Rajas

5 On that account, that he might be released from the Vira Hatya Dosham or sin of slaying heroes, he went to Gokarnam in order to perform sacrifices.

6 He stood on the hill of Kal malla and prostrated himself to Varuna. He also made his obeisance to Bhumi Devi, the ocean he made to withdraw and the land of one hundred and sixty Kadams was created

7 And that the land of Malayalam might receive protection, he established one hundred and eight Iswars

8 But the trembling of the land did not cease, therefore Sri Parashu Ráma in Kerala created Bramins, and brought Bramins from many points and placed them in Keralam. But they would not stay there always and they all went away to their own countries

9 The cause of this was that into Keralam the snakes came in numbers and remained and thro' fear of their venom no one could remain there with confidence

10 Therefore Sri Parashu Ráma having considered from the Uttara Bhumi (or land of the north) he brought the Arya Bramins and settled (or placed) them there

11 These Arya Bramins formerly set out from the saints of Ahi and came and resided in the Kshetram of Samania Panchalam otherwise called Kuru-Kshetram, from thence Sri Parashu Ráma brought the inhabitants of the sixty four villages and settled them in this foreign land.

12 He promised to grant to each an Agaram and a Gramam, and having told them thus, he brought them and placed them first at Gokarnam, and made them wear the lock of hair on the forehead

13 For the Purva Sikha (or fore lock) is very disgraceful in foreign lands, and by their using the forelock, he considered that if they went away, their tribe would not receive them, he therefore made them wear the lock on the forepart of the head

14 Enjoy the land as a Brahmana Ishtiram" he said, and then to the people of the 64 villages he presented flowers and water

15 Afterwards he established places of 42 feet square, and then he strewed gold dust and stamped coin and thus he awoke the quaking of the land

16 Afterwards he said to the people of the 64 villages—' Do you want weapons—Receive them from me '—Those of the Bharadwaja Gotram then received arms from Rama

17 Then Sri Parashu Rama granted the Sastha Bhiksha (or alms of weapons) with the consent of all and the Bharadwaja Gotram having presented their hands accepted the weapons

18 For that reason those of Vohir assert, that they require no other authority to put people to death—some think this power results from their Tapas Sakti or virtue of their devotion—but it is not so—and they themselves assert it is because the people of their tribe then received the Sastha Bhiksha, and took the Val into their hands hence they are denominated Val Nambis or trusting in swords

19 All this being done by the order of Sri Parashu Rama, he sent for the 64 villages and commanded " You are to give one share out of the property of the Brahmins to the serpents, which lately terrified you (and who are to be considered as local deities) and to protect you accordingly every one granted each one share from their lot and acquired their favor, and afterwards they (the snakes) remained as the local deities and the fear of snakes thus ceased in Keralam

20 He afterwards made or established 108 places of 42 feet square and in each of these places he placed an image of the gods who preside over arms and arts and then lamps were ordained, and Punya was performed

21 He also established 108 images of Durga Devi, on the sea shore and besides erected a snake and Gobbin

22 He sprinkled the gold dust and coined moasy and formed a buried treasure

23 In this manner having stopped the quaking of the land, the Arya Bramins continued to reside with constancy in Malayalam. This being heard by those that went away at first they returned again, and these are called the Pallan Tulwar (or the ancient Tulavar), but having originally come from different quarters and of different tribes the Pallan Tulavar still use different languages

24 Afterwards Sri Parashu Rama assembled the sixty four villages and established them at Vallapa Nat Karra near Palakkad

25 Afterwards to some of those who returned again he granted the duty of menial service in temples, to the people Tarana Nellur in the village of the 64 Gramams he granted the duty of holding a cup at certain ceremonies, and to some he granted the Purinas but the people of the 64 Gramams have no menial offices

26 The gift with water and flowers which was given at first to the Arya Bramins is called the Raja Amsa (or share of the Raja) and what w is given to those who returned the second time is called the Anu-Bhogapen Jenmam (or right of enjoying hereditary property)

27 The rights which were granted at first to the Tavavadu (or chief householder) of each village by Ek Udalam (one water poured out for one grant) to the Gramams (or villages) When two Anneyuneyam or opponents in disputes of litigated property are to perform the ceremony of ordeal, they must in that case declare it to be Anu Bhogam, right by succession but the inhabitants of the other villages on swearing must declare their right of Jenmam right by birth Of the El Udalam, or those who received by water, there are but few and if any of them swear (or dip) to the Jenmam, it will affect or destroy their claim In the Gramams there are not many Taranmas (or people acquainted with the particulars of the subjects) and very few know it , in consequence of which the authority and influence of the Smaritanmas the Brahmans who follow law, as expounders is considerably diminished

28 Afterwards Sri Parasu Rama transferred his Vira Hatya Dosham (or sin of manslaughter) to the inhabitants of Kannad karia and granted to them considerable gifts of lands or property he also named them Varala Parasu, and afterwards they all went to their quarters and there remained Hence in Vallapa Nad there is no Gramam without property and houses

29 In this manner Sri Parasu Rama having established the Kerala country and granted the Udaka Dānam (or gift with water) to the Brahmins of the 64 villages and committed them to the protection of Devendra he afterwards went to the forests to perform Tapas

30 That the Jennungul (or people) of Keralam should be in equal felicity with the inhabitants of Deva Lokam, and that Keralam should be equal to Deva Lokam, Sri Parasu Rama on due consideration committed them to the care and protection of Devendra

31 Rain was required for six months, that abundance of corn, of fruits &c, might be produced in the Rajyam and of Annam (or rice) of Pushpam (or flowers) and of Nir (or water), that piety should flourish and wealth should be obtained, by which Iswar should be served and honored and Pūja performed with due respect in honor of the gods and to the ancestors, and that cows should increase , for all this that there should be abundance of water and grass , having well thought of all these, he committed them to Devendra, by which rain falls for six months, and afterwards is six months of Vennul (or hot weather) Thus he ordained, and for this reason he ordered the sunny season for six months, in order that all the under mentioned ceremonies might be performed in honor of the gods of heaven, of Kara (or temples of the secondary deities) of Ayapen Kara (the temple of Hari Hara Putten), of Bhadra kala Vattam, (the temple of Bhadra Kali) of Ganapati Kara (or the temple of Ganapathy)

32 The Names of the different Vala (or ceremonies)Wutu,—Offerings of food*Pātu*,—Singing hymns while this ceremony is performing*Utsavam*—The grand ceremonies*Vala*,—The lesser ceremonies*Vellaku*,—Lamp illuminations of the temple*Tiyatu*—Ceremony of running over fire*Barnam Val*—Ceremony performed in the month of Kumbam under the Star DharamArattu,—Carrying the god in procession to a tank, and performing ablutions to it*Colayallam*—Ceremony of singing and dancing performed by women in honor of the goddess BhagavatiPuram Vala,—Ceremony performed in the month of Kumbam under the star Pura the anniversary of the death of Kama (or Cupid)Dana Motam,—Wherein a man disguises himself like the god and dances*Tanur Amortu*—Offering of cakes &c, to the god*Tala Puli*,—Ceremony of women carrying raw rice and flowers round the temple*Vaya Visakham*—The 28 days ceremony in the month of Vyass at the temple of TernchariklonamMamaga Val,—The grand festival of 93 days celebrated once in 12 years, when Jupiter enters Cancer

That all these ceremonies might be performed be ordered that there should be six months bright sunny weather

33 Thus in the land created by Sri Parasu Rama, the Brahmins should all bathe at dawn of day, and live virtuously, performing religious duties, worship and offerings of rice to the elements at the Kshetrams or holy places and Karus (or lesser temples) and that the sorrow and sickness which are incidental to mankind, might be removed from the people they were to cause to be performed Iswara Seva kula (or worship to god) by —

Homan,—Fire offering*Dhyanam*,—Meditation on the deity*Bhagavati Seva*—Devotion to the goddess BhagavatiPushpánjali—Worship with flowers*Audi Namaskaram*,—Prostration in the evening*Teru kala Puja*,—Worship at dawn, noon, and sunset*Ganapati Homam*,—Fire sacrifice to GanapatiMruten-Japam,—Prayer or Invocation in the name of Mrityu (or death) to avert accidents*Munu Laksha Sahasra Namam*,—The ceremony of repeating of the 1000 names of Ishwar three lacs of times

Maha Mruten Japam,—Prayer to Mṛtyu

34 Thus many rites, were ordained, and that nothing might prevent the performance of their own ceremonies the Deva Bramhanar received the land from the Arddha Brahmanar according to the orders of Sri Parashurama.

35 Upon which they divided that Land into different Desams (or Cantons) in their names to which Desams they gave different names, and in each they erected a Kshetram (or temple) and consecrated it and placed an image in them, and performed Puja with lamps and adorned the whole with garlands and they placed the protecting deities or Sthana Devam, Dherma Devam, and Sthala Para Devata in their houses, and performed worship to them , also they established Uspali Devs in their own Desams, and performed the prescribed ceremonies

36 They also established Adama (or hondage) and Kuddema (or hus-bandmen) of villages
—Arakasam

And protected and preserved them from lessening and failing

37 They then established the privileges of their respective stations to the Kuddiar, the Kilykur (or state of inferiors), and to themselves (the Taravatukkar) the Mailaykur (or state of superiors), to the Kuddiar the Kanam or custom of taking Lands on lease, and to themselves the *Jenna*¹⁸ or privilege of holding lands in property

38 In this manner they established and continued the custom of Kanam and Jenmam, and erected Hnuses for the Brahmins in each village, who then resided in the Gramams and performed their religious duties or Deva Puja, and also their Pitri Puja, and with the Brahmins of the 64 Gramams the Arddha Bramhanas are remaining

39 The origin of the name of Arddha Bramhanar is because they received land from Sri-Parasu Rāma, one half of their braminhood was diminished, on which account they are called Arddha Bramhanar (or half Bramins).

40 The distinction of Veda-Brahmanas arises from their study of the Vedams, and Sástrams, and they have four Vedams and six Sastrams—hence they are denominated Veda-Brahmanas.

41 The Vdl Nambi and Pattena Nambi are both Arddha Bramhanar. To the first were assigned the duties of—

Ayudah Panikul,—Bearers of weapons, or arms.
Pada Adakgo,—Collecting.

Pada kudala,—Going to Battle

Rajkur mar Munpil, Agumpadu nadaka — Escorting the Rajah

From their performing these duties they obtained the name of Väl nambi or Swordmen

42 To the Pallena Nambi was assigned the Sinkha (or shell) and Kuda (or Umbrella). If in the execution of their duty any person offer them up to death or treat them with contempt, they are not to resist, and in these cases they are only to blow the shell and remain without food, hence their name Pallena Nambi:

43 In this manner when sixty four Gramams and twenty one Desams were established, the sixty four Gramams assembled and ordained or fixed that a Raksha Purusha should be elected once in three years in order to punish and protect

44 There were also appointed Nal Kullakams (or Four Courts or Assemblies) at

1 Punnur, 2, Pruru, 3, Chenganur, and, 4, Parum Chellur

45 In order to appoint, if these four Kullakams agree or concur in the election it is sufficient, so they settled

46 But some say that of these the Chenganur Kullakam, is not included in the sixty-four Gramams, but they who say so are not well informed — The cause of their saying so is this

47 The people of Chenganur Gramam assembled and received the Kshetra samandam (or management of the holy places) from the sixty-four

48 Afterwards numbers of Tamuller came thither and between the Tamuller Brahmins who came, and the Brahmanas who were already residing there, arose disputes about the ceremony of burning a dead body — Upon which all the Tamuller assembled, consulted together, and took the people of that place, with the sixty four who granted the Kshetra samandam and pulled away the dead Corpse and threw it into the River — this was done by the people of Chenganur Gramam and therefore some say they are not included in the 64 Gramams. But how they became Tamuller and what the truth was? and how the Brahma Hat'ya which had been incurred, was cleared from them? Iswar only knows

49 Besides the said four Kulakams that were established, were four Verna Kulakams or assemblies of the representatives of the four Castes

1 Irungn'yan Koda is the Brahmana Kulakam

2. Muly Kolam is the Kshetrya Kulakam

3. Paravur is the Vassya Kulakam

4 Ayeran Kolam is the Sudra Kulakam

In this manner there are four Verna Kulakams or assemblies or courts representing the four castes

50 Besides the four Avaroda Kulakam (or electing assemblies) at 1, Parum Chelur, 2, Pannur, 3, Chenganur, and 4, Paravur, the Gramams (or villages) of —

1 Iangnyani koda, 2 Muli kolam, 3, Paravur, and 4, Ayeram Kolam determined in order that nothing might obstruct, or interrupt the daily business on that account, each of the said four Gramams should have a house in the village of Kodangalur

51 From the village of Paravur, from the houses of Yalam Taly, and Oadambanad, from these two houses they should keep one man in the Al Taly (or chief house or palace) who should be Tala'yadr and rule

52 From the village of Ayeram Kolam from the houses of Caringumpalli and of Churukulli, among these two they should keep one man in the Al Taly (or lesser palace) who should be a Kil-Tala'yadr (or inferior ruler) and rule

53 From the village of Muli kolam.

54 In the village of Iangnyani Koda from the house of Mudali or of Kada mangalam from these two houses, they should keep one man in the Mai Taly (or superior palace) who should be a Tala'yadr and rule, but no married man was to be appointed to the said situation, and only old men or boys, on condition of remaining unmarried, might be appointed till their death

55 The 64 Gramams assembled thus ordered that the four *Talayadr*mar should be unanimous and protect and punish

56 Among the 64 Gramams ten and half villages having taken the Samayem (or Oath) and accepted Weapons in order to protect the Vishis (or Rites) therefore the said ten and a half villages are denominated Kulakam or Willavar (or belonging to the Kulakam)

57 The names of the 10 villages

|-----------------------|--------------------------|
| 1 Paravur , | 6 Tuluva Nad , |
| 2 Muly kolam , | 7 Adatur , |
| 3 Ayeram kolam | 8 Irangnyani koda |
| 4 Wuleyanar , | 9 Allatur , |
| 5 Chenganad , | 10 Yettumanur , |

And the half, Chemmundi Gramam Thus making 10½

58 The Comparative distinctions of superiority and inferiority are as follows —

- 1 Chenganad — is inferior to Paravur
- 2 Wuleyanur — is superior to Ayeram kulakam
- 3 Adatur Kulakari and Kil Eddam are equal

60 When they made oath and accepted the weapons they took the oath at ten places, viz —

- | | |
|---------------------------|---|
| 1 Gokarnam, | 6 Munali Rallinkel, |
| 2 Tertsuwa Parur, | 7 Kudil-mani ka Tenda Nadayel, |
| 3 Teru navayel, | 8 Terusangji kolam, |
| 4 Teru kana vayel, | 9 Teru iyerani kolam, |
| 5 Teru karur, | 10 Villapa nat kura or Terivalatur |

60 And the 64 Gramams assembled, in order to perform religious duties at regular times, took an oath at the ten places following, viz —

|----------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| 1 Golamam, | 6 Mannam, |
| 2 Teru Siva Parur, | 7 Manikam, |
| 3 Parichedu Teru navayel, | 8 Munja kolam |
| 4 Teru kana, | 9 Allakodu Ayerani kullam, |
| 5 Karur, | 10 Nella Villapa nad |

At these ten places they made oath

61 Haste Ho! The Bramins of Keralam that they might perform their religious duties and that their ceremonies might be protected in Malayalam which was created by Parasu Ram, there were four provincial divisions made, viz —

1 South of Gokarnam and north of the Parum river in Tulu Nad was the Tulura Rajyam

2 South of the Parum river in Tulu Nad and north of Pudu Patnam was called the Kriva Rajyam

3 To the south of Pudu Patnam and north of Kannan was called Keralam

4 To the south of Kannan and north of Kanya Kuman was called the Mashika Rajyam

62. Parasu Rama to remove the Vira Hatya Dosham (or sin of slaugthering men) having now brought many Bramhanar and placed them in the four Kandams, and established the Brahmaram (or property of the Bramins) suspected that they would go away on account of the trouble of the serpents, and Sri Parasu Rama being grieved in his mind, called the eight chief snakes together with Anandam, &c., and prayed to them, saying "I trouble not the Bramhanar whom I with great difficulty have brought and placed here — You must reside one in each different Kshetram and remain on one side and preserve the offspring and houses of the Bramhanar who will also protect you" — Thus he said and received their consent

63 While it was so in Arya Varum the Arya Kura Bramhanar and a great concourse of people having assembled at Kern Kshetram, Sri Parasu Rama having heard thereof, he immediately went thither, and paid his respects to the Bramins and thus said —

64 "I have established Keralam in order to grant it as a gift to you, "therefore you must come to reside there and perform the different duties "of religion by which I hope or desire to obtain salvation."

65 At that time the people of the sixty four Gramams assembled together, were composed of fourteen Gotrams (or tribes), and they had the three Vedams, and he brought them all to Malayalam and granted the land in gift as a Brahma swam (or property to the Bramins) Afterwards he granted Dipam (or lamps) to avert the malediction that he had incurred.

66 At another time when he was considering and suspecting that the sin of the slaughter of heroes was not yet fully propitiated or released, he acquainted certain Brahmanar thereof and granted them gifts of one share as a Brahmaswam (or property to the Bramins) and because they held up their hands and received that Dosham (or sin) they were called Wurada Purusha, on which account they with the remaining people do not perform the Jnati kdryam (or rite of betrothiog) together

67 The sixty four villages assembled, considered as follows "which is the best way for us to preserve this Rayyam?"—thus they coosidered—the sixty four Gramams then assembled resolved "We should appoint a protector amongst us," which they did accordingly, and appointed that the person they elected should reside at Teruvunni Kollam to govero the sixty four Gramams, and that after three years pass the sixty four Gramams should assemble again at Teruvunni Kollam, and change the person, and appoint another in his place for other three years, and thus they ordained

68 It passed thus for a considerable time, when they found they had no truth the sixty four Gramams assembled ordered that from the Aal kula kams or

1, Parum Chellur, 2, Pannur, 3, Chengannur, and 4, Paruvur
From each of these four places they selected a person and place them along with him (the Raksh) so they ordered and appointed who were called Avaroda Namb and they ordered that after three years were passed again they should change and appoint others—thus they ordered Among these Ava-rodanmar, no married men could officiate

69 In this manner having ordered, it afterwards for a long time so passed, and even these, it was found, had no trnht in them, and they became arrogant and tyranical in their duties of punishing and protecting, therefore the sixty four Gramams assembled, consulted 'If we procure not a king of the Kshetriya race to rule this Rayyam it will not do'

70 And having accordingly determined they afterwards gathered together and went, to a Para Desam (or foreign country), brought a king, erected a great palace at Kodangalur, and performed the ceremony of Installation

18 Raja to Charuman Parumal as sovereign, in order to preserve and 19 They also then ordained that the Pennu (or girls) that were born to him should be taken by the Brahmanas in Vitaham (or marriage)

1 In this manner it passed, but after a long time they found that justice prevailed instead of protection Wherefore the sixty four Gramams assembled declared "In future let us know the protection and punishment," 2 they also ordered and appointed one Tulladrimar from each of the four embolics, and to each they assigned a Kshetram (or house) at Kodangal, and placed them there, besides they ordered that no act of Government should be done without their knowledge, but no married person was to be employed in that office

12. The Kshetriya who was brought at that time was named Charuman Parumal. The Raja in Chola Mandalam was Chola Parumal and the Raja in Pandya Mandalam was Pandya Parumal. From being the first that was brought into Keralam he was also called Kerala Raja

13 In Keralam there are eleven An Acharams but in the foreign countries
there are twenty two An-dcharams

14. When the Brahmanas had brought the Raja, and were installing him, they (the Brahmins) held his hand and made the following agreement That which we cannot do, you must perform, and protect us. The Raja must not subject to the interference of the Brahmans in the management of the State, or judge of any complaint of which they may judge, or in which they are interested At least not in Kerala, in other countries the Raja will settle every thing

15 Having made known all these they assigned lands to the Raja and the Brahmins of the fourteen Gotrams who came from Ahi kshetram and they poured water, and granted that land which is called Viruttu and was the royal demesne, some countries they granted to him and some to the Brahmins themselves, and some as benefices of temples to be enjoyed in Keralam

16 In this manner was the Manad governed for a short time, then they, (the Brahmins) considered how to prevent the Rajas from getting too great strength or power, and they divided this Keralam of one hundred and sixty Kadams extent and formed it into seventeen Nads and eighteen andams in which the Raja Karyam (or affairs of the Raja) were to be conducted by an assembly and council, and without neglecting this the Raja was not to consult and determine at his pleasure. Therefore the sixty four Gramams assembled, consulted and besides the aforementioned four Kula

Thus they ordered and directed that the Parum Lovilakum (or palace) at Kodangalur Gramam should be the residence of the Raja, and near that place four Taly (or houses) for the residence of the chiefs of the four councils were erected, viz —

1 Mail Taly, 2, Kil Taly, 3, Nadeya Taly, 4, Ghengapuram

In this manner in these four Taly they were residing, and ruled by the title of Talayadri mar

- 1 The Kil Taly belonged to Ayerani kolam
- 2 Chengapur belonged to Iruvgn'yant koda
- 3 The Nadeya Taly belonged to Paruvur
- 4 The Mail Taly belonged to Muly kolam

In this manner there were four Tula

77 As at Pannur, Parum Chellur, and Chenganur, they all resided at a distance, therefore, the four Kulakams were established near Paruvur, in the time of Parumal, viz —

1 Ayerani kolam, 2, Muly kolam, 3, Iruvgn'yant koda together with Paruvur

The other Kulakams had been established in the time of Parasu Ram

78 Their written Tulu (or decrees) were to be called the Talayadri Tulu

79 There were also chiefs of the following places who assisted the Raja.

- | | |
|-------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1 Karingumpali Soruvam | 3 Yelumpara kota Soruvam |
| 2 Karimukal Soruvam | 4 Chunnam kolatu Soruvam |

80 The Taly adis in these Soruvams being inferior Talyadris they did not give the sixth in Mana nad to the Raja but only granted the Vishu. The Shat Bhagam (or sixth share) from the lands of all was enjoyed by the Laksha Pusushuniars, but that sixth share was a second time enjoyed by the Tuliyadrima. The same sixth share is at present enjoyed by the Kshetriya. Thus the Raja and Tuliyadrimar governed for sometime 81 Afterwards when the Kali Yug advanced the 32 villages north of the Parum Pula and the thirty two on the south of it were separated from the custom of betrothing and intermarrying.

Here follow the Names

100 Besides—The Tula Aambilal of Tula nad (or those who went away to Pancha Darida and came back again) were then called Palum Talmar, but now they are called Tula neda Talu Aambilal. Having come from different Gramams and formed different Gramams here each was denominated by a distinct name and they assert it as a fact that they were included in the thirty two.

107 Some time afterwards when a little was past of the Kali Yuga the Boudemam came and saw Parumal, and explained to him the Prámánya (doctrines or principles) of the Buddha Sástram and they persuaded Parumal that this was the true faith, and the Parumal of that time accepted of the Buddha Mayam and that Parumal told the Mana nad (or Mala yalam) to follow that way. At which time on hearing what was said, all the senses of the Bramins, were confounded or lost they all went to Turu Karur and there remained together, and there preserved the Valeya Purusha (respectable men, the Ancients or Elders) of the Gramams. They were obliged to serve under different people to obtain a livelihood, and it that time not being able to prevent pollution and preserve their purity they were grieved.

108 Then by the favor of Iswar, a Maha Rishi (or Great Sage) came thither, whose name was Jangama, and the whole of the Bramins who were there, assembled together, and declared their Sankalam (or trouble) to the Maha Rishi when the Maha Rishi answered "I shall whisper you a Priyachitam (or form of purification) to expiate the sin of pollution which arises in your cooking places, for which purpose after sunset you should place lamps, and the Bramins should make the Pradakshinam round the lamps, dressed in the Taru, tying Mailmundu over it and putting on the Paritham (or ring on the fourth finger) holding the Karam dutu (a kind of grass) and in that place, you are to worship, and believe that to be the true religion of Siva.

109 He then recited to them a Gánam (or Hymn) which is the principal Mantram in the Dasi Vedam, and which Gánam consisted of four Paddams, and he said "If you perform worship in this manner you will be released from your troubles."

110 The Maha Rishi also said "The curse of this calamity happening to you is because into the Rajya granted by Pausu Ram you brought a Kshetriya, who was his enemy, and made him a Raja, this loss of his favor has happened to you. In future you are to be slaves and to pay them (the Pauddanmar) Acharam (or submission) and Ocharam (or res "pect) and then their generation and power will decrease". In this manner did the Jangama Maha Rishi make known, and then disappeared.

111 According to these directions the Bramins prayed, and while they were staying at Turu Karur six *Sástra*s came from Para desam whose names were —

- | | |
|---------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1 Batten Narainen | 4 Batten Kumanen |
| 2 Batten Vasudeven | 5 Batten Vvayen |
| 3 Batten Mayuren | 6 Batten Vanen |

In this manner were 6 *Sástra*s

112 The Disciples of Buddha Muni were four viz —

1 Vybhāshikam, 2, Madhyāmukam, 3, Yogi-Acharien, and 4, Sau-ti-antikam

In this manner were four Disciples

And many inferior castes came from foreign countries, viz —

- 1 Aatuvids —An inferior tribe of cultivators
- 2 Kody patam,—Fishmongers and salt manufacturers
- 3 Andalam —Cultivators
- 4 Chati,—Merchants
- 5 Konkanen,—Natives of Conkan
- 6 Narkunmar,—Tank diggers
- 7 Mainayen,—Cultivators
- 8 Shoraken —Barbers
- 9 Mugradāra
- 10 Pandien,—Natives of Pandia Desam or Madura, &c
- 11 Kosaven —Potters
- 12 Arien,—Beggars
- 13 Okuden,—A low caste of cultivators
- 14 Yonaken,—Arabs, Labbis, Moplis
- 15 Nasrani,—Nazarenes or Christians of St Thomas
- 16 Sikaven,—Unknown
- 17 Chaleyen,—Weavers
- 18 Dipa Mandan,—Unknown

Thus these were Jadikal (or castes) of Tamular who came to Malayalam. They are Hina Jadi (or out castes) and are called the eighteen tribes of foreigners. Water, butter and milk ought not to be received from them, and conenbinage ought not to be formed.

113 If the undermentioned castes meet a Bramin they should perform the Chemmurti.

- 1 Kanesan —Astrologers
- 2 Koravan,—Thieves, Mat weavers, Fortune tellers or Indian Gypsies
- 3 Kusavan,—Potters
- 4 Palur,—Snake inspired.
- 5 Pānen,—Makers of Umbrellas

In this manner are five castes (Anj: Jāti:)

114 All the books that were composed by Buddhachari, were laid in the middle yard of the Baita Manna (or house) and burnt, but among these, three books were not burnt, viz —

- 1 The Amara Simham, 2, Dharam Kriti, 3, Ashṭanga Hridayam

Thus were three saved, of these the Ashṭanga Hridayam is not read by the Bramins, because it contains surgery

115 While they were without reading it, in that time a Brahmin came from Para Besam whose name was Vyaden, who read it. From him eighteen Bramins of Para Desam learned it, who came to Malayalam, but because they drank of Muleya (or Toddy) mixed as Aushadham (or Medicine) and exercised the Art of Sastra Kriya (or Surgery) therefore the Bramins ordered that they were not to be admitted into the Pandi-Bhojanam (or line of Bramins eating together). These are called the eighteen Mutanmars.

116 To them the Nambi Kuru of the Kulakams granted the Adhikari Sthanam or sole Administration of the following Kshetrams

1	Fellankalur,	7	Tanalur,
2	Chembaka chari,	8	Teru Nalu,
3	Kalpulah,	9	Aon gur
4	Wulapa Mannu,	10	Assung nad,
5	Wypura,	11	Ledamana,
6	Kuanr lotam,	12	Jaya chari

These twelve form the Avroda Nambi Cürü (or Council) of Teni Kuna-Palk Kshetram.

117 When the Adhyayentram (or Council) assembles these Kshetrams should furnish the curtains which surround the Tiku (or southern) Padul Madum and the Vudalu (or northern) Padul Madum, or Mantapam at the gates.

(Here follow the articles to be provided by other places.)

120 The names of the 6 Sastris who came from Para Desam were formerly mentioned. Those Sastris and the Bramins having met together went and saw the King who had lost the treasury, and said 'Ho ! O ! King ! Why did you commit this fault ?' After they had asked him this, Parumal answered 'This alone is the truth' then the Sastris said 'If so, We and these Baudamar shall dispute, should we lose, you may cut out our tongues and banish us from the country. Should the Baudamar lose, you should cut out their tongues and banish them from the Aai'. So they agreed, they then begin to dispute with the Baudumar, whose doctrine was proved to be false, and their tongues were cut out, and they were banished out of the land, and it was ordered that in future if any Baudamar come back to dispute, the Raja should not again desire them to dispute with the Ledamans, but punish them they took an oath to this purport from Parumal whom they then established.

Afterwards they granted a separate Estate to the apostate Parumal and kept him separate. That Parumal's name who was set aside was called Palki Mannu who on another Parumal being appointed in his room went to Melkha. Therefore the Baudumar say that Charuman Parumal went to Melkha and not to Seengam (Paradise). That was not Charuman Parumal.

2—Chit tilas

Paper

A treatise on the objects and end of human existence, describing the creation of the world, the formation of the gross and subtle body and the means of acquiring emancipation. By Baliram

3—Jnyona Samudra

A work of a philosophical character in the form of a dialogue between a teacher and disciple—the latter of whom enquires—Who am I—What is the world—Who are birth and death—What is the relation between God and life, &c., to which the Guru replies by detailing the doctrines of the Vaishnava quietists concerning faith and adoration as purificatory of the spirit—describing the nine kinds of faith or Bhakti, the eight exercises of Yoga or devotion—the two principles of nature Purusha and Prakrti, and the illusive effects of the latter—the organs of sense, the nature of the body and spirit, and the three conditions of existence, waking, slumbering, sleep, with the fourth state or perfect knowledge and the means of its attainment. In five chapters, by Sundara Das

4—Vijnyan tilas

An extensive treatise on the different philosophical tenets of the Hindus, recommendatory of those of the Vedanta and of a life of asceticism in the form of a dialogue between a Guru and Sishya or spiritual preceptor and pupil. By Gangapati, dated Samrat 1775 or A D 1719

5—Yogi Vanashila

A work on the principles of the Vedanta philosophy, in which Ratta in conversation with Pashchita, Ugramitra and other sages discusses the unreality of material existence, the merits of works and devotion and the supremacy of spirit Translated from the Sanscrit, in twenty six sections

6 — Nrisinhopanishad

Paper

A translation of an Upanishad known as the Nrisinha or Arisinha-tapaniya one of the appendices of the Atharvan Veda, in nine Khandas, treating of the difference between life and spirit, the nature of Pranava or mystical syllable or Brahme—the letters of which it is composed, and the identification of the individual and universal spirit. The character of the work is as much mystical as theological, partaking rather of the Tantrico than Vaidika system.

7 — Chhandoxyo Upanishad

Paper

A translation of the Chhandoxyo Upanishad of the Sama Veda.

8 — Porti Prakas

A description of the Hindu and Mohammedan modes of computing months, years, the rising and setting of the sun and moon, the lunar asterisms, planetary aspects, eclipses, &c., with an explanation of the Arabic and Persian terms used in astronomy and astrology—composed by Vedango Raya at the command of Shah jehan.

A minute account of the origin and actions of Chhatra Sal, Raja of Bandelknad, tracing his descent from the solar race of kings through the house of Ayodhya, and detailing his victories over the petty Rajas in his vicinity, and his contests and connexions with the Mogul princes Aurangzeb and Bahader Shah. In twenty six sections by Lal Kari. This work is a valuable accession to the original materials for a correct history of Hindustan.

10 — Kars Priya

a paper—b do—c do

An extensive work on Alankara, the rhetorical ornaments of poetical composition, in 16 books by Kesara D' " d Samrat 1658 or A.D. 1602. The svârtha is taken from Samrat. The two introductory chapters contain the following genealogies of the patron and the poet.

- 1 Gahirvar was a prince of the solar family descended from Rama
- 2 Karna his son made Benares his capital
- 3 Arjuna Pala
- 4 Salan Pala
- 5 Sahayendra
- 6 Nouiga deva
- 7 Prithvi Raja
- 8 Ramachandra
- 9 Ramasinha
- 10 Medinimalla
- 11 Arimerddana
- 12 Arjunadeva
- 13 Mallallana
- 14 Prataparudra
- 15 Ranarudra, who made Orchha, his capital
- 16 Bharatichandra
- 17 Madhukara sahi his brother
- 18 Rámsahi
- 19 Indrajit, who made Kachhwa gerh, his capital, and patronised the poet, whose descent is traced as follows —
- 1 Kumbhatara, was descended from Sunaka rishi
- 2 Dewanan la
- 3 Jiyadewa, patronised by Prithvi Raja
- 4 Dinakara
- 5 Panditaraja, patronised by Ala ud din
- 6 Gadhodhara
- 7 Jayananda
- 8 Trivikrama, patronised by the sovereign of Gopáchala

- 12 Krishradatta, patronised by Rudra Sinh
- 13 Kasinath, patronised by Vadhikara Sahi
- 14 Kesarakadas patronised by Indrajit

If the line of princes be correctly given, it ascends to the beginning of the 13th century, but if by Prithvi Raja be meant the prince who was killed in the end of the 12th century, it can scarcely be considered as correct. The work is of interest as one of the earliest existing specimens of Hindi of defined date. Kesava Das is the author of other works one of which the Rasik priya is dated 1648 answering to A.D. 1592.

11—Ramachandrika

*Report of Babu Rao, Maratta Translator to Col C Mackenzie, of his Journey to Pondicherry, Koracal, &c, along the Coast, for the purpose of collecting historical information, coins, &c., from the 24th December, 1816, to 27th May, 1817 **

December 24th, 1816—Having received the money, ordered for my expenses from Karilli Venkata Lalshmiyah I left Madras and arrived at Vanien Chourai

25th—Thence proceeded to Mahabalipuram collected some

* This is given as a specimen of the reports furnished by Col Mackenzie's native collectors referred to in the Introduction page 10. The original was in English but has been revised apparently by Col M I myself coins, on the way at Patipollam, Detanairi and Salvakupam and the other places along the Coast where ancient coins are usually found

26th — By order I waited upon Messrs Clark, Gwatkin and the other gentlemen, who were on an excursion here, they ordered me to shew them all the curiosities, accordingly I shewed them all the remarkable places as Mahish Aswa Mardhani and Ashta Grama Devali

27th — Proceeded with those gentlemen to Sadras and showed them the Kasi Modu or eminence where coins are found at Kalipakam on the further or south side of Sadras, at their desire I procured some ancient copper coins, which I shewed them they did not return me the coins

28th — Mr Clarke sent for me and expressed his wish to visit the *Mantapam that was lately discovered on the south side near Salvakupam together with Kassi Modu, I accordingly went and shewed them all the curiosities there

29th and 30th — Having given every information of Mahabalipur to those gentlemen, in token of their satisfaction with my assiduity they offered me four star pagodas which I declined to receive for fear of losing my character with my master

31st — I proceeded by myself to Salvakupam and Detanairi and procured some coins I then wrote a letter to my master and delivered it together with the coins and the account of the temple of Cadambadi Devi, into the hands of the Tindel Reddi — (See Letter, No)

January 1st, 1817 — I left Mahabalipur and arrived at Sadras collecting coins at Kalipakam and other places

2nd and 3rd — Thence I proceeded to Alampara, called upon the woman who had formerly discovered some Roman gold coins and had promised me any others she might find she assured me that she had been searching every morning and evening with her bags but had not yet got any, as before when she had found two ancient gold coins, (supposed to be Roman,) on that height, she made no doubt but that she might procure some other coins before I returned from Pondicherry, afterwards I assembled about 20 fishermen, and searching in the minnows, found some copper coins, beads, &c., &c.*

4th — Thence I went to Kummodu, where is a large ruined fort, and obtained some coins.

5th — Thence I arrived at Pondicherry and at 2 gowas' south of it, collected coins upon different heights between Kunimodu and Pondicherry, waited on Lieut Sim and delivered my master's letter to him, who on perusing it ordered me to come to his tent at the village of Sorapet, and promised to give me every assistance that I would require.

6th — I left Pondicherry and went to the villages at 2 gowas' distance west, waited on Lieut Sim, who supplied me with some money on my master's account and sent a peon to accompany me to Teruvakira and to enquire my curiosities there, and to get particular accounts of them.

The Tradition of this place relates that a Rakshasa, named Vyaghra Asur, son of Chakra Asur, formerly performed Tapas to Chandra Sekhara Siwam in order to obtain the gracious visitation of that deity, god pleased with his devotion graciously appeared,‡ and desired him to ask what he wanted. He requested that he should be exempted from the trouble of death to which mortals are subject, the god accordingly bestowed the divine Varam, upon which the Rakshasa became arrogant, and became to persecute all the Dewatas, who then complained against him before god, who therapon

‡ The Hindu idea is that the deity propitiated by a severe Tapas of the Ascetic condescended in person to manifest his appearance and to confer the Beatific Vision on his much favored Devotee. sent for Badhra Kali and ordered her to slay the Rakshasa, which she did, at that time the two sisters Vairi and Mahishi prepared.* Laddu, and offered them to the Devatas to release their brother from death In proof whereof several round stones resembling cakes together with a great tree of stone the vestiges of the Rakshasa are still found upon the hill

I went there and saw all the curiosities, the caverns, &c, procured accounts of them and of the Devatams by means of some aged people and Pujaris, besides I collected several pieces of the stony tree and cakes

8th—Thence I went to the village of Vedur, where is a Devalam and ten houses of the Jainas, visited Vanacar Nannar and Apanda Nannar, learned men there, and requested them to give me particular account of their Rajas and caste and of the old Bastis, accordingly they gave me a small cedar book to copy, on which I employed a learned Bramin who copied it off for me

9th to 11th—Leaving Vedur, I proceeded on my way to Kaddalur and arrived there, I bought some coins in the bazaar, and copied some inscriptions on stone in the Devalam of Terupaiyalur

12th—I wrote a letter to my master and delivered it to Lieut Sim to be despatched to Madras

13th to 17th—I left Kaddalur and arrived at Verampatam, north 8 miles' distant, where formerly Palia Raya and Ponia Raya nephews of Raja Tondaman of the race of Adhirra Ram Pandian built Verampatam. It is said that he had there a great fowl, called Ponayen Sariel, it was of the height of an elephant and ornamented with a large iron chain on his neck, that its strength was so great that it could throw down a house by the flapping of its wings. This extraordinary circumstance being known to their uncle Ray Tondaman he considered with himself that some great danger would happen to his own fowls, and therefore killed the aforesaid Ponayen Sariel by an arrow, then Palia Raya coming to the knowledge of this circumstance, made war with his uncle, and they both lost their lives in the battle at Verampatam, upon which Ponia Raya being greatly grieved at the death of his brother and of his uncle, placed a Vav (or a large nail) on the ground, and sat down on the top, and departed this life.

Some time thereafter Adi Padachi and Naili Padachi and other Palligars came from the western country and peopled this place: Having procured the particular account thereof together with some coins, I returned to Lieut. Sim at Pondicherry.

18th.—Leaving Pondicherry, I proceeded to the Talook of Triradi, with a letter from Lieut. Sim to Mr. Hyde, and obtaining the Collector's orders to the village people, I copied off a few stone inscriptions in the Deivalam of Teruvadi wherein I could not find the year of Saliahan but only the month and date. As I considered useles for my master, I did not take off facsimiles, and I procured some account of the Jainas and Kurumbas, who ruled in Tondir Mandalam, together with some coins in the bazaar and arrived at Pondicherry, and on the 17th I despatched a basket containing the books, various stones, coins, &c., by a cooly to Madras.

February 1st.—I waited on Lieut. Sim, who gave me a letter from my master received from Madras, and told me that he was going to Kerical and Tranquebar, and that I should hold myself in readiness to follow him to collect accounts and coins at those places, but that I should meantime prepare the account of Deranampatnam.

2nd.—I left Pondicherry for Deranampatnam 10 miles south of it; collecting coins on the road, on different heights.

3rd to 10th.—I went to Deranampatnam and enquired for ancient books of the establishment of that town, the people said that they had lost all the accounts and documents, &c., during the disturbances of Hyder Ali, upon which I collected about twenty aged men, from whom I procured accounts, together with some ancient coins, upon that height.

11th to 16th.—I copied the inscriptions that were in the Deivalam of Teruvengepur and Verupopalur, wrote a letter to my master, and delivered it to Lieut. Sim for despatch to Madras.

17th to 19th—I was employed enquiring for the account of the ancient Chola Rajas and Pandia Rajas who ruled in Tondir Mandalam, from the learned men living at Pondicherry

20th—I wrote a letter to my master and despatched it to Madras by a cooly with a basket containing hooks, coins, and five kinds of earth, procured on the hill of Tiruvenjepur together with the account of Deianampatnam in the Mahratta language

21st to 26th—I was employed translating the account of the Jainas and the Kurumbas who ruled in Tondirmandalam, which I procured at Trivakaira, Terawadi, Tiruvenjepur and Deianampatnam and other places, meantime I received a letter from Lieut. Sim, saying that I should first follow his baggage to Karical, and that the business which I had to do here, could be finished on my return from Tranquebar, I accordingly finished the translation and was ready to proceed

March 1st to 3rd—I was attending on Lieut Sim, and delivered a packet containing the original and translation of the Jainas, for him to frank and despatch to Madras, and then took leave of him to go to Karical

4th to 8th—Leaving Kaddalur I proceeded to Tranquebar, six gowa south by the way of Sehetamber, Shi Ally, and Videswar Kovil, collecting different coins in the bazaar together with the accounts of the Chola and Pandia Rajas from the learned people

9th—I waited upon Lieut Sim, at Tranquebar who directed me to procure the account of the Rajas and some ancient coins there until he returned from Karical

10th to 11th—I proceeded to the different heights, procured coins, purchased some in the bazaar from the shroffs, I visited Mr Allcar, who has a collection of different coins, and requested him to shew them to me, he desired me to come the next day and that he would shew me every thing as I wished

12th—I waited on Lieut. Sim and acquainted him about the coins of Mr Allcar upon which he took me to Mr Allcar's house, shewed me all the coins and told me to look out for any Roman gold or copper coins, accordingly I searched for about two hours, but could find no Roman coins

13th — Lieut Sim gave me 10 star pagodas with a letter to Mr. Thackeray, Assistant Collector at Tanjore, in order to get a particular account of the Pudurul Goporam of Buddha which is situated about a quarter of a mile north of Nagapatnam together with the coins of Karical, Nagur and other places

14th — I left Tranquebar and went to Karical 5 miles south, I went by the sea side and searched for coins upon the heights* there but could find none, bought some coins in the bazaar

15th — Left Karical and arrived at Nagapatnam at 8 miles south by the road of Nagur, collecting some coins on the way in the bazaar

16th to 17th — Waited on Mr Thackeray and delivered Lieutenant Sim's letter to him who on perusal gave me an order to the village people, together with a peon, and ordered me to shew him all the histories and curiosities I am collecting in his district, with which I complied and took leave of him to go to the neighbouring villages

18th to 20th — I copied the Sthala Puranam of Sunder Roja Swami and Kanyarochen Swami of Nagapatnam, and the Silpa Sastram or art of making statues for the Bouddhas and Jaimas and constructing Deralams, &c, together with the account of Pudurul Goporam which says that while the Bouddha Rajas were ruling in the commencement of the Satirahan Sakam, they built the temples at Teruviyat, Kelananamchari, Nelapadi, Marambut and other places together with a large Gopuram at a quarter of a mile north from Nagapatnam and carved the images according to the Bouddah Sastram and built a large town, performed every kind of ceremonies to the god, and ruled there, as the Bouddhas used to eat fish, there arose a great difference between Hemasital Maha Raju and Amukha Varashen Maha Raju who conquered them in four Sastrams and drove them out to Khandy† Desam (a foreign country) At that period the Baud-

dahs threw all their property into the wells, hid their images under ground and ran away. At that time a Bouddha Sanyasi named Hemawanta finding no means of carrying off the property of the said Puduvole Gopuram, he hid it in several brass pots which he secured in the midst of the temple, placed a large Chakram* on the top, and by virtue of his Mantrams it continually revolved with such a quick motion that no person dared approach it, and then fled away with the other Bouddhas.

After the Bouddhas had fled, and the Jain Government was established, many people tried to carry off the property from the said Puduvole Gopuram, but they could not, at last a Brahmin priest of the Sri Vaishnava sect named Terumenje Alwar came to this place and tried very much to obtain the treasures of Puduvole Gopuram but could not, he then enquired of some old people, by whom this Puduvole Gopuram was built, and in what part of the country they are now, they answered that in the commencement of the Salivahan Salam, during the reign of the Bouddha Rajas, they built this Puduvole Gopuram but some time afterwards they were banished to Kandy country by the Jaina Rajas, about that period a Bouddha Sanyasi named Hemawanta secreted much treasure in that Gopuram, and placed a Chakram over it to guard the treasure, wherefore if you go to Kandy, the Bouddha people will explain to you the best means of procuring the treasury of Puduvole Gopuram. Accordingly he proceeded to the Kandy country visited the Bouddha Sanyasis who then enquired of Terumenje Alwar "Who are you and from whence do you come?" Terumenje Alwar replied, "That he came from Chola Mondalam" The Bouddha Sanyasi enquired, "Did you ever see our Puduvole Gopuram at Nagapatnam which is surrounded by a large Chakram on the top?" Terumenje Alwar answered, "The Chakram that revolved round on the top is entirely stopt" The Bouddha Sanyasi said "As that country contains a great abundance of plantain trees, the Chakram has stopt," He then enquired "Whether the Mohara Cullu (or great stone slab of the gate) is still standing or not," Terumenje Aluar answered, "It is placed" Then the Bouddha Sanyasi said, "As the country is Punji Peria (or abounding with cotton), it is placed," .Afterwards the Bouddha Sanyasi asked "Whether the Garbha Guddi and the Ponyaru or steps of the tank Kamala Ayalai or Terumalur were completed," he answered "Yes they are completed," The Bouddha Sanyasi said "As there are plenty of Vralmin in that country it is therefore completed

Terumenje Aluar keeping these things in his heart, came to Nagapetam collected one or two hundred men got some plantain trees and planted them round the Chakram on the top of Puduvalli Gopuram, by which the movement and virtue of the Chakram was entirely stopt Terumenje Alwar then entered into the temple, broke down the first Ankanam, and carried off all the valuable property upon carts On arriving near the village of Terukanagudi, the morning broke, whereupon he buried the treasure and sat down there with his people The villagers coming with their bullocks in the morning to plough, desired his people to get up, but Terumenje Alwar told them, "This is our own place no one can plough here without our consent" Whereupon there arose a violent dispute among them which lasted till 5 o'clock, then Terumenje Alwar pronounced a malediction that "No water should spring in that Null" and as this quarrel was not settled in a satisfactory manner he cursed that "No disputes should ever hereafter be settled in this place" as he was troubled here for want of sleep, he cursed, that persons under a tamarind tree should not sleep during the night in this place All which continues till this time as described in the following Tamil verse

 Nor sleep fall under the tamarind

Next morning Terumenje Aluar carried off all the treasure, to the southern country and established several Devalams together * with said Kamal Alayen and Vrihadiswar Kovil and established there all kind of worship and festivals, &c.

A particular account of these, and of the Jainas and Bouddhas is particularly detailed in the Kyfiyat

Four months ago as an inhabitant of the Devalam of Kanyarohana Swami of Nagapatnam named Sabbapati was ploughing at a quarter of a mile east of Puduval Gopuram, the ploughshare struck against a Bouddha image which was highly gilt, the man from its glittering appearance thought the image was of gold, and willing to avail himself of his good fortune, he went directly and acquainted the Stanikulu and took them to the place, the image was taken up and carried into the Devalam on a certain night, and finding on examination that it was only gilt, they produced to rub off the gilding, 8 or 10 pagodas' weight in the gold, intending to rub off the rest and then to melt the image into brass pots secretly to save their character and prevent its coming to the knowledge of the Currur people. Hearing of this, I immediately went to the Devalam, visited the Stanikulu and requested them to shew me the image, but they denied my knowledge of such image at first, I then went to one Tummapiyah the head inhabitant there and acquainted him of the circumstance, together with the accounts I had received of the place of the image, and promised him a reward for assisting me to get access to the articles, but after much pains to discover the image, he told me he could not discover it

Resolved however to trace the facts I sat down before the gate, and after much discourse with the Stanikul, he produced the image which they agreed to dispose of for sixteen or twenty star pagodas, upon which I advanced them two pagodas and promised to pay the rest within fifteen days. Having thus settled, I acquainted my master by letter, thereof Meantime some other head Stanikul having got notice of my negotiation, went directly to the Devalam and saw the image, and coming to my lodgings, they returned the money advanced declaring that they would never agree to sell the image even for thousands. I thereupon resolved to wait for my master's orders before I should apply to the Collector, but acquainted Venkat Rao the head Seristadar of the Cutcherry, and meantime forbid the Stanikul to melt down the image, (as we were apprehensive of) without the Collector's permission; I went myself to the place where it had been dug up, and employed four coolies to dig to the depth of a man but finding only a stone image of Bouddak and two covered Bouddha wells, I suspended farther search and returned to my house.

21st.—I went to the village of Nelapadi, six miles west, where, during the Government of the Bouddha Rajas, a large Nagar had existed and in a Deralam according to the Bouddha Sastram, two stone images had been placed, and worshipped with all kind of ceremonials. At present the Deralam is entirely destroyed and sunk to the earth, and only the two images remain, their faces towards one another; there I visited some Jaina people and enquired for the ancient history of the place; as they were impartial to the Bouddhas; they would give no direct answers, and only said "they understood nothing of these things save what regarded their own religion," therefore I took down some account of the Jainas from these people.

22nd.—Thence I went to Kelanamemchari, where I found some old Pandarams and enquired for the ancient histories and traditions of the Chola Rajas, Chera Rajas and Pandua Rajas, and they gave me some account of Cuna Pandia, Somasundar Pandia, &c.

23rd to 30th.—Thence I proceeded to Tervallur by the way of Teruvat and Maradambal, &c., there are some stone images of Bouddha of the height of from one or two men. Formerly during the Government of Virya Vadenga Solen, son of Manuneta Solen, a widow of the Tondaman caste that was living at Adi Yela Mungul Gramam, one mile east of Tervallur, had a son, whose parents had buried much treasure in that village: when the lad was of an age to read in the Palliculam it happened that a certain Panchangi (or Calendar Bramin) named Sundariah who used to go to the neighbouring villages to rehearse the Panchangam in the way of his calling, on the road passing by where the treasure was hid, he repeatedly met the Pisachi (or Demons) that used to watch there, who appeared to him like sepoyes: at their meeting he used to repeat to them the Panchangam as he returned to his own house, in this manner it continued for some time, the Demon at last said to him "Why do you come here every day to read the Panchangam? What benefit do you expect from us?" The Panchangi answered, that "He wanted nothing but their favor" The devil then told him "There is a certain widow's son who reads in the school in this village, whose ancestors buried a great deal of treasure in this place We are demons, and we therefore guard it here, if you go to him, and bring a draft from him for the sum you require, we will give you the money" The Panchangi then went to the widow's house, saw the young lad and desired him to chew his writing, but the boy being young was not able to write but from that time the Panchangi used to feed him and give him instructions in the Alphabet, &c, and having obtained some knowledge, he one day told the boy to write upon a Cadyan leaf an order for a thousand pagodis payable to the Panchangi in order to see a specimen of his handwriting the boy accordingly wrote this and the Panchangi carried and shewed it to the Demons who immediately paid the sum This continued for some days, the lad grew up day by day, and obtained the complete favor of the Chola Raja and a very lucrative employment, at the expiration of some time, the Raja having raised an army against the Kalinga Raja left the charge of his Government to the youth, conferred on him the title of Karanakar Tondaman and marched to the northward

Meanwhile the circumstance of the hidden treasure came to the knowledge of Karanakar Tondaman, who went to the aforesaid place took possession of the whole treasure, built the temple, Munlapam, &c, at Tirumallur distributed abundance in charity, placed several inscriptions on the south, west, north and east walls of the Karanakar Tondaman, from that time the place where the treasure was buried is generally called Gadarai Kundam

Virya Va lengan having conquered the northern country, returned to Tirumallur where he saw all the charities of Karanakar Tondaman and desired him to fix the charity in his name as he was ruling instead of him, this he refused saying "he could not," afterwards the Raja asked him to give to him the charity of the water of Kamal Alayem where the cattle drank at noon time, to which he would not agree, whereopoe the Raja was highly enraged and caused the head of Karanakur Tondaman to be taken off

When the Rajah refrained from the northward, he brought with him the images of Vigneswar Durga and Mahishasura Mardhani and placed them in the Devalam, wherein they remain to this day

I also took a complete copy of the Kamal Alaya Mahatmam of Ternallur, an account of these Rajahs is particularly given in the Kyfiyat

I thereafter went to Dipamgeddi a village five miles west, where formerly during the Government of Chittarasu and Putarasu the Jain Rajahs built a Devalam, with seven courts and walls and set up an image, and peopled or founded the Gramam and established festivals, &c

While it was so, on a certain day the Jain people intending to make a procession in the village, lighted many flambeaus and went into the village, but the neighbouring Palligars came with their followers, attacked them, raised a great disturbance, extinguished the lamps, from that time the village has been generally called by the name of Dipam Guddi

Afterwards in the Salihahan Salam year 1522 in the cycle year Platah a certain Jain Sanyasi named Manibhadra, finding this ancient temple at Dipam Guddi in ruins, reared a new and smaller one, built about twenty houses for Jainas, and established worship without processions in the village (Gramam)

About six months ago a Jaina named Mailadhar proposing to form a well for the use of the Devalam, began to dig up the soil, at one man's depth, they discovered an earthen pot full of small brass images of Parsvanath Tirthankar which they secured in the Devalam, when I went there understanding this circumstance I went to the said Mailadhar and requested him for the sight of the articles, I asked him for some of the images at a certain price, which he would not agree to, but at last with difficulty I got one

I there obtained some account of Dipam Guddi together with that of the images that were found in the earth near the Devalam, while I was preparing to go to Ternallur, an inhabitant thereof

Princess named Amurlapati, who bore him a son named Yasomatleyen. On a certain evening, while Asoka Maha Raja was sitting with his wife on the top of his palace, a thick cloud gathered in the sky, and in a moment afterwards disappeared. Then Asoka Maha Raja considering that life was uncertain, left his family, installed his son Yasodharen, and went himself to the woods to perform Tapas (or penance).

Afterwards while his son Yasodhar Maha Raja was ruling over the Rajyam on a certain day as he was in bed with his consort Amarlapatti in the palace about 4 o'clock in the morning a Mahaut (or elephant driver) named Ashtabhangha began to sing very charmingly. Amurlapatti hearing this beautiful song, became enamoured of him, and immediately sent one of her female slaves, named Gunarati to bring him to her—she went there, and finding that it was a nasty elephant-driver was singing, she came and acquainted her mistress of it, who then said “Whomsoever a woman has fixed her affections on, he is the husband, therefore go and bring him to me immediately,” the slave accordingly went and brought and introduced him.

After the expiration of some days Yasodhar Maha Raja finding that his wife had not that affection and regard for him that she had before, began to watch her, and on a certain day the Raja found his consort with the said Ashtabhangha but considering that it was not proper to kill such a sinful woman with the Val (or sword) that he held in his hand, which was only to be drawn against renowned Rajas like himself, went away to his palace, next morning, he went to his mother Chendramati and told her that last night dreamt that the brightness of the moon had quitted her, and had conjoined itself with the darkness of Rahu, Chendramati answered “As the dream is a very bad one, you must sacrifice several fowls and sheep to the goddess Chendamari” Yasodhar Maha Raja shut his ears with both his hands at hearing such sinful words. Chendramati said “The person that refuses to obey his mother's orders is not honest.” Saying this she ordered him to make a fowl with flour, and sacrifice it to the goddess Chendamari, he accordingly made a fowl with flour, and painting it like a real fowl, a Demon that lived in the neighbourhood, named Tandata Rayen gave me notice that at half a mile south was a place, where was buried abundance of treasure by Kulut tunga Solen, accordingly I proceeded thither and employed four coolies to dig to the depth of a man, but I could only find some earthen pots and some round black stones, &c

April 1st to 7th—I went to Rajamanar Guddi and copied the Sthala Puranam of Raja Gopal Swami together with the particular account of the Jaina Devalam there

It says that when Maredatta Maharaja was ruling at Rajamapur he prepared to celebrate the festival of the goddess Chenda Mari in the month of Chittree, before all the courtiers, he then ordered a Talari named Chandra Karmen, to go out of the town, and seize one male and one female and bring them directly to be sacrificed to Chendamari in order to perform the rites of the festival. At that time one Sudhatachari attended by his Sishya (or disciples) 500 in number happened to halt in the said Devalam, who had permitted two of his disciples, a male and a female named Abhaya ruchi and Abhaya-mati, to go without the town to take their food and to return directly, the Talari meeting them seized and brought them to Maredatta Maharaja, who was much pleased and took a sword in his own hand before Chenda mari the goddess, then the whole of the courtiers blessed the Raja and requested them to be sacrificed soon, meantime they both said "You being a Raja-Chandra or cold like the moon, ought to support all people as your children" The Raja was much surprised to see the boldness of the young men, laid down his sword and enquired of them, "What is the reason that you assumed the Bramhacharce Vrittam in this youthful state," they answered, "Our circumstances ought not to be explained to such a cruel person as you are, bat only to virtuous people, therefore mind your business" The Raja becoming fearful, prostrated at their feet, and earnestly entreated them to explain their circumstances at full length, saying that they will no doubt obtain Kailash on hearing their circumstances they began as follows—

"While Ashoka Maha Raja was ruling at Vijayapuram, he had a son named Kasodhar by his consort Caudranati, whom after he had attained the age of sixteen years he got married to a Princess named Amurtapatti, who bore him a son named Yasomat-teyen. On a certain evening, while Asola Maha Raja was sitting with his wife on the top of his palace, a thick cloud gathered in the sky, and in a moment afterwards disappeared. Then Asola Maha Raja considering that life was uncertain, left his family, installed his son Yasodharen, and went himself to the woods to perform Tapas (or penance).

Afterwards while his son Yasodhar Maha Raja was ruling over the Rajyam on a certain day as he was in bed with his consort Amurtapatti in the palace about 4 o'clock in the morning a Mahaut (or elephant driver) named Ashtabhangha began to sing very charmingly. Amurtapatti hearing this beautiful song, became enamoured of him, and immediately sent one of her female slaves, named Gunaati to bring him to her—she went there, and finding that it was a nasty elephant driver was singing, she came and acquainted her mistress of it, who then said “ Whomever a woman has fixed her affections on, he is the husband, therefore go and bring him to me immediately,” the slave accordingly went and brought and introduced him.

After the expiration of some days Yasodhar Maha Raja finding that his wife had not that affection and regard for him that she had before, began to watch her, and on a certain day the Raja found his consort with the said Ashtabhangha but considering that it was not proper to kill such a sinful woman with the Val (or sword) that he held in his hand, which was only to be drawn against renowned Rajas like himself, went away to his palace, next morning, he went to his mother Chendramati and told her that he last night dreamt that the brightness of the moon had quitted her, and had conjoined itself with the darkness of Rahu, Chendramati answered “ As the dream is a very bad one, you must sacrifice several fowls and sheep to the goddess Chendamari” Yasodhar Maha Raja shut his ears with both his hands at hearing such sinful words Chendramati said “ The person that refuses to obey his mother's orders is not honest” Saying this she ordered him to make a fowl with flour, and sacrifice it to the goddess Chendamari, he accordingly made a fowl with flour, and painting it like a real fowl, a Demon that lived in the neighbourhood, entered its body, and in the month of Alpissie on Ashtami (or the eighth, the first quarter of the moon on Tuesday in order to perform according to his mother's directions, the Raja having taken bis eword and no sooner cut off the head of the fowl before Chendamari, but the Demon that was inside crying out like a fowl fell down and died, the Raja then being very uneasy at hearing the voice of the fowl, swooned away, and considered that he must be absolved from this sin by any means, by performing Tapas (or penance) in the woods

This circumstance coming to the knowledge of Amritarati she came to the Raja and said, " As you are a chief among Kshetrias, I beg you will forgive my fault, instal your son Yasomatti, and be pleased to dine with us in his house, after which you may proceed to the woods to perform Tapas," having thus satisfied him she called him to her house, mixed some poison in the milk, served it up to her husband and mother in law, who after drinking it, both died, and she gave a loose to her amorous pleasures with the said Ashlabhang

The Raja having died with the sin of having killed a fowl of meal, attached to him, was reborn as a pariar at Vindhyanagar and his mother as a bitch in the Karad Desam and after their death, having passed their souls into different births as porcupine, sheep, snake, crocodile, and having died often, they were at last born as fowls at the house of a pariar at Vijenipatnam, who some time afterwards presented the fowls to the Raja who then delivered them to the care of Chendakarma

While it was so on a certain day, the Raja and his Queen, went to the woods on an hunting excursion seeing Muniswar there the Raja requested him to tell him what had passed and what was to happen, meantime the said fowls having prostrated to the Muniswar stood before him with their wings closed, then Yasomati took a sword called Sapta Bhadi and cut off the fowl's heads, on which they immediately entered the womb of a certain Queen after which a boy named Abhaya Ruchi and a girl named Abhaya Matti, were born In an infancy we went to Sudhalachari and learning all his particular circumstances, we obtained the rules of a Bramhachari and came with Sudhalachari accompanied by his five hundred disciples to your Raja Mahapuri Patnam Today Sudhatachari having ordered us to go to town to take our victuals, and return immediately, and accordingly when we were on our way, your Taliaree came, seized upon, and brought us to your majesty, as we killed a fowl made of flour, we have been born in so many different shapes and have undergone all this trouble Maridatta Maharaja, hearing this circumstance, was seized with fear and postponed the sacrifice, meantime Chendamari having appeared in her original form prostrated herself to them and ordered her disciples not to kill any fowls or other animals hereafter, but to offer the five kinds of food, from that time the Jainas do not kill any animals the particulars of this are stated in the Kyfial of Raja Manor Guddi.

10th.—I visited the chief priest of Santac Achari, expending four Rupees on fruit, &c., to introduce myself, and requested him to give me a copy of the copper inscriptions he had in his Mattam, but some of the Kayesthalu (or managers) of the Mattam directly decried that there were no inscriptions on copper plates, being afraid of losing their original documents which they had saved through many years from the destruction of different wars I encouraged them much assuring them that I would take no original but only wanted a copy, they answered if I assured them that only a copy was to be taken, and that I would give them a recommendation to my master regarding their discontinued Jagir, and obtain their restoration of any of the discontinued villages, that he would get me a particular account of the Cholen, Cleran and Pandian together with that of the Rajahs of Byanagur as he was the Guru of all Rajas. I accordingly gave them a recom-mendatory letter, then confiding in my assertions that I had only come to copy inscriptions, and collect historical information he was much pleased, and promised to get me a particular account of the Rajas that had ruled from the commencement of the Kali-yugam, he took me into his Agraram and shewed me about 125 copper Sasanams each contained in five or six plates he gave me a copy of two, presented me with a piece of cloth worth five

Rupees, and gave me leave, promising to get me a particular account of the Chola Rajas together with several coins if I recommended him personally to my master at Madras, and got any assistance to recover their discontinued villages

11th — I went this day to the Mattham of the Lingam Katti people, visited the Sanyasi thereof and requested him to give me a particular account of Mattham, sect and the different titles derived from the several Rajahs, accordingly he gave me two books, viz

1st Bharani which contains an account of Utu Kuten, a Vidwan (or learned man), who became a convert to the Lingam Katti sect, and composed different Slokams or hymns to Virabhadra

2nd Sthala Puranam of the Mattham of the Lingam Katti sect, in which a detailed account of their sect is given, how they acquired different titles when and by whom this Mattham had been established, how many disciples of this Mattham and what Rajas had composed Grunthums

After I had copied these books, I returned the original to the Sanyasi, who then told me that he was the chief or high priest of all the Lingam Katti and Kurambers, &c, that are in the country from Ramnad to Benares, he was able to get for me a particular account of the forty eight Chola Rajas and sixty four Pandia Rajas and Kurambers, with their dates, together with the Mateya, Kurma, Vardha and other gold coins for 2 or 3,000 years back, upon which I desired him to get me the aforesaid accounts, &c, he promised that he would prepare the greatest part of them very soon, and send them to Madras, by his Kayestha (or head manager) after making this promise, he told me, that he maintained himself by an annual contribution levied on his followers from several years after the Hon'ble Company have sequestered the country, many of them are still obedient, and pay the allowance, but some are refractory, and dechno giving the ^{their} allowance, and at times, if he attempts to punish them for ^{to} their religion, they threaten that they will come to the Judge of the Zillah, who will in that case make them stand equal without regarding the priest, and enquiring the matter for fear of takes no notice of the refractory conduct of his disciples. he therefore wishes to have some document from the Hon'ble Company authorizing him to receive the annual allowance from his disciples. As the Kurambers that ruled in Tondir Mandalam and other places were all his disciples, he promised to procure me a particular account of them with dates within a month, together with some gold coins.

12th — From thence I went to the village of Chola Maulega, three miles west, where

Karical Solen,
Manu Alenda Solen,
Manuneta Solen,
Alaparamda Solen,
Kaveri Karaonda Solen,

Klottunga Solen,
Jembagi Solen,
Varya Vadanga Solen

having built a large fort, containing Deralams, peaces, &c., populated the town and governed there for several years, but the forts, &c., are now entirely destroyed and there is only a Konam (or corner) of the wall of the palace of the Chola Raja, the account of which is stated at full length in the Kyfyat.

13th — I went to Teratanguli four miles further west, formerly in the Government of Kaveri Karakonda Solen, the Caveri river being left to run at its pleasure was encroaching and destroying several Gramams, the Raja resolved to construct embankments on both sides the river, to restrain its inundations, and proceeded to the westward, as far as Sargagiri Parwall and began to build embankments extending as far as the sea, when he had completed the embankments as far as Terutangali a great Bila dwaram or hollow and cavity of the extent of half a mile appeared into which the water plunging disappeared, he tried very much to lead off this water, but could not, he then went to some ancient people who dwelt there, and prostrated himself before them, and requested them to explain the remedy, they replied "In the village of Catur, a Rishi named Harunda Maha Rishi performs Tapas under a Kota tree, if you go there and consult him, he will tell you how to overcome this difficulty" he accordingly went thither and visited the Rishi and prostrated to him and acquainted him of all the particulars, the Rishi answered "Either a king like you, or

Rupees, and gave me leave, promising to get me a particular account of the Chola Rajas together with several coins if I recommended him personally to my master at Madras, and got any assistance to recover their discontinued villages.

11th—I went this day to the Matham of the Lingam Kattu people, visited the Sanyasi thereof and requested him to give me a particular account of Matham, sect and the different titles derived from the several Rajahs, accordingly he gave me two books, viz.

1st Bharam which contains an account of Utn Kutten, a Vidwan (or learned man), who became a convert to the Lingam Kattu sect, and composed different Slokams or hymns to Vishabhadra.

2nd Sthala Puranam of the Matham of the Lingam Kattu sect, in which a detailed account of their sect is given, how they acquired different titles when and by whom this Matham had been established, how many disciples of this Matham had what Rajahs had composed Gumthums.

After I had copied these books, I returned the original to the Sanyasi, who then told me that he was the chief or high priest of all the Lingam Kattu and Kurambers, &c., that are in the country from Ramnad to Benares, he was able to get for me a particular account of the forty eight Chola Rajas and sixty four Pandia Rajas and Kurambers, with their dates, together with the Matsya, Kurma, Varaha and other gold coins for 2 or 3,000 years back, upon which I desired him to get me the aforesaid accounts, &c., he promised that he would prepare the greatest part of them very soon, and send them to Madras, by his Kayestha (or head manager) after making this promise, he told me, that he maintained himself by an annual contribution levied on his followers from several years after the Hon'ble Company have sequestered the country, many of them are still obedient, and pay the allowance, but some are refractory, and decline giving the customary allowances, and at times, if he attempts to punish them according to their religion, they threaten that they will complain against him to the Judge of the Zillah, who will in that case send for both, and make them stand equal without regarding the quality of the priest, and enquiring the matter for fear of this dishonour, he a Rishi like me should jump into that hollow, and on being buried in it Caters will flow on forward," accordingly taking leave of the Rishi he came by the Billadwar, and prepared to jump in. Meanwhile the Queen coming to the knowledge of this, immediately went to the Rishi and prostrated to him, who blessed her with Dirgha Sumangala Bhava or may you live as a family woman until your death. She prayed to the Rishi, and said, "May your blessing not be in vain, but my consort is now ready to jump into the Billadwaram, (abyss) if he does so, your blessing will be fruitless. The Rishi then immediately went to the Billadwaram, and no sooner throw himself into it than he was swallowed up, and a small Lingam rose there of itself, upon which the Raja was enabled to complete the embankments founded, several villages, &c, and roled there, the detailed account whereof is mentioned in the Kyfiyat.

Waited at Kumbhakonam to get the account of Nemi Isvar Tirthankar of the Jainas and to procure coins, &c, and on the 16th I wrote a letter to my master and despatched it to Madras, I also wrote a letter to Lieutenant Sim to Karacal.

I left Kumbhakonam and went to Tri Bhuvanam and Madhyarjunam wrote the particolar accounts of those places together with the copies of eight inscriptions on stone. I then wrote a letter to Lieutenant Sim to Pondicherry and on the 19th at noon I received a letter from Lieutenant Sim enclosing one from my master, ordering me to come directly to Madras after receiving ten pagodas from Mr Thackeray on his account.

20th—Leaving Teruvadura, I proceeded to Mayavaram to the Collector, who already proceeded to Nagapatnam after having left the said ten pagodas with his head Serishtadar, with directions to give them to me, as soon as I went to the Cutcherry, the Serishtadar delivered the ten pagodas, after taking a receipt from me in the name of St John Thackeray, Esq.

21st—I arrived at Nagapatnam, and shewed all the books, &c, to Mr Thackeray which I had procured in his district according to his desire, I afterwards went to the Deialam visited the Sankulu and asked them to give me the Bouddah image for sixteen pagodas, but they gave me a direct answer saying "That they will never sell the image not even for thousands," when in the interim of acquainting the Collector with this circumstance, and of waiting for orders from my master to purchase the image, I requested the head Serishtadar to give strict orders to the Stanikulu not to melt or sell it without the Collector's permission.

May 1st and 2nd 1817.—I halted at Nagapatnam to collect coins at Nagar and Terumalraypatnam and other places.

3rd.—I wrote a letter to Lieutenant Sim to Pondicherry and also to my master at Madras, went to the Collector took leave from him, and leaving Nagapatnam with his best compliments to my master I arrived at Tranquebar.

4th.—I waited on Mr. Camœur and took leave of him, I purchased some coins in the bazaar.

5th.—Leaving Tranquebar, I proceeded and arrived at Pondicherry by the way of Chitambaram and collected some accounts and coins in the bazaar there.

7th.—I waited on Lieutenant Sim and shewed him all the accounts I had collected. On the 7th he gave me seventeen pagodas which settled the balance of the account for fifty star pagodas; he gave me orders to return to Madras, meantime I received a letter from C. V. Lechmyah directing me to purchase the Boudha gilt image and return soon to Madras. I then considered with myself and reflecting that if I go to Madras without the image, I may incur the displeasure of my master, I determined without any consideration of the heat or other inconvenience to return to Nagapatnam first. I communicated my intentions to Mr. Sim, and that I was ready to go to Nagapatnam to get the image, as I have taken much trouble to procure it, whereupon he immediately gave me a letter to Mr. Thackeray, and I went home.

10th to 18th.—I left Pondicherry and arrived at Nagapatnam, on the 18th, I waited on the Collector and delivered Mr. Sim's letter, and acquainted him of the circumstances of the Boudha image. The Collector told me that if I could get the consent of the Stanikulu and brought the image to him, he would endeavour to get it for me, on which I went directly to the Devalam, visited the Stanikulu and urged them much, before this they had weighed the image and found it weighed 187 seers, they had consulted together and agreed that the image should not be given to any gentleman under 187 star pagodas being, at the rate of one pagoda per seer, as it was very curious. This I heard with great uneasiness and was considering with myself how to procure it, trusting in God I went in the evening to some of the Stanikulu's relations and told them I would give them a reward of three or four pagodas if they came before the Collector and declared that they were heirs of that Devalam and would agree to sell the image according to the bazaar price, having settled thus I took those people to the Collector's house Mr Thackeray sent for the Stanikulu and asked "Will you dispose of the image at a fixed price," they said "yes," on which the Collector told me, if I came in the morning, he would give me the image next morning the other Stanikulu hearing of this, about forty or fifty of them in number came to the Cutcherry, to acquaint the Collector, that they had not agreed to sell the image meantime I went and paid my respects to the Collector who sent for his head Seristadar, Venkat Rao, and settled the price of the image at twenty five ster pagodas, and took an agreement from me for that sum and delivered the image into my care. I immediately employed four coolies to carry it to my house, I also wrote to my master enclosed in Mr Sim's letter and despatched it to Pondicherry.

19th to 23rd —On the 19th I left Nagapatnam and arrived at Pondicherry on the 23rd, and waited on Lieutenant Sim shewing him the image, and took his leave to go to Madras.

24th and 25th —Thence I arrived at Alampara and visited the old fishwoman, who had promised to get Roman gold coins, although she had tried every morning and evening she had not been successful, yet however she hopes to get some very soon, and promises to bring them to me to Madras. I then employed some fishermen and tried till one o'clock upon that height and procured one Roman copper coin, and some others, I desired the woman to endeavour to find some Roman gold coins and returned to my place.

26th and 27th.—I left Alampara on the 26th and arrived at Madras on the 27th.

30th.—From the 30th May to the 2nd June, I was employed in completing my report from 24th December, 1816, to the 27th May 1817, which was finished on the 2nd June.
